From grocery shopping to campus closure, COVID-19 changes everything we know in March 2020.

Some of these blue particles are budding off from the surface, while others are already detached and floating nearby.

CORONAVIRUS PANDEMIC

AT THE BEGINNING OF 2020, FEW KNEW THE SEVERITY OF COVID-19 – HARDLY ANYONE EVEN KNEW WHAT IT WAS. BUT, WITHIN THE FIRST FEW MONTHS OF THE YEAR, COVID-19 HAD SERIOUSLY IMPACTED ALL WALKS OF LIFE: ECONOMICS, BUSINESS, SOCIAL LIVES AND, OF COURSE, EDUCATION. IN THE COMING PAGES, TAKE AN IN-DEPTH LOOK AT THE INTERNATIONAL IMPACT OF THE PANDEMIC, AS WELL AS A PERSONAL LOOK AT HOW IT CHANGED ALL OF OUR LIVES.

WHAT IS CORONAVIRUS?

COVID-19 (CO: CORONA, VI: VIRUS, D: DISEASE, 19: 2019) IS A HIGHLY INFECTIOUS DISEASE, CLASSIFIED AS A CORONAVIRUS,

WHICH IS GIVEN ITS NAME FOR ITS DISTINCT MICROSCOPIC CROWN APPEARANCE. SYMPTOMS INCLUDE DRY COUGHING, HIGH FEVER, AND – IN SOME EXTREME CASES – DIFFICULTY BREATHING.

CORONAVIRUSES ARE ZOONOTIC, MEANING THEY CAN BE TRANSMITTED BETWEEN ANIMALS AND PEOPLE.

THEY MUTATE REGULARLY, AND OFTEN DEVELOP INTO LESS DANGEROUS VERSIONS OF THEMSELVES.

STUDENT ABROAD PROGRAMS ARE CANCELED

KELLY SIDNEY

STUDIED ABROAD IN FLORENCE, ITALY

KELLY SIDNEY (STUDIO ARTS '21) WAS STUDYING ABROAD IN ITALY WHEN A STATE OF EMERGENCY WAS DECLARED. HER STUDY ABROAD PROGRAM WAS CANCELLED. ON MAR. 2, MATT FARREN (SCREENWRITING '21) INTERVIEWED SIDNEY WHILE SHE WAITED TO FLY HOME.

How did you find out that the program was canceled? I got an email. Honestly, it was somewhat vague, but in the next coming days they kind of broke down how this would all work out. We're going to be doing our classes online remotely because they sent us all home ... to our hometowns. We're going to be doing everything from across the country ... I'm in a drawing class so I'm really entertained to see how that'll happen. They actually haven't canceled a Gonzaga study abroad program in 30 years.

Did LMU have some sort of contingency plan for all the students they had to send home? The students were told to just switch their flights and if they had any charges or fees to send them to the school, so I assume the school will be reimbursing for that. I had to change my flight and there was a fee — the airline would not waive it. I think the school will help take care of it ... We actually got the news when we were on spring break, so [some students] didn't actually come back to Florence at all and they're having the school ship their stuff back to them.

Do you have any highlight memories that you're going to be taking away from the situation? I know that sometimes study abroad [gets] a little bit of a bad rap for being too emphasized on travel, but I just really think getting to go around Europe was an exceptional experience because once you're over here and you get that whole United States-to-Europe flight done, traveling around Europe is so much more accessible and affordable and most things are a two- or three-hour flight away. I got to go to Paris with my friends and we got to see all the culture there. We did Budapest. I had a trip to Germany planned, but unfortunately that one's not going to work out because it was [supposed to be] in April. I did go to Venice, I went to Sicily and I went to Rome as well, so I feel fulfilled. I, of course, wish I had that extra month and a half but it was really a great experience regardless.

STUDENTS CREATE PETITION

RAVEN YAMAMOTO
JOURNALISM '21

RAVEN YAMAMOTO (JOURNALISM '21) TAKES ACTION. AFTER A CAMPUS-WIDE EMAIL FROM TIMOTHY LAW SNYDER, PH.D., ANNOUNCING THE MOVE TO ONLINE LEARNING, YAMAMOTO DRAFTED A PETITION, ALONG WITH A FEW FRIENDS, TO DEMAND AID FROM THE SCHOOL. THE PETITION GAINED POPULARITY, THOUGH IT WAS CRITICIZED BY SOME, INCLUDING STUDENTS AND FACULTY. MATT FARREN (SCREENWRITING '21) INTERVIEWED YAMAMOTO BY TELEPHONE TO GAIN INSIGHT INTO HER PERSPECTIVE.

What was your passion and inspiration to take action? I was with a group of friends and we were all just kind of venting about it: we were all just like, "What am I supposed to do? I have housing out here. This is the only place I can live, I don't want to go home." Some of us can't really afford to make the trip home. My immediate thing was, "We need to write a letter, or we have to do something," because a lot of people were feeling the same way. It was going down on social media: everyone was freaking out and having a meltdown honestly. So, I invited a few of my friends and was like, "We should write a petition. We should make sure we're going to be taken care of at the end of this." Because, it's not going to look pretty for a lot of us. It might be easy for the University to kick us out and say, "Okay, bye, figure it out," but for us, there is so much more at risk. Not all of us are rich enough to handle an emergency like this.

What do you think would be fair? I think, at the very least, we should get our meal plans reimbursed, I think our housing that we're not using for the rest of the semester should get reimbursed. I also think we should get some sort of tuition discount or something, because online learning is not the same as what we paid for, which was: in-class, intimate classroom-sized, hands-on learning experience in your field of choice, and we're not getting that anymore. It's not the University's fault, but it's how it happened, so I think those are the bare minimums of what we should be getting back...

How has this pandemic felt personal to you? I know for me, or for a lot of people, home isn't necessarily good for them ... There are some households that aren't accepting, there are some households that are less than ideal, and college is how some people escape that — I know that's how I escape that. To have that cut short in a way, to have that stay cut short — it sucks. It's like the one good thing that I've had, that I've been holding on to for the past three years, is being taken away from me, and I don't know when I'm going to see it again. I think that's what makes the pandemic personal: it's like watching one of my homes get ripped away from me.

CAMPUS IS CLOSED.

AS CONCERNS over the COVID-19 virus shut down campus, students were sent packing and returning home for the remainder of the semester. Students living on campus had one week to move out before campus closed on March 22.

There were mixed feelings among students about having to leave campus and practice social distancing in order to prevent the spread of the virus.

“Moving out of my dorm last week left me feeling sad and disoriented. I was disappointed and frustrated because I felt like a part of my freshman experience had been robbed from me,” said Obi Ugorji, a freshman international relations major. “I felt as if I was moving out of a place that I just moved into.”

Most colleges and universities, including USC and UCLA, also closed their campuses for the rest of the spring semester. Some campuses, like Cal Poly SLO, remained open while classes moved online.

An LMU “community member” tested positive for COVID-19, according to an alert sent out by the University. The individual was reported to be self-isolating off-campus. The exposure was believed to be “very limited,” according to the same alert.

Throughout the U.S., restaurants, bars and other places where people gather were closed. Multiple counties in the Bay Area ordered residents to shelter themselves in their homes, according to the San Francisco Chronicle.

“It may not be pleasant for the average, healthy 20-something college student forced to shack back up with their parents in the middle of the semester, but it isn’t about us,” said Mykelpatrick Hayes, a sophomore screenwriting major from Pleasanton, California, one of the cities placed under a shelter-in-place order. “For the sake of those most affected by the pandemic, the elderly, the young and the immune compromised, this was definitely the right move.”

Maya Singh, a sophomore English major and Dance minor from Santa Clara, California, said at first she was upset at having to go home, but then realized that it was the best way to keep everyone safe. “I’m glad we’re on shutdown. I’d really like for people to stop dying. And it’s frustrating that that’s somehow controversial,” said Singh.

Both Hayes and Singh said they were concerned for family members who are elderly and/or immunocompromised but feel glad people are staying home to hinder the virus spreading further.

Madison LeNoir-Irwin, a freshman marketing and Spanish double major from Oakland, California, expressed frustration toward the University for the period of time allotted for move-out. “They should have or should still extend the move-out date considering people like myself, who live in Bay Area, are not allowed to leave their house unless they need essential supplies,” she said. “It’s been an additional source of stress for me and my family.”

The Westchester campus was reduced to essential services, while the Playa Vista campus and the Loyola Law School campus remained open only to faculty with access and essential staff. Students living on campus were able to submit petitions by Mar. 17 to stay for the remainder of the semester. //

AN ITALIAN PERSPECTIVE

MARIA VITTORIA CONTI FILM AND TELEVISION PRODUCTION '21

MARIA VITTORIA CONTI (FILM AND TELEVISION PRODUCTION '21), A RESIDENT OF BUSTO ARSIZIO, ITALY, WAS IN LOS ANGELES WHEN SHE HEARD THAT LARGE REGIONS OF HER HOME COUNTRY WERE BEING QUARANTINED. HER CITY, JUST NORTH OF MILAN, WAS AFFECTED HEAVILY BY THE PANDEMIC. MATT FARREN (SCREENWRITING '21) CONDUCTED A PHONE INTERVIEW WITH VITTORIA CONTI OVER SPRING BREAK, ON MAR. 13.

What is happening in Italy that hasn't been presented in the media?

I feel like some media is good and they're saying things like, "Italy is in this situation, there's intensive care, but the problem is that the hospitals are overflowing." Other media are saying that, "They're exaggerating a bit too much, it's just a flu." The problem is that—yes, it is [like] a flu—but from what my friends and my family back home that have been telling me ... our hospital has become only coronavirus. My sister has a friend that is [pregnant]. They had to move her to another hospital. Even if it's a virus that doesn't kill you, there's not enough places to treat everybody. The only way they can treat it is with lung ventilators and all of Italy there [are] 3,000. The people infected are 10,000. The youngest and the ones that are the healthiest get the treatment so they can get better immediately, but so many elders or people that suffer pre-existing conditions are not in line. That's why the deaths are increasing.

