MLS DATA FOR 2024

Welcome to our Annual Market Report. As we close the books on another unprecedented year, we provide an in-depth look at the San Francisco Bay Area residential real estate market and how it responded to everything that took place in 2024. In the pages ahead, you will find that sales prices rose across the board, in spite of ongoing pandemic-related concerns and a limited supply of inventory. We begin with an introduction to our brokerage and the power of our brand, highlighting significant milestones at Golden Gate Sotheby's International Realty in this past year, including over $4.4 billion in total sales volume in 2024. Diving into the data, our comprehensive market report features economic and real estate commentary presented by our partners at the Rosen Consulting Group (RCG). The report focuses primarily on detached single family homes, with added coverage of the luxury home market, and the significant condominium market in San Francisco. You will also find a selection of our brokerage's significant sales in 2024 across the SF Bay Area. All data is sourced from the local Multiple Listing Service (MLS) organizations and is thoroughly cleaned by our data experts.

San Francisco Bay Area HOUSING MARKET

A POSITIVE YEAR

The housing market moderated in 2024 after a strong first half of the year, but overall remained positive. The inventory of homes for sale increased in 2024, with the greater number of options helping to bring more buyers off of the sidelines. A renewed push for a return to the office supported demand for homes in the inner SF Bay Area, while greater stability in the technology industry and record stock market gains boosted sales in the higher price segments.

MACROECONOMIC FACTORS

The SF Bay Area economy added nearly 24,000 jobs in 2024. While payrolls increased in nearly all SF Bay Area counties last year, most of the new jobs were located in the inner SF Bay Area. Employment in the professional and business services sector, which includes many tech jobs, stabilized as large-scale layoffs eased. The unemployment rate increased slightly to 4.4% in 2024, which was still much lower than the long-term average. The relatively tight labor market and continued job gains supported annual wage growth of more than 3% in 2024. Finally, in another positive sign for the market, population growth in California accelerated in 2024 to 0.6% from 0.1% in 2023. The combination of improving local job prospects and fewer remote work options helped to stem migration out of the SF Bay Area and surrounding counties.

MORE LISTINGS BRING MORE OPPORTUNITIES FOR BUYERS

Despite higher mortgage rates constraining seller relocations, the number of active listings improved in 2024. After reaching a peak in the spring, the number of for-sale homes reached roughly 3,500 in December, an increase of 21% since 2023. Highlighting improved seller confidence in the market in 2024, active listings averaged 5,400 per month, the highest average since 2019. The increase in homes available for sale was widespread across the region. However,

San Francisco and San Mateo counties were notable exceptions, as average active listings decreased year-over-year, primarily because of strong buyer activity. The largest increases in listings were in Alameda and Solano counties, particularly in neighborhoods with access to primary job centers such as Benecia, the Tri-Valley and Vallejo.

BROAD INCREASE IN SALES

As inventory increased in 2024, so too did the number of closed sales, highlighting the deep demand pool. Despite the seasonal dip in the fourth quarter, an active spring buying season that persisted through the summer and into the fall boosted the SF Bay Area sales figure to nearly 40,000 homes in 2024, a 19% increase compared with 2023. Home sales increased in all SF Bay Area counties year-over-year. San Francisco led the region with an increase of nearly 20%. The relative affordability of homes in Sonoma County supported a 15% increase in sales amidst rising regional prices and higher mortgages rates. Meanwhile, sales increased by a smaller amount in counties where vacation homes make up a larger share of total sales, including Santa Cruz and Napa counties.

STRONG LUXURY HOME SALES

One of the defining features of the SF Bay Area housing market in 2024 was strong demand for homes in higher price segments, especially in premier neighborhoods in the Peninsula and South Bay. The number of homes sold for $3.5 million or more increased by 40% compared with 2023, while sales of homes in the $1.25 to $2.5 million price range increased by 18%. Elevated mortgage rates affected buyer affordability in the lower price segments, which resulted in a smaller increase in the number of homes sold in much of the region. Bucking this trend, sales in the less than $1.25 million price range in Sonoma County improved by nearly 15% in 2024.

Despite greater inventory, competition among buyers resulted in many homes selling at a premium. The share of homes sold for more than the asking price increased to 55% in 2024. Competition was particularly intense near prime job centers such as Alameda, San Francisco and Santa Clara counties, as more than two-thirds of homes sold for more than asking in these counties. While SF Bay Area sellers that accepted offers over asking received 10% more than the list price on average, sellers in San Francisco received nearly 18% more.

HOMES CONTINUE TO SELL QUICKLY

In addition to a large number of sales over asking, the relatively short amount of time homes spent on the market also reflected strong competition. The average days on market gradually increased during the year to slightly more than a month as of the fourth quarter. More broadly, homes were on the market for an average of 29 days in all of 2024, roughly on-par with 2023, and slightly less than what would be considered equilibrium.

MEDIAN SALE PRICE REACHES RECORD HIGH

Strong demand and elevated sales activity in the luxury segment resulted in an increase in the median sales price. While seasonal trends resulted in a slight decrease in prices during the second half of the year, the SF Bay Area median sales price was $1.32 million as of 2024. This was a 5.2% increase compared with 2023, and an annual record high for the region.

Home Sales Rise Steadily from the low point at the beginning of 2024

Source: MLS, RCG

The increase in sales in premier inner SF Bay Area neighborhoods helped boost the median price. In fact, at the county level, only Santa Clara County set an annual price record as of year-end 2024. However, the median sales price still increased in all SF Bay Area counties in 2024. Price growth was strongest in San Mateo and Santa Clara counties, and the median price climbed to more than $1.9 million in each county. Price growth was slower in markets where lower priced homes make up a larger share of sales, and thus where buyer demand is more sensitive to mortgage rates, such as Contra Costa, Solano and Sonoma counties.

LOOKING AHEAD

After decreasing during the first half 2024, mortgage rates rose through late 2024 and into early 2025, and may remain elevated this year. Additionally, given the strength of the national economy, the Federal Reserve is expected to make fewer rate cuts in 2025 to the short term interest rate. The higher borrowing costs and worsening affordability may dampen some sales activity, particularly within the lower price tiers. However, strong wage growth, stock market performance and resumption of hiring in the technology sector may offset some of this effect. Furthermore, as highlighted in 2024, the demand pool for housing in the SF Bay Area is deep and remarkably resilient. Along with more stable demographic trends, these factors provide significant tailwinds for the SF Bay Area single family market in 2025..