Do you have any comments about how people are treating this on a personal level? From my Italian side, I'm really happy with what's happening. Everybody's posting, "Lo resto a casa," which is like, "I'm staying home." Everybody's on that side. In the beginning people were not paying attention to this matter, still going out, partying and not thinking of the issue, but now there's a situation. Social media has become a huge way to get money for it: all the influencers are raising money for the hospitals. So on a personal level, I'm glad. Everybody's doing their own: I see some of my friends are starting to cook ... so they don't get bored.

Is there any way you would say that this huge moment feels personal to you? Incredibly personal. I'm from a city of 80,000 people and I can't believe that it's closed and quarantined. It's scary because — first of all, my doctor at home, he contracted it and now he's in intensive care. A doctor, you know? Someone that is healthy. It's not just the flu. That makes me so mad! I see so many LMU students are posting on social media like, "Other stuff kills you easier," but I'm like, "Yeah but the problem right now is this one, so stay home and avoid it!" Everyone is thinking, "It's so cheap now to travel." I mean — don't travel! I think it's because they don't know. At LMU there's like five Italians, and I'm the only one from Northern Italy, so we're the ones who are talking about it the most. I sent my GoFundMe campaign to [coworkers] and some of my other friends in the school so they're getting to know a bit more, but if you don't follow the news as much I don't think you know exactly what's going on all the way in Europe.

With Gratitude

This book exists because of the immense tenacity of this year's Tower staff. Together we started with an incredible enthusiasm to capture student life on the Bluff in its most natural way, and at the point of our final deadline in March we found ourselves displaced around the globe and unable to return to campus. We rallied and collaborated remotely to finish producing The Tower 2020, and I am incredibly proud of what we've accomplished and the important and unprecedented year we've captured. I am beyond grateful for each and every LMU community member that supported the making of this book. Thank you to my fellow graduates in the Class of 2020—together we've grown and learned enough to offer immense value to the world we live in. And a personal note of gratitude to my mentor, Dr. David Choi, for your patience in teaching me how to take on every obstacle I meet with courage.

MATTHEW TAMASHIRO
TOWER BUSINESS DIRECTOR

What I am most grateful for here at LMU are the incredible teachers I've had over the past two years. Not only are they all excellent teachers, but also excellent people. They are encouraging and enthusiastic and really helped me spark the interest I have for animation. The past two years have been extremely memorable for me and I am excited for two more.

KATIE MATTOCKS
TOWER DESIGN DIRECTOR

I would like to extend my gratitude towards the faculty and staff of the Studio Arts program at LMU, especially Brenno Kenji and Jane Brucker. As my professors, they have pushed me to further explore my creativity, and have shown such genuine concern to all students. With the semester cut short and as we react to the world around us, we can face what comes without fear and with the optimism to create.

MATT FARREN
TOWER EDITORIAL DIRECTOR

This was not the way I imagined this semester ending – though, if anyone did expect this, I'd love to shake their hand. Or – at least – elbow bump. With all of these changes occurring, I am beyond grateful to the faculty who have adjusted their courses; I know it's hard enough to deal with even taking a sick day, so moving from seeing each other in person to communicating across time zones must be absolutely wild, and I thank you for taking our needs into account.

IVANNA ALCANTARA
TOWER PHOTO DIRECTOR

Thank you for becoming my home and for introducing me to the most beautiful, kind, caring, loving, compassionate people. Many of these people are my best friends and now family. You know who you are and what you mean to me. I love you. All I just wanted to take this opportunity to say thank you. Thank you for everything you've done for me. Thank you for loving me and accepting me unconditionally and providing me with undivided love and attention. You've been there for me through everything.

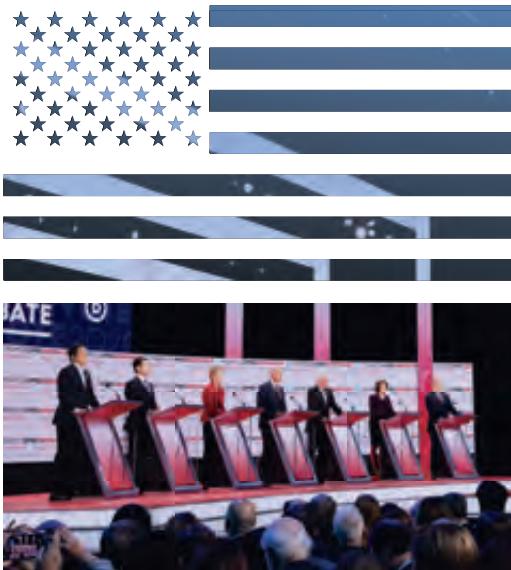

DEBATE

THE DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATES FOR THE 2020 ELECTION LINE THE STAGE IN GERSTEN PAVILION, READY FOR THE DEMOCRATIC NATIONAL CONVENTION'S SIXTH PRESIDENTIAL DEBATE.

BY LATE DECEMBER, the LMU campus is usually a place of calm and quiet. When the grueling final weeks of the semester come to a close, a mass exodus ensues, with many students returning home to be with loved ones during the holiday season. Traditionally, the Bluff takes a break. However, 2019 was entirely different.

On Dec. 19, the sixth Democratic presidential debate was held at LMU's very own Gersten Pavilion. The candidates in attendance were Joe Biden, Pete Buttigieg, Amy Klobuchar, Bernie Sanders, Tom Steyer, Elizabeth Warren and Andrew Yang. Among the topics debated were high tuition rates at universities across the country, immigration and the still-fresh impeachment of President Donald Trump.

Campus swiftly transformed from a hub of student activity into the host of a massive political event. On the morning of the debate, more than 600 credentialed media gathered at Otis College of Art and Design, according to the Los Angeles Loyolan. After check-in, they were shuttled to Gersten Pavilion, going through multiple security checks. Hundreds of security personnel—including the Los Angeles Police Department, the Secret Service and private security—were also present on campus. Just outside of campus, on Lincoln Boulevard, a designated free speech zone drew hundreds of protestors, arriving in full force ready to make their voices heard. Over 500 volunteers signed up to work at the debate. They served as stand-ins for candidates and moderators during rehearsals, provided support in media areas and assisted guests in the debate hall, among other jobs. Students were also interviewed by PBS as first-time voters lending their perspective, while LMU faculty were present in media areas, serving as experts in interviews. Zachary Birdsall (Music '21) opened the debate by singing the National Anthem, followed by LMU's very own Consort Singers performing "America the Beautiful."

However, despite the feeling of community on this momentous day, and the widespread enthusiasm and support across campus, the debate was at risk of not taking place at all. An ongoing wage-based labor dispute between UNITE HERE Local 11, a union representing food service employees at LMU, and the University's food service provider, Sodexo, caused uncertainty about the fate of the event. All seven debate candidates stated that they would not cross a picket line to attend the debate if the dispute was not resolved. An agreement was reached, allowing for the debate to proceed, and establishing a wage increase for workers who contribute greatly to LMU's community. LMU President Timothy Law Snyder, Ph.D., wrote an op-ed in The Hill discussing the controversy leading up to the debate. He wrote, "[Sodexo and union leaders] exhibited the virtues LMU prizes but our society too often lacks — listening patiently, honoring differences, and working together to find common ground."

On the evening of Dec. 19, LMU was at the center of national attention. LMU's popularity as a search term skyrocketed to its highest point in 2019. LMU was name-dropped in The New York Times and The Washington Post — the Lion logo even appeared on Saturday Night Live. The school on the Bluff became a focal point for the nation, despite being a relatively small private school rooted in Jesuit and Marymount tradition. Through volunteering and attending, students, faculty and staff alike banded together and made a massive event feel personal to the school. The potential future president of the United States of America may have stepped foot on campus; they perhaps strode by a spot where students study every day. It was a day of great political importance, and the whole University got to be a part of it. LMU has left our handprint on history. //

OUTSIDE OF THE LAIR, FOOD SERVICE WORKERS PROTEST SODEXO'S LOW WAGES. AN AGREEMENT BETWEEN THE UNITE HERE LOCAL 11 UNION AND SODEXO WAS REACHED TWO DAYS BEFORE THE DEBATE.

STUDENTS TAKE THE PODIUM

LMU STUDENTS STAND IN AT THE CANDIDATE PODIUMS, PARTICIPATING IN A MOCK DEBATE FOR REHEARSAL PURPOSES.

DESPITE BEING AN important moment on a national level, the LMU-hosted Democratic debate felt personal to the student volunteers involved with the event. The nationally televised broadcast was responsible for plenty of on-campus excitement, and inspired many to take roles they'd likely never have imagined themselves working while in school.

Student journalists joined over 600 members of the press from a variety of news organizations, getting to speak with candidates such as Andrew Yang and Amy Klobuchar, in addition to notable members of the media such as Chris Cuomo and Tomi Lahren. Over 500 volunteers arrived on the days leading up to the debate, working in a variety of ways, which included checking in members of the press, providing assistance inside the debate hall and event set up.

Megan Leberknight (Psychology '21) acted as the stand-in for Elizabeth Warren during the debate rehearsal. Leberknight participated in a faux debate with the other stand-ins, answering questions similar to the ones asked of the candidates during the debate. At the end of the rehearsal, she left a note for Warren on the notepad Warren would actually use during the course of the night. "Senator Warren, Thank you for persisting," Leberknight wrote. Later on when the actual candidates were brought in for a walk-through of the stage, Warren pulled Leberknight from the crowd to take a photo, moved by her note.

This interaction between a young Psychology major and a prominent presidential candidate shows how meaningful the debate was on a personal level — not to mention a national level. |||

on the road to the ELECTION

CATE DONOHUE (JOURNALISM '21) SAT DOWN WITH LMU FIRST LADY AND FORMER CNN ANCHOR CAROL COSTELLO TO DISCUSS THE POTENTIAL IMPACT OF THE 2020 ELECTION CYCLE.

WHAT IS SIGNIFICANT ABOUT THIS PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION IN PARTICULAR?

Hatred. I think people forget sometimes that hatred is a motivating factor and we're seeing that in the Democratic primaries that have taken place; big turnout, at least in most states, and it's really not fueled by any love of one candidate. It's fueled by the hatred of one. It's all about hatred, at least on the Democratic side and you could argue from the right, too, because it seems that Trump's Republican party is all about making fun of liberals — or, "own the libs."

WHAT ROLE DOES THE YOUTH VOTE PLAY IN ELECTIONS?

[In] every election I've covered — and I've covered every election since Ronald Reagan — everybody has courted the youth vote. But, very few times has courting the youth vote totally paid off. You could argue it kind of did when Obama was elected, but they didn't turn out in droves. It was higher than normal, but it wasn't anything where you'd say, "Wow." All these young people go to the rallies for Bernie Sanders because it's exciting and they really do believe it's a revolution, but they don't take the next step, and that's just youth, I think. You don't really think: A: your vote matters that much, or B: that anyone's particularly listening to you, or you just don't have time or you don't realize the importance of it, because it doesn't directly affect your life if you're young. That's all I can figure as to why young people don't vote.

HOW DOES THIS ELECTION CYCLE DIFFER FROM PAST ELECTIONS?

It differs as far as hatred as a driving force, electability as a driving force and women are coming out in droves this time. In Michigan, women won it for Joe Biden in the primary — white suburban women. This time women have realized how much their vote matters and they are going to the polls and they're proving it. In the midterm elections all those women were elected largely on a female vote, so I think that's a big difference. This really is the year of the women. I know there are no women candidates left running for president, but as far as power and who decides who gets into office, I think women will be the deciding factor. That's different to me.

WHAT DID WE NOT DISCUSS THAT YOU THINK IS IMPORTANT TO SAY ABOUT ELECTIONS?

The only thing I would leave you with [is this]: it makes me sad that your generation is experiencing this weird, hateful, spiteful, vicious election. It's just not normal. Politics has always been ugly, but not like this. I'm hoping that this is the climactic moment and we return to somewhere near a newer, better normal because this is not normal. //

which candidate do you support?

BERNIE SANDERS

"I'm supporting Bernie Sanders because it's time for a political revolution. For far too long, special interests and the ruling elite have had immense power over the working class. Bernie represents a movement to give the power back to the people, which includes guaranteeing healthcare for all, free college for all, dismantling the prison and military industrial complexes and combating climate change in earnest to ensure a sustainable environment for us and future generations." | Andy Cepollina Animation '22

JOE BIDEN

I support Joe Biden in both the 2020 Democratic primary and 2020 general election. Joe Biden is the most qualified candidate in the Democratic field. He has legislative experience, foreign policy experience and executive experience. Joe Biden is the only one who can unite this divided country. Bipartisanship is the only way we can heal from the political polarity we are seeing today, and Joe Biden has a long record of reaching across the aisle. I want to see results and Joe can provide them." | Ryan Kirzner Political Science '23

INTERVIEWED BY M. FARREN

Why do you think school spirit is important? School spirit is definitely important not just for our athletic teams, but just in general for the students to feel more of a connection to the school and everything that they stand for.

What are some of the best ways students can show school spirit?

Obviously showing up to the games is important. I know it can be tough if people are busy, but I think just showing up, bringing your friends, bringing your organizations to the games is huge.

What specific moments stand out to you when you think of school spirit? With the Cage, we threw a baseball tailgate last year [2018-19]. It was really successful: it brought in the biggest baseball attendance in LMU history, and that moment—just having everyone show up and pack the stands, being part of the group that made that happen—was incredible.

FALLAPALOOZA 2019 continued to establish the annual event as one of the most popular, exciting and entertaining evenings that takes place at LMU. This year's headliner, T-Pain (fresh off his win on the popular televised musical competition, "The Masked Singer"), brought a sampling of some of his biggest hits. Performing as his openers, Curbside and YoYo Nosa (the dual winners of the Singer-Songwriter Showdown) wowed the crowd with energy, rhythm and background dancers. Aside from the onstage entertainment, attendees had multiple other diverting entertainment options, including a collection of student artists displaying their work and a fully operational beer garden run by The Loft.

“The beauty of creation... The profoundness of human interaction, every human interaction has a sanctity and every human person has a divinity. When you're aware of that, then your life becomes a prayer. That a science class, as you're thinking about how the world works, becomes a prayer. Mathematics, which is like, making the world rational, becomes a prayer. Everything becomes a connection to the divine, to God ... And we have a sense that we're on the right track.”

Fr. ALLAN DECK, S.J.
INTERVIEWED BY M. FARREN

What is your passion for Mass of the Holy Spirit? The Holy Spirit in Christianity and the Catholic tradition is the spirit of God present in history, present in the moment, present in what we're doing. In other words, not approaching God simply as a concept or a philosophical way of thinking about transcendence and things like that, but God has been active, has been engaged, been involved in what's going on.

Is there something you would say to a student who is questioning participating in an event like this, whether it's due to religious differences, or nervousness to venture out of their comfort zone?

I think we need to really work with the impression that people may have, and even students at LMU may have, because they haven't necessarily been exposed to how the church is really thinking today. They have been exposed to how the church was thinking when they were children, or they may be exposed to how their parents thought about their faith, but what does the faith today as it's lit by those who profess it openly, what is it about, and what are its goals and its vision of things? Here at LMU we are trying to communicate that.

Could you condense the message and passion behind the Mass of the Holy Spirit? That you are being invited, that those who participate in the Mass of the Holy Spirit, all of us, are being invited to take a fresh and a new look at what you are about, and to discover the potential of development in it, together with the energy and power that grace gives to us to develop and to have a fuller life. Because, we're being invited to a fuller life. That's really what it's all about—it's not about affirming some doctrine or something, it's about affirming life, and that we really think that faith adds a whole dimension to our life that makes it much more meaningful and noble and worth living. //

MASS of the Holy Spirit

LMU'S SACRED HEART CHAPEL opened its doors to students, faculty and the wider L.A. public on Sep. 10 for the Mass of the Holy Spirit. The annual event provides an opportunity for those in attendance to reflect on the ways in which they have been blessed, to rejoice for the future laid ahead and to be present in the gifts with which we have all been given. With choral music echoing around the tall arches of the chapel, it was easy for participants to get lost in the beauty of the service. The Mass of the Holy Spirit was the perfect way to begin the start of a new school year with celebration.

OLD + NEW

ESTABLISHED IN 1911, LMU HAS AN INCREDIBLY STORIED PAST — THE BLUFF AND ITS TRADITIONS HAVE CERTAINLY ADAPTED AND EVOLVED WITH THE TIMES, BUT SOME THINGS NEVER CHANGE.

FOLEY POND

Being thrown into Foley Pond on your birthday is an LMU tradition that many alumni recall fondly. Though its exact origins are unknown, its history extends as far back as 1975, with students from the '80s, '90s and 2000s documenting their continued participation and the tradition's enduring legacy as an LMU rite of passage. Evidently, people are still being thrown into the fountain today.

ON-CAMPUS ESCAPES

In The Tower's 1984 yearbook, under the headline "LMU's Places to Escape," documented activities include listening to jazz and reggae music at "the Nest," watching the performances of stand-up comics at "the Loft" and playing games at the Recreation Center. Today, The Loft, while remaining a space for students to unwind, refers to LMU's on-campus bar, erected in 2007. Meanwhile, open mic nights, stand-up comedy shows and acoustic concerts are often hosted in the Living Room, courtesy of Mane Entertainment. Furthermore, the Burns Recreation Center's Activity Studio offers students up to 50 classes each week in dance, cycling, yoga and more.

HUESMAN & SULLIVAN

Two of LMU's oldest residence halls, Huesman and Sullivan, were constructed in 1947, and were home to undergraduate students for over seven decades. Though the buildings were demolished in 2019 to make room for more modern dormitories, their unique histories have not been forgotten. Most notably, Huesman Chapel preceded the construction of Sacred Heart Chapel (completed in 1954) and was continuously attended by residents until Huesman was razed. Luckily, its stained glass was preserved and now exists as a part of Sacred Heart Chapel.

When LMU's newspaper, the Los Angeles Loyolan, launched almost 100 years ago, three sections which are beloved by students today—The Bluff, Social Justice and Cartoons—did not exist. These, in addition to video and multimedia content, are now available on the publication's website, reflecting how both students' interests and digital consumption have expanded over time.

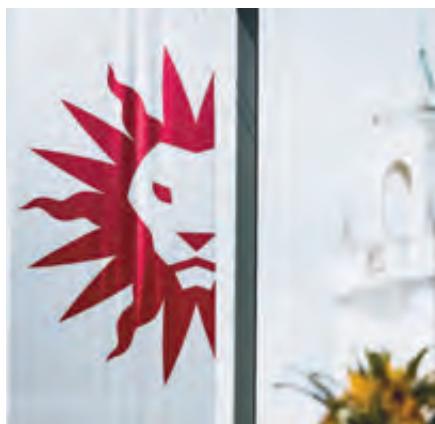

The appearance of Ronald Reagan on campus in 1990 spread a seemingly unprecedented wave of political consciousness in LMU students. “At this, groups of every political belief rallied for their particular cause,” The 1990 Tower wrote. Three decades later, LMU hosted the Democratic National Debate, heard from Rep. Maxine Waters at the annual Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Interfaith Celebration and Prayer Breakfast and heard from Monica Lewinsky as part of the campus’ annual First Amendment Week.

SPORTS Throughout LMU’s athletic history, the various sports offerings remained relatively consistent with basketball, baseball, soccer, volleyball and tennis. But in 2020, eSports became a reality at LMU with the opening of the LMU Gaming Center in Burns Recreation Center.

UNIVERSITY VISUAL IDENTITY

In 2000, LMU’s athletic department re-designed their logo “to standardize the look coming out of the athletic department” and portray “a lion that really reflected the pride and strength of LMU.” This logo, which reigned for over a decade, was replaced in December 2018 with what the University has called “a new visual identity, a comprehensive system that reflects LMU’s tradition of academic excellence and our ambitions for a bright and creative future.” The once-leaping lion of 2000 is now showcased in a more abstract fashion.

DEL REY PLAYERS

One of LMU's oldest organizations is the Del Rey Players, a student-run theatre company. For almost a century, members of the Del Rey Players have taken advantage of the opportunity to control every aspect of production, including directing, acting, set design and more. At the group's inception, however, the Del Rey Players performed solely through radio broadcasts.

STUDENT ORGANIZATIONS

In the 1976 edition of The Tower, 59 student organizations were showcased. Now, 44 years later, over 300 registered organizations can be found on LMU's website. One of the most significant differences between organizations of the past and present, besides the evident increase in options, can be observed in a more culturally diversified Greek Life. Whereas culturally based sororities and fraternities were non-existent at LMU in 1976, there are now seven: Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, Inc.; Kappa Alpha Psi Fraternity, Inc.; Sigma Lambda Beta International Fraternity, Inc.; Sigma Lambda Gamma National Sorority, Inc.; Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, Inc.; Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity, Inc. and Sigma Gamma Rho Sorority, Inc. These constitute the campus' United Greek Council. In the spring semester of 2020, the first four of these organizations were active.

Distribution Center

HOW A PACKAGE GETS TO YOU

MAIL CALL! In 2019, the Distribution Center introduced a new, simplified system to get packages to students. Student Distribution Center worker Maggie Ray (International Relations '20) described how the new system has made the process easier on students, stating, "Students used to have to go to the mailroom and get their slips and then come all the way down here. Now, they just get an email and you need to bring your one card here and then you're all set to go." The new and improved system has saved countless hours for both the workers and the larger LMU community. HERE'S HOW IT WORKS:

"The new systems help us keep better track of where packages need to go, which packages have been received and which packages still need to be received. It helps us manage and scan all the packages that come in."

BILL STONECYPHER

INTERVIEWED BY C. DONOHUE

How would you describe Facilities Management as a whole? Facilities Management is a tremendous organization. I mean, they're focused on supporting the academic mission here at LMU. The men and women of Facilities Management every day go above and beyond to make sure this community has what it needs and then some.

What are some of your day-to-day responsibilities? One of my responsibilities is to keep the men and women safe who work in this program and in this department and in this community. Community safety, staff safety, operational safety—these are things that are always on my mind. To me, that's kind of the thing I get up for in the morning—to keep fantastic people safe.

What are some of the ways you impact students' lives without them even knowing? Well, I think that one thing we try to do is convenience. I don't care if a college has 50,000 undergraduates or 5,000 undergraduates, I have never seen a college campus with more recycling bins than LMU and we're very proud of that.

AUGIE DOMINGUEZ
INTERVIEWED BY C. DONOHUE

What are some of your day-to-day responsibilities? It's 99% metal work, repairs. A lot of times things are just brought to me. People walk to my shop carrying something that's broken and I'll repair it, whether it be just welding it back together or rebuilding it into something better. I kind of have the green light on whatever I think needs to be done, which is kind of nice.

What are some of your bigger, long-term projects? I've just completed a custom trailer for our department to carry a new paint striping machine that we bought because we are going to, in-house, re-stripe the entire campus. We've always farmed that out to a contractor, but upper management decided to invest in the equipment and do it in-house, so they bought a really nice, expensive machine and asked me to build a custom trailer for it to easily transport it around campus, so I just finished that a little while ago. It came out really nice.

What are some of the ways you impact students' lives without them even knowing? My supporting of recycling is my way of supporting students. I keep recycling moving and keep them functioning because if recycling's not there to grab all that stuff, it builds up in the hallways of the dorms and then you have trip hazards and someone could actually get hurt.

What's the best part of what you do? For me, I love working with metal. I love to build things. I don't really like to do the same thing every day. I get bored kind of quickly, so building things stimulates my brain. The fact that I have the freedom to build things is my favorite part. I can create. It's fun.

CARLOS (CHARLIE) SUAREZ
INTERVIEWED BY C. DONOHUE

What are some of your day-to-day responsibilities? If a light doesn't work, if an outlet isn't working, or if it's burning—yeah, I've actually seen one that caught on fire right in front of me—just have to put it out really quick. Usually anything that requires electricity, I'm there troubleshooting and finding the problem and then I fix it.

What are some of your bigger, long-term projects? Turning the whole campus to LED eventually. Going from fluorescents or even high-pressure sodium bulbs that you see on the post lights, that orange glow. Some of them are white now and those are the new LEDs. Hilton, we're still in the process, but both stairwells, I swapped out roughly ... 80 lights and that's to cut the electric bill by half. It went from a 42-watt light fixture and now it uses 26 watts. Post lights, it varies from 150-watt light bulbs to 250 and now I'm replacing them to lightbulbs that only use 32 or 56 watts.

What are some of the ways you impact students' lives without them even knowing? Let's say, for instance, a study area is dark — how is a student going to study, right? I try to get dorms first, study areas, any library work order. I try to get it done first because students come first. Also, if an area is super dark at night I try to make a point for it to be a priority to get fixed.

What's the best part about what you do? The fun part would be when it's not a light that's bad. Let's say if I were to do everything to fix it and it's still not turning on — then it's a bigger issue and that's where I have to start by taking the whole room apart, tracing for that problem and that's fun. Other than that, I guess it's fun to make things bright!

WHAT IS CAFFEINE?

CAFFEINE IS A STIMULANT THAT EFFECTS THE CENTRAL NERVOUS SYSTEM. BY BOOSTING THE LEVELS OF CHEMICALS LIKE CORTISOL AND ADRENALINE IN THE BLOODSTREAM, CAFFEINE SPIKES ALERTNESS. CAFFEINE DOESN'T ERASE THE NEED FOR SLEEP, OR COVER SOMEONE'S LOST HOURS, BUT IT CAN BE HELPFUL IN SMALL DOSES.

WE SURVEYED 50 STUDENTS ON THEIR CAFFEINE HABITS AND WHERE THEY LIKE TO GET THEIR CAFFEINE-FIX ON CAMPUS.

ANDREW DENTON REFLECTS ON
THE NEW WAVE OF SURF CLUB
AFTER ITS 15TH ANNIVERSARY

ANDREW DENTON
ACCOUNTING '22

FOR ANDREW DENTON (Accounting '22), the president of Surf Club, community is an essential part of surfing. Surf Club provides that community, shares the joy of surfing through teaching and contributes to the health of the beachfront that holds so many memories for LMU students. “We’ve done beach clean-ups to try and give back because the beach gives us so much. It’s really just a club that lets you enjoy yourself out in the water and surf,” said Denton.

Surf Club harbors an ecosystem containing over 200 members: surfers, surf enthusiasts and students that simply want to spend an organized day at the beach. “We usually get together and do trips. This Friday, I’m actually waking up at 4 a.m. to take some other members of the Surf Club to the Pismo Beach Slough area. It’s three hours away, but we’re getting really good waves from Japan,” Denton explained. It’s that passion—the passion that can drive someone to wake up at 4 a.m. in search of a wave—that has sustained Surf Club for 15 years.

Denton had specific plans to make this 15th year special: “We’re hoping to just get some alumni back and talk about the club in past years. It’s a good way to connect and meet people who have graduated from LMU and celebrate where we have come from to where we are now.”

After all, Surf Club is all about the love: for the community, the coast and the waves. “With surfing, you always want to go out with a group and get to know people out there. I made some of my closest friends through the club so it’s definitely something that I would advise — trying to find people that like the same things as you,” Denton said. “If you have the time, come out and try surfing and maybe you’ll fall in love with it. Maybe it will become your passion just like it became mine.” //

ON THE NIGHT of LMU Fashion Society's runway show, a crowd of stylish, noticeably fashion-conscious students flooded into St. Robert's Auditorium to find the space transformed by fairy lights and drapery. The energy buzzed, spiking as music began to bump throughout the room and the first models strutted out wearing designs that caused the crowd to forget that they were all students, and not attendees of L.A. Fashion Week.

The show was in partnership with ASLMU as part of their Period Justice Week, and it strived to showcase diversity and body positivity. The Fashion Society Publicity Chair Nile Brown (Journalism '21) said, "It's all student performers, student designers and student-led. Our goal today is just showcasing the 'Student Body'... All student models too, it was all based on confidence so we had different castings, it was open to everyone ... all of it connects to confidence and that's what we really look for."

The models clearly demonstrated confidence on the runway as they showed off student designs accompanied by cheer-inducing poses, a few over the shoulder jacket tosses and some jaw-dropping dance breaks. Each designer showcase was intermixed with performances by groups of students, including Creme Brulee, Radix Dance Crew and Curbside. The endless flow of entertainment had students out of their seats for standing ovations all night.

Daniel Bhatt (Chemistry '21) said, "It was awesome, I absolutely loved it. It was really cool seeing all my friends in it. ... The messages and art that they were showing was great ... Each [designer] had a unique style and stuff ... maybe I just dress really boring so I just didn't expect that it could be so different and fun, it was definitely a fun thing to see."

Julia Culbert (Film and Television Production '22) agreed. "Usually you see people making fashion and you're like, 'I don't vibe with this' but every single piece I was like, 'I would wear that. If I wasn't broke I would buy that,'" she said.

The excitement wasn't limited to audience members. After the show, designers and models alike flooded out to reunite with their friends and family, bouncing and exuberant. Paloma Jacome-Bramkamp (Entrepreneurship '21) one of the night's featured designers, said that, "The show was not only a safe and exciting space but it was a night full of love and celebrating life! As my first debut show showcasing my looks, I feel validated as an artist and energized to continue creating."

As attendees lingered after the show came to a close, it was clear the night showcasing the "Student Body" had sparked conversation and excitement among the wider student body. |||

KALEY BUNCE
THEATRE ARTS '20
INTERVIEWED BY M. FARREN

How did you get the job at The Loft? I started last year and worked downstairs as a Brew Crew Member, which is basically a bouncer: you check all the IDs and work on all the membership things. One of my really good friends from Pi Phi was a manager a few years, and I was interested! I had just turned 21, and I reached out two weeks into school and they happened to have an opening!

How would you describe the vibe? I really like it, and especially working there because it's very familial. We do a lot of activities as a team to bond us — 15 members of the Brew Crew and four managers, and then different Beer-Tenders.

What is something not enough students know about The Loft? We have games! We don't put them out, but you can ask for them! One of our goals for The

the LOFT

Loft is to make a family sort of an environment while there. The four managers work from different places on campus. Theater Arts majors, international students, I'm in a sorority, some of the other are in service organizations — it's really divided around campus, so eventually you're gonna see someone that you know either working downstairs or upstairs.

Tell me about Beer it Forward! It's kind of like a "Buy a beer for a friend, or for a teacher, or for someone you want to give a beer to but you may not go into The Loft with," program. You pay somewhere around $5 to buy the beer, and then you get your name on the board, and the person that you're giving it to. You see your name up there, and it's exciting!

What keeps bringing the regulars back? Well — the beer's cheap. It's $4 normally. 16 ounces, but we sell Mug club glasses which is like a Loft type glass. They're $10 and they come with a beer. You get to keep them, and when you bring them back you get 4 ounces more than if you just ordered a regular beer. You know who the loyal clients are because they come back with the glasses.

Do you find people studying a lot? Yes! It surprised me but there's plenty of people who come in and work on a beer while working on a group project. There's one guy who comes in who always brings his philosophy books and reads them at the bar three or four times a week.

FOOD CULTURE

RACHEL FARNAN (Health and Human Sciences, '20) came to LMU as an undeclared freshman, lost in the sea of possibilities. "I took one nutrition course because I was interested in exploring it, and I fell in love with it. Then I found out there was a peer nutritionist position that was opening up as I was going into my junior year." She's been helping other students reach their health goals ever since.

Farnan meets with students individually, and talks to whole groups, presenting tips and tidbits on living healthily. "I have done some presentations about nutrition for some groups, such as the Student Workers. I did one about how to eat healthy with quick meals around campus and one about meal prepping ideas with food that's quick and easy for students."

Students come to Farnan with a variety of different fitness goals. Most students come with questions regarding eating healthy within a student meal plan, in addition to keeping healthy on a busy student schedule. A smaller portion of students ask about muscle gain and bulking.

Simply put, most students want to know how to be more effective in their nutrition plans while living continuously on-the-go. Lucky for LMU, Farnan's here to answer some common questions.

For students with a busy schedule, being healthy is way easier than one would think. "There are many things you can do to help out with a busy schedule. With meal prepping, you can set out your meals at the beginning of the week on Sunday or when you have more free time. Or you can pack little snacks like fruits and veggies." Farnan put a big emphasis on snacks, which keep students from getting too hungry in between meals.

However, for students who want to feel healthy, but don't want to put in the time to exercise, she has this to say. "My job as a nutritionist is to focus on things such as eating right, but I'm also passionate about having a healthy lifestyle, because they really go hand in hand with each other. Go out and make it fun, bring someone with you, it doesn't have to be Burns, it could be a class somewhere. Just go out and do something." ///

Move! The FitWell Center hosts classes to shake-up routines (sometimes literally), with aerobics, cardio and movement courses including F45.

IN THE CONSTANT MENTAL WORKOUT OF BEING A STUDENT, IT'S EASY TO FORGET THE IMPORTANCE OF PHYSICAL EXERCISE. THANKFULLY, THERE ARE CLUBS, TRAINERS AND CLASSES DEDICATED TO THE FITNESS OF THE STUDENT BODY.

F45, ONE OF the FitWell Center's latest additions to their group fitness class offerings, is not just new to LMU — it's new to the United States.

Michael Martinez (Health and Human Sciences, '20), a student trainer who has been teaching the Australian-born class since it was brought to campus last spring, highlighted the workout's accessibility to the average student as one of F45's most exciting aspects. "It covers a wide range of exercises and shows you exactly how to do them and it gives you a 45-minute workout every single day, so if you are newer to the gym... [a] workout is already laid out when you come in,

it's ready to go."

Another helpful and innovative component of F45 is that each movement participants are instructed to perform is displayed on television screens at the front of the room, combating one of the most common problems in group fitness classes: forgetting the initial explanation and getting lost.

For those who are struggling in their physical fitness journey, Martinez emphasized creating a routine. Luckily, the FitWell Center's various exercise classes are scheduled for the same time each week, making it easier for students to incorporate the sessions into their busy lives. "The biggest hurdle of any fitness goal," he stated, "is getting started."

Once this is accomplished, however, the benefits can last a lifetime. Martinez, speaking about why fitness is important specifically to students, looks to the future, saying, "I think this is where all your habits for the rest of your life develop. If you're healthy now, and you can start by getting on a trend of going to the gym three to five times a week, I think that will carry into the rest of your life and help you as you get in your older stages." //

THE FITWELL CENTER IS COMMITTED TO PROVIDING HEALTH AND WELLNESS PROGRAMMING AND EDUCATION FOR THE ENTIRE CAMPUS, INCLUDING GROUP EXERCISE CLASSES, PERSONAL TRAINING, NUTRITION CONSULTATIONS, MASSAGE THERAPY AND SPECIALIZED WELLNESS PRESENTATIONS.

AMANDA GORDON
FINANCE '21

INTERVIEWED BY M. FARREN

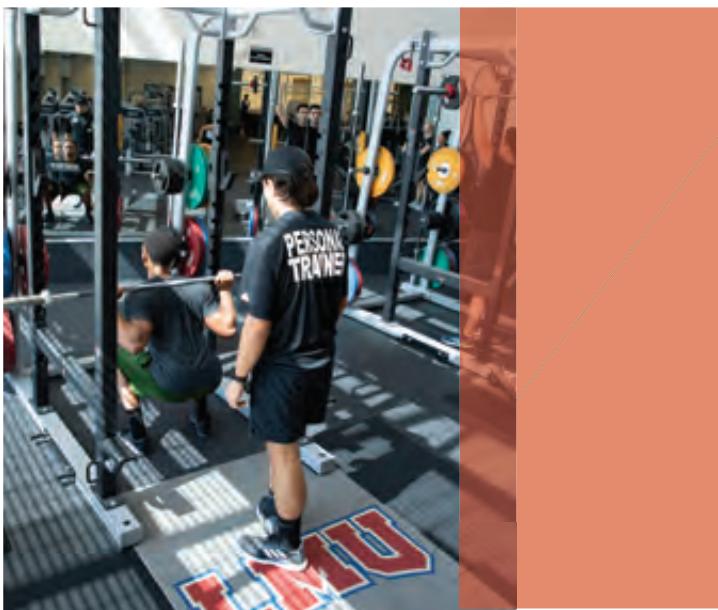

HOW HAVE YOU SEEN LMU
ENCOURAGE AND SUPPORT PEOPLE
IN LIVING A HEALTHY LIFESTYLE?

Amanda: I think that the FitWell Center is really great. Of course, I work for them, but they're really on holistic health and they're very good about accommodating for personal training. This school is really awesome and gives students and faculty and staff great rates on personal training. The gym has been really supportive—and LMU in general—of creating the weightlifting club, and giving us the supplies we need to help people who are really passionate about weightlifting and fitness achieve those goals ... which we have been able to foster in our club.

HOW DO YOU BALANCE BEING FIT AND BEING A STUDENT?

Amanda: For me, being a student always comes first, but I think that when I'm taking care of myself in terms of my body and my mental health and all of that, it allows me to perform higher in classes. My first priority is my health, and so I always advocate for myself and my clients and then, of course, the LMU weightlifting community. You need to take care of your body and your health physically, mentally and spiritually in order to be completely there and succeed to your full potential in school.

WHY DO YOU LOVE THE WEIGHTLIFTING CLUB?

Amanda: Me and my guy friends founded the club two years ago, and all of us got really close because we all went to the gym a lot and then a few of us were personal trainers together. We're all just very passionate about weightlifting and wanted to create a community to foster that and promote weightlifting within our community, but also make a place for people like us to have kind of like a home and be supported and be able to do competitions and be supported by this school. I love it because a lot of gym culture is very individualistic. You go to the gym and you're kind of in your zone, but we all bonded and created a community within our little friend group and we wanted to share that.

WHAT DO YOU THINK IS THE IMPORTANCE OF EXERCISE IN A STUDENT'S LIFE?

Amanda: I think it's very essential to have a balanced lifestyle where you take care of your body, whether that's exercising in the gym or going out for a run or doing yoga — I just think it's very important. I'm a personal trainer on campus, so I'm a huge advocate for keeping an active lifestyle.

E-SPORTS

GAME ON. Competitive video gaming (eSports) found a home in the Burns Recreation Center, with the unveiling of the eSports Center. The grand opening in the Burns-Gersten Atrium on Feb. 25 was attended by curious students and gamers alike.

John Nimmers-Minor IV (Biology '20), president of the eSports Club, spoke about the opening. "This has been a super long process. Our club has been around for about five years, and last year we finally made some strides and got the faculty to look at us and listen," Nimmers-Minor said. "It wasn't until this year [that] we were approached by the University with their plans in creating this gaming center and giving us a place to play. They gave us a place to practice, a place to reside, a place to relax."

In the eSports Center, club practices consist of several different teams competing together in their respective game of choice. They compete in online multiplayer in games such as "League of Legends," "Overwatch," "Rainbow Six Siege," "Rocket League," "Hearthstone," "Fortnite," "NHL '20" and "Magic: The Gathering." "This is an amazing step forward in regards to video games on campus and in terms of making an eSports team that can compete at a collegiate level," Nimmers-Minor continued.

The eSports Center is open to the wider student body when it isn't occupied by the teams, and anyone is welcome to join the eSports Club. |||

E-SPORTS CENTER

They're wired in. Students practice their competitive "Overwatch" skills, headphones isolating them from the outside world.

"The West Coast Conference sponsored their first 'League of Legends' [event] this year, it was pretty cool. People, administratively, are getting behind it."

"We ... get to play other competitive games like 'Super Smash Bros', or you could enjoy some regular party games like 'Mario Party' or 'Mario Kart', all with other people who love it just as much. And, it's a great chance to meet some new people." | David Young Marketing '20

"It's a fun club where people can play games with their friends." | Jason Tjandra Psychology '21

"I see how much LMU has invested in this room, and I'm excited for the students, as well as myself, to play a lot of video games." | Devin Powell Finance '22

The eSports Center creates a community space for gamers to perfect their craft and connect with others.

NOBODY SAID BEING A STUDENT WOULD BE EASY. THANKFULLY, STUDENT PSYCHOLOGICAL SERVICES (SPS) IS HERE TO HELP. WITH A FULL-TIME PROFESSIONAL STAFF, VARIED INITIATIVES AND CONSTANT DEVELOPMENT, SPS IS EQUIPPED TO HELP YOU THROUGH.

STUDENTS WITH BUSTER THE THERAPY DOG

"The idea is that therapy animals - dogs in particular - can be a nice way to augment peoples experience on campus and in SPS."

—DR. J MICHAEL DOYLE

YOU'VE GOT THIS

DR. J MICHAEL DOYLE has extensive experience in student psychological services. Before his time as a staff psychologist at LMU, he first began working with students in 1974 in a counseling center for the University of Southern California. There, he was able to conduct needs-assessment research, engage in therapy sessions with students and eventually earn his doctorate degree. Next, he worked at the counseling center of California State University, Northridge, where he remained for eight years. But Dr. Doyle expressed a particular fondness for LMU. “I really enjoy working with students in these settings. Specifically here, because we’re able to do some things here at LMU that many schools can’t do. I’m not sure all of our students realize the luxuries that we’re able to offer here in terms of treatment,” Doyle said.

“The main thing that’s different about our services now,” Dr. Doyle explained, “is that we’re able to offer more extended services to some students.” While other schools place limits on the number of sessions a student can attend, with the maximum number of sessions allowed annually often ranging from one to six, LMU’s Student Psychological Services does not follow such models. These restrictions are enacted, according to Doyle, due largely in part to the growing demand over the last 20 years for psychological services on college campuses. Thus, the increase in funding for SPS from LMU—which has allowed for the addition of more part-time and temporary staff members to the department—has been a critical advancement.

In addition, SPS is able to provide part-time psychiatry assistance. Expanding upon what this means in terms of meeting students’ needs, Doyle said, “They do not just dispense medications. We can use them for students who maybe have never been on medication and are considering it or need to look at possibly a change. What we have here is a very complete wrap-around service that many schools can’t offer.” He believes this balance reflects one of the most integral values of LMU: “commitment to the growth of the whole person.”

WELLNESS WEDNESDAYS

WELLNESS WEDNESDAYS

Wellness Wednesdays

A new addition to campus—as of 2019—is Wellness Wednesdays. Once a week, vendors selling food, clothes and other goods crowd Lawton Plaza, offering students a way to take a break, socialize and try something new. Crafts and games are also provided to help students de-stress and have fun. The passion project of ASLMU’s Vice President Emily Sinsky, Wellness Wednesdays help to foster a sense of community and vibrancy on campus.

Educators

The Wellness Educators program—which features undergraduate LMU students who are trained in numerous mental health-related topics—is another SPS initiative that continues to be vital in terms of student education and awareness. Through outreach programs and tabling events, Wellness Educators not only disseminate information to their peers, but also help the SPS staff better understand the struggles that students are experiencing.

Workshops

Various on-campus SPS initiatives seek to provide students with comprehensive mental health support. Their broad spectrum of wellness workshops, for example, as well as therapy and discussion groups has been greatly developed over the last seven years. Titles of just a few of the sessions offered during the 2020 spring semester included “The Circle: An LGBTQ+ Discussion Group,” “Grief & Loss Support Group”, “Sisters Chat: Black Women Connect!” and “Thriving with Depression.” Others focus on body image, interpersonal effectiveness, stress, social anxiety and trauma recovery.

Self Help

As one's semester and life becomes more hectic, Dr. Doyle has a number of other tactics students can implement to mitigate stress. “In dealing with stress, first of all, it's important to get the infrastructure of your life in place and keep it there. What I mean by that is sleep, diet and exercise,” Doyle said, emphasizing moderation in each. He additionally mentioned time management and substance use as important factors that can impact one's stress levels, and suggests that students engage in “device diets,” in which they take hours-long breaks from their cell phones. Lastly, he stated, “Mindfulness is an outstanding approach. If people were more mindful, more in the present and more in reality, they would generally feel better.”

Buster

Perhaps the most popular and renowned member of the SPS team is Buster — the therapy dog who was welcomed to campus at the beginning of 2019. “The idea is that therapy animals—dogs in particular—can be a nice way to augment people's experience on campus and in [SPS],” Doyle reasons. “If you look at how students are out in the waiting room when he's there,” Doyle continued, “it's different. When he's not there, students tend to be on their phones or quiet and alone. When he's out there, at least one is petting him, playing with him, interacting and laughing.” Buster can also be seen brightening students' day outside of SPS, as he is often taken for walks around campus. // # health hazard or hype?

HISTORY REPEATS ITSELF. While the 1920s famously made the sale of alcohol illegal in the United States, it appears that there will be a similar reaction to vaping 100 years later as government officials attempt to catch up with what has been coined as the vaping epidemic. Action on the local, state and federal levels came in response to a wide-spread outbreak of illnesses and deaths related to vape-use especially among college-age individuals.

While a majority of LMU students are below the legal age to purchase vaping products—including the devices themselves, in addition to the pods that produce the vapor—it is no secret that many students have either vaped or know people who have. Some take issue with the outright bans.

“I think about smoking, and how that’s been around forever, and arguably the health risks involved with smoking are just as bad, if not probably honestly worse than vaping,” said Cole Scanlon (Psychology ’21) while lounging on the lawn at the south side of St. Robert’s Hall with a group of friends. “I think the vape is just the hot scare of the moment.”

Genesis Jefferson (Film and Television Production ’22) disagreed. “I know currently there’s the epidemic with vaping specifically related to THC content in the pods...like any other drug, it comes with the territory of knowing what you’re doing.”

Most of the reported vape-related illnesses are caused by less common THC-laced pods as opposed to the traditional nicotine pods. However, there are incidents spawned by run-of-the-mill regulated e-cigarettes.

Pavel Klimov (Liberal Arts Undeclared ’22) started vaping after dealing with addiction. Klimov began vaping to quit smoking IQOS, a European substitution for cigarettes. He seemed hopeful when considering a ban on vapes. “Maybe I’ll finally quit.”

Vaping can be a family event. Harry Zucker (Philosophy ’23), shared his experience dating a young woman whose entire family vaped, from her parents to her siblings. “They gave me a Juul as soon as I started dating her. I vaping for the year that I was dating her and then when I quit ... I started smoking cigarettes. I was still addicted to nicotine and now here I am today smoking on average a cigarette a day.”

When asked for his thoughts on the potential ban of vapes, Zucker responded candidly: “I think vaping should be illegal. I think if you want to get a vape you should get it prescribed to you by a doctor because you’re trying to quit cigarettes.” When asked if he planned to quit smoking some day, he responded, “I like the aesthetic too much.”

Others shared a similar perspective. “I think I just enjoy seeing the [smoke] come out of my mouth,” laughed Adam Linssen (Film and Television Production ’20). Linssen had been a casual vape-user, owning one for a short period of time before deciding to quit. He credited his ease in quitting to a predisposition against addiction to nicotine, but he’s seen plenty of other friends get addicted. Linssen argued that the difference in flavors is a major contributing factor. “Once you buy all four flavors, I bet by the time you’ve gotten through all four pods in a week, you’re hooked.”

Linssen was less enthused by the proposed ban on vapes than others, “I think if [my friends] didn’t have a vape, they’d probably just smoke cigarettes.” Furthermore, Linssen went on to suggest that a ban would drive others to extreme measures to find off-market alternatives — alternatives that may already be responsible for the issues reported.

While prohibition cuts down on ease of access, those with dedication always prevail. The students listed above have vastly different experiences with e-cigarettes — but all agreed the addictive properties of sweetened flavors are causing cravings in those who might otherwise be completely disinterested.

Regulations can be used to promote health but, as seen throughout history, outright prohibition can cause just as many problems as it allegedly solves. Maybe our elected officials will see the irony in this anniversary of prohibition — or maybe history will continue to repeat itself. //

LIONS FOR RECOVERY ALLOWS FOR A SAFE SPACE FOR EVERYONE.”

STEVEN HOWELL
ENTREPRENEURSHIP '22

RECOVERY STARTS HERE

THE STRUGGLES of college students go far beyond deadlines and sleepless nights: many deal with serious anxieties, complicated social situations and, particularly, substance abuse. However, what can be done when bad habits feel inescapable? Lions for Recovery is a great resource for students struggling with any sort of addiction. Co-president of the program Steven Howell (Entrepreneurship '22) commented on the welcoming atmosphere, inviting anyone who may be nervous to take their first step to recovery: “Lions for Recovery allows for a safe space for everyone.”

Howell’s co-president, Ian Wright (Biology '21), described the varied issues that people seek help in. “It can range from addiction, alcoholism, trauma and even reach as far as people recovering from an abusive relationship. Everyone’s welcome at Lions for Recovery.”

Howell acknowledged the hesitancy a student may have before entering a support group, but emphasized the importance of self-awareness. “Ask yourself two questions: the first question you should ask is ‘Do I need recovery and from what?’ The second question is ‘What can I give?’ instead of ‘What can I get?’ This changes your entire outlook on life.” LMU’s Center for Collegiate Recovery is on the first floor of Malone Student Center, and houses Lions for Recovery’s weekly meetings.

Howell knows how difficult it can be to make such a significant change — he went through some personal healing himself: “My life went through a shift in a matter of seconds. A mentor of mine and I were chatting about some deep topics, about life and things like that. Very slowly he told me, ‘Marijuana is a gateway drug to a mediocre life.’ I started being super focused on my life’s purpose on that day. I woke up.”

After making self-control a priority, Howell had this to say about his newfound lifestyle: “It’s a way to make your sober stories crazier than your messed up ones.” Lions for Recovery wants to help students tell their best stories, free from dependence and addiction. |||

A STUDENT'S RECOVERY STORY

IAN WRIGHT ENTERED LMU as a freshman, nervous to venture outside of his comfort zone. “I had probably smoked weed three or four times before college. But then, living out here on the Bluff, you see these people walking out of their dorms in these big groups and you’re like, ‘Hey, what are you guys doing?’ And they’re all going out to the Bluff to smoke.”

Wright recounted the initial temptation of his addiction and the ease with which it began. “It’s an easy way to meet people. It’s a lot of fun. To make a long story short, I got buried in it. I got buried in marijuana.”

This led to an exploration of other, more psychedelic drugs, such as acid, shrooms and salvia. “Acid was the killer. I was doing it once every two weeks after my chemistry lab. I would see a hummingbird fly around and be like ‘Oh, that’s my sign, I’m going to do acid today,’ and it takes a toll on your brain. That continued for freshman year.”

At the beginning of Wright’s sophomore year, he had moved off campus into a house in Venice Beach with his friends. He stopped taking acid — but it was far more difficult than he had imagined. “When you take acid that much and you suddenly stop, your brain doesn’t really know what to do. You don’t really know how to decipher a lot of reality from non-reality. That line gets fuzzy, and that line got really fuzzy for me.”

He was living on the bottom floor of a two story house, right next to an alleyway filled with what Wright could only describe as junkies and crackheads, whose screaming—mixed with Wright’s sensitive perception of the world—led him to a truly dark place: “I would lose my ego from time to time. I would lose my sense of self. There were days where I just didn’t know my name and I didn’t know I had parents.”

Despite the pit Wright had found himself in, he made the most important decision anyone in recovery can make: he asked for help. “One day, I was laying on the floor of my bedroom in one of those stupors, and my parents’ faces came to my mind suddenly. In this dream-like state, I called my dad and I told him ‘Dad, I need to come home,’” Wright remembered.

Wright needed help, and had the courage to ask for it. He registered himself for Lions for Recovery, and was honest about his situation. “I figured if they cared about me as a student, they’re going to help me. They’re not going to ruin my college experience. They want it to be the best that it can be.”

After assessing Wright’s state of being, they decided he needed a break. Wright went on a leave of absence. He left for a year in order to heal and recover. He came back, met new friends, took small leadership roles in the community and got back on his feet. “Every challenge in my life, I’m able to tackle it because of what I’ve been through and because of the people who have helped me.”

For anyone who may be struggling and possibly needs some wise words, hear it from the guy who’s gone through it himself. “You’re not alone.” //

Marine Corps

Families have all kinds of traditions, but for Keon Maluia (Political Science '20) that family tradition is military service. "My great-grandfather was drafted in WWI and both my uncles served in the Vietnam War," said Maluia. That history of service is what inspired him to join the Marine Corps. So along with baseball and Tae Kwon Do in his adolescent years, Maluia participated in JROTC, before formally deciding to join the U.S. Marine Corps at the age of 17. Maluia was drawn especially to the Marines for their legacy and pride, and served for four years as a 0352 Anti-Tank Infantry Missileman. After his service, he began studying at El Camino Community College before transferring to LMU. Maluia has stated that he plans on going to Law School after graduation in hopes of becoming an assistant U.S. attorney.

FROM ACTIVE DUTY TO FULL-TIME STUDENTS

AUSTIN DOLLENS INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS '21

Marine Corps

Few would take the time to compare the life of a student to that of a Marine, but Austin Dollens (International Relations '21) found similarities between both experiences, and the mindset necessary to overcome adversity both on-campus and in a warzone. Dollens says that one of the biggest impacts from his time with the Marines is the Marine Corps attitude. Marines are resilient. “It doesn’t matter if you like to do it, it doesn’t matter if you want to do it, you’ve got to get through it and you’ve got to do it.” This belief is evident throughout Dollens’ path to the Marines, from being a “drama-kid” in high school, to studying Theatre and Theatre Performance at Community College. “I just didn’t know what to study. My time in the Marine Corps is what helped me figure out why I wanted to study International Relations.” After his time traveling around the globe, seeing a diverse array of cultures and experiences, Dollens walked away with a new mindset and advice for others, “Withhold your judgments until you actually talk to people and you actually understand them, whether that be politically, religiously, whatever, like, you don’t know the person, you don’t understand them, until you yourself have had a conversation.”

MARKETING '19 (right) COURTNEY MARTINEZ

Air Force

For many students, time management and procrastination can be a daily battle. For Courtney Martinez (Marketing '19), time in the Air Force gave her a self-discipline that she carries every day in her life as a student. “Being where you’re supposed to be on time, doing what you’re supposed to be doing and really just kind of managing your own time effectively is really important.” Martinez, a veteran, wife and mother, is also the first in her family to go to college. Hailing from a small town in Idaho, enlisting in the military was the only upward mobility option that she could see. “This is an awesome school, and if it weren’t for the GI Bill, I would not be here,” Martinez said. “I feel very humbled to be here and share the resources with people who are able to come to a school like this, and so I think that I might appreciate that in my own little way differently than other people.”

WHAT HAVE BEEN SOME OF THE BIGGEST SURPRISES EXPERIENCED IN THESE POSITIONS?

Emily: A lot of our friends were concerned that neither of us really were super into Fallapalooza or things like that. That was something I heard a lot when we were running. But, I think it just shows that if you have a good team ... if there's things that you might not be as strong in ... you just find your niche within a team and it helps you be more successful.

WHAT ACHIEVEMENTS ARE YOU MOST PROUD OF?

Kenneth: First and foremost, probably the personal hygiene stuff because that was one of the things Emily and I ran our platform for our campaign on. We felt ambitious and confident that it would work, but since we hadn't been elected yet, we really didn't know exactly what the logistics of that would be, so we worked really hard on it over the summer and pretty much all of this semester, and it was exciting to see it finally happen the beginning of this spring. And, to receive overwhelming community support has been really nice.

WHAT ARE SOME GOALS YOU ARE STILL STRIVING TO ACCOMPLISH?

Emily: The shift for ASLMU becoming more advocacy and initiative-based, instead of this handful of signature events that ASLMU does, and building on top of that and really using the resources that we have. I'm hoping that our administration has left that as a tone shift so students realize that student government really does have power to make changes. I think that's something we need to show continuously.

GREEN LMU

ENERGY

Recognizing that electricity use comprises over half of LMU's campus carbon footprint, the University has invested heavily in alternative energy sources, including 90,000 square feet of solar energy panels. LMU produces approximately 1,335,000 kWh of energy a year and its solar investment saves over $200,000 annually.

WATER

With the help of "green" toilets, shower heads, faucets and sourcing over 75 percent of our irrigation from reclaimed water, LMU has reduced its water use by 20 percent over the last few years.

WASTE

Between 5.3 million and 14 million tons of plastic are dumped into the ocean annually. With the ocean practically at our doorstep, this issue is literally close to home. On top of compost initiatives to reduce food waste, LMU is one of the only college campuses with its own recycling plant—located next to and partially underneath Drollinger Parking Plaza—recycling over 75 percent of campus waste.

GROUNDS

Landscaping is important not only for the look and feel of a beautiful campus, but also for the contribution to a more sustainable one. By planting trees that help catch carbon dioxide and learning gardens that help expose people to urban farming, LMU is working to make our relationship to the campus we live and learn on more symbiotic.

TRANSPORT

If all great environmentalists start somewhere, and the people who will protect the planet could come from anywhere, why not here at LMU? Curriculum and research—both on-campus and abroad—work to educate and inspire the activists within us all, growing a sustainable mindset that can be spread across the globe, in addition to contributing to the hunt for global solutions to understand and advance the environmental movement.

ACADEMICS

Biking, skating, jogging, blading and scootering: LMU is supportive of all alternative methods of transportation that move away from the traditional single-rider gas-vehicle. In addition to The Cycling Lion—LMU's very own on-campus bike shop—68 percent of campus transportation consists of electric carts and cars, such as the Department of Parking and Transportation patrol vehicle.

LIFESTYLE

LMU encourages students to become well-versed in environmentalism and living a green lifestyle in the hopes that when they leave campus they will take these lessons with them to share. With numerous clubs and outreach programs, students have plenty of opportunity to plant the seeds of a greener life for the community at large.

From sourcing locally whenever possible to the ethical treatment of animals, LMU recognizes that purchases carry a large ecological impact.

BUILDINGS

Recognizing the electricity used, water wasted and carbon dioxide emitted by traditional structures, all new construction or major renovations must be Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design (LEED)-certified or equivalent. While the Life Sciences Building (LSB) is beautiful to look at, LEED-certified green buildings such as LSB and the William H. Hannon Library are working to reduce LMU's overall carbon footprint.

the rise of tiktok

YOU SAY YOU'LL watch one, then another... two hours later the app has consumed you. In the early 2010s, it was Vine: six sweet seconds, then on to the next. However, all good things must come to an end. With growth comes change, and from Vine's ashes, TikTok was born.

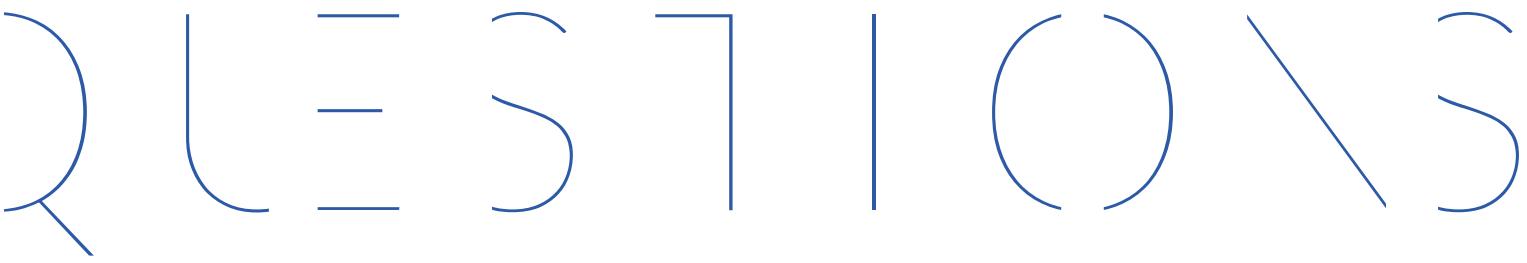

Chaotic, confusing and perhaps the most Gen Z platform to ever exist, TikTok is a patchwork of content showing just how many perspectives can exist within a community, country and planet — in addition to cute dogs, and varying concepts of choreography.

Joining the ranks of the biggest social media platforms along with Instagram, Twitter and Facebook, TikTok stepped into Vine's old role and became a place to share it all, from lip-syncing to dance challenges produced by content creators all around the globe. The app has been downloaded over a billion times, so there must be something worthwhile beneath the occasionally uncomfortable. People do something embarrassing, it becomes a trend and suddenly everyone is laughing with each other instead of at each other.

TikTok paints a new concept of the future of social media: with an algorithm that doesn't prioritize the popularity of the poster, it's a space where anyone has the chance to create viral content. Unlike Instagram's focus on image, TikTok emphasizes comedic timing. The short-form video format has been used for everything, from launching Lil Nas X's "Old Town Road" to the top of the charts, to spreading campaign platform information regarding presidential candidates. There are doctors giving medical advice right next to influencers over-using their selfie camera.

Maybe the world can't be changed within the time constraints of 60 seconds. But maybe an app that provides short, palatable content purely for enjoyment and entertainment purposes can help. A place where, for a few days, anyone can be internet famous for the most random, amusing things. Maybe the future won't be based on likes or followers, but having the courage to live authentically — even if only for 60 seconds at a time. //

What is one way that you handle burn out?

DAILYN COLSTON

One way that I deal with burnout is talking to my support system, the people in my corner, whether it be calling my parents, my partner [or] my friends and just venting to them. I think verbally explaining what's going through my mind definitely does help me out in the long run.

ERIC RENNA

I remind myself of who I am when I wasn't burned out, and understand I am a constantly changing being. Remind yourself of who you are and start something new that will fulfill you. To prevent burnout? Live every day like it's the first and not the last.

VERONICA BACKER-PERAL

To be really honest, I don't think I burn out all too easily because I love everything that I do. Especially academically or with my jobs, I've never taken a class or taken a job that I don't enjoy every second of, but because I have three majors and all these different jobs and extracurriculars, I can balance between them. So, I can be writing an essay and take a break by solving math problems and that's relaxing for me while still being productive.

GAVIN TOY

Taking it a little bit at a time. I think that the reason why people get burned out about stress is they put such an immense amount of pressure because of the entirety of what they have to accomplish or what is going on in their lives as a whole.

AISON KING

The way I avoid burnout is to focus my energy into something personal and fulfilling rather than something I feel obligated to do. Finding ways to, in my free time, do things that make me excited. Just finding ways to pursue passions, not only academically or through schoolwork, but personally and creatively as well.

What are the two most important lessons you've learned?

DAILYN COLSTON

My dad always says that "perfect practice makes permanent" and essentially what he was trying to get at was that you have to practice in a perfect mindset in order for it to be permanent. The second lesson would be networking. I didn't think that networking would be as crucial as it is, but I've learned that it's very vital.

ERIC RENNA

The first thing is definitely to know that I am enough and I don't need to strive for this unrealistic, unattainable ideal of perfection. No matter what I do, I should consider myself valuable for who I am now and not for who I might be later in life. Number two, if I'm ever feeling self conscious, to put my intention outward, to pay attention to the world around me and put all my attention on others and what they need and what they care about.

VERONICA BACKER-PERAL

I think not undermining the importance of people's feelings. I feel like it's really easy to say "I'm right and I know that I'm right and it doesn't matter how you feel about it," but the reality is that everything is guided by how people feel, so sometimes it's more logical to not act only by logic. Another thing I've learned: always buy a green book at least a week in advance.

GAVIN TOY

Listen to your own thoughts and voices: oftentimes, your own judgment is the best judgment. And then the second thing: always look out for an opportunity. You never know when something's going to happen or where something's going to come from so it's always good to be on the watch for stuff.

AISON KING

The first is always ask how you can make yourself useful. Always ask what you can do to help. A second one is if you are suffering, your work is going to suffer. You're not going to perform at your top ability if you're going into it not in the right headspace to be productive.

Who are three people you would love to be mentored by?

DAILYN COLSTON

Michelle Obama, prior to the First Lady stage, because Michelle has various accolades on her own. Kobe Bryant, hearing his mentality in terms of accomplishing your goals and being driven. Lastly, I think my grandma. She was a very hardworking woman and she supported her family as well as getting her education and I think often as women you think you can't balance the two. I would love to hear her advice in terms of balancing the two.

ERIC RENNA

Lin-Manuel Miranda. Idina Menzel. Walt Disney.

VERONICA BACKER-PERAL

Leonardo DaVinci. Leonardo DiCaprio. My ninth grade English teacher, Lucy Pelletier, is one of the smartest people that I've ever met and has inspired me most and every single day that I talk to her I learn something.

GAVIN TOY

Bong Joon-ho, Socrates and Jackie Chan.

AISON KING

The first one for sure would be a man named Monty Oum, an animator that I've looked up to for a long time. Martin Luther King, Jr., not just because of what he stands for as a symbol, but also because he was a key figure engaged in tackling social justice from a faith standpoint where a lot of social justice movements of the time were turning more secular. Joe Dart, he's a bassist for a band named Vulfpeck, and they just have a very impeccable sense of technique and style.

What are four things you wish you could carry around with you everywhere?

DAILYN COLSTON

I would take a car. Water. A passport. Lastly, my phone.

ERIC RENNA

My dogs. My smile. A necklace that I wear almost every single day: it's a gift from my best friend from my childhood. Something funny on a piece of clothing or accessory.

VERONICA BACKER-PERAL

Every episode of "Game of Thrones". More metaphorically, hope. A good hard drive. A hair tie.

GAVIN TOY

A camera set-up, a notebook, my anti-lactose intolerance pills and a Costco membership card.

AISON KING

One is definitely headphones. An audience; I wish at any time I could entertain people. My mom. Confidence in my own decision making.

What five things need to happen for an average day to be a good day?

DAILYN COLSTON

I need to eat. I need to talk to my parents. I need iced coffee. A good playlist. Fresh air.

ERIC RENNA

I have to make my bed. I have to have a good breakfast with something sweet. I definitely have to have some kind of contact with my family. I've got to talk to as many people as possible. Finally, I have to read my Co-Star. I don't believe in it, but it's just so fun.

VERONICA BACKER-PERAL

Learn something. Grow. Move. Interact. Relax. That being said, I think every day's a good day no matter what. Every day you learn something and you grow.

GAVIN TOY

I'd hear some good news at some point during the day. I want to accomplish something whether it's in work or at school. A nice meal. Someone to come home to. Waking up without my alarm clock. Something unexpectedly happening to me that was pleasantly surprising, like a phone call from an old friend.

AISON KING

I need a chance to flex my creative muscles, to spend time with loved ones, to reflect on my current wellbeing, to just be still and to strike something off my to-do list.

If you only had six months to achieve your end goals what would you change now?

DAILYN COLSTON

I'd probably make less time for socializing and I'd focus more on tasks that will get me to my end goal, more specifically, networking in the sector that I want to be in.

ERIC RENNA

Trust that I have what I have and that I'm capable of doing my dreams right now. I'd go straight to New York and start auditioning for a gazillion things and reaching out to as many people as I possibly can to network and get auditions and try to make a difference in the artistic community in any way possible.

VERONICA BACKER-PERAL

I would probably focus on one thing because right now there's so many different things that I'm interested in. I would probably choose one topic that I'm most passionate about and fully invested in for the six months.

GAVIN TOY

Nothing. I wouldn't change anything, to be honest. My end goal, honestly at the end of the day is to just be happy and to have an impact on as many people as I can ... I wouldn't try to change my life or do anything else specifically. If that's what's meant to be, if six months is all I have left then I'll live the best six months I can.

AISON KING

One of my end goals is to form a place where me and my friends can explore creatively as a career, so if I only had six months right now what I would do is start getting people together and start collaborative projects; start telling stories, start writing music, start making things with people. Right now, I'm just doing what I need to do to get by for school.

What seven words would you use to define yourself?

DAILYN COLSTON

Goal-driven. Compassionate. Resilient. Thoughtful. Creative. Curious. Hardworking.

ERIC RENNA

Creative. Courageous. Charismatic. Ambitious. Compassionate. Forward-thinking. Present.

VERONICA BACKER-PERAL

THE INTERNATIONAL HOUSE BECOMES A HOME AWAY FROM HOME.

ABBEY GROSSE
COMMUNICATION STUDIES '20
INTERVIEWED BY C. BUSH

What is Perth, Australia like? Not as much city vibes. Everything's coastal. Everyone surfs, everyone goes down south, everyone farms, there's a winery we always go to. It's a way more chilled out vibe than the East Coast, I think.

Why LMU? I played water polo at UCSB and that's how I got to the U.S. After one year, I wasn't vibing it. It was such a huge state school and I wanted something more personal where I wasn't just a number. I sent out my release papers and the first person to contact me was my coach here at LMU.

Explain a little bit about International House. This is my third year living in the house. Living on campus is tough, and you don't get a choice who you live with most of the time which is tough. Here, it's seven usually great people. You have to apply online and go through an interview process. The interview process is intense, figuring out who's going to live well together and what kind of people they are and what we're gonna learn from each other. I love living in this house. It feels like I'm living my adult life but also getting the college experience at the same time.

Do you host events for all the international kids? At the end of the semester, we get a lot of questions on how to live in the house. Most people don't know but this house counts as on-campus housing. It's tough because people assume you have to be an international student which is wrong. They're all about integrating communal connections and creating an international community among seven great different people.

“I JUST LIKE BEING OUT THERE. IT’S A NICE ADRENALINE RUSH.”

MARGOT ZOGER
ENGLISH '22

WALK INTO THE LIVING ROOM on a Monday evening and you'll find it in stark contrast with the relative quiet of the rest of campus. On Mondays at 8 p.m., The Living Room opens its doors for Open Mic Night, and students open up to their peers and reveal their hidden talents. Margot Zoger (English '22) has been frequently attending Open Mic nights since arriving at LMU,

“I lived on campus my freshman year and saw a lot of flyers for the different events going on ... so I checked out Open Mic Night, and soon enough started reading my poetry there. I just liked the atmosphere ... good music, funny people,” she said. “Watching people come back or seeing new people perform, it’s such a nice wide range of things.”

Zoger said Open Mic night offered her a place to share her poetry just like back home in California’s Bay Area. “I’ve been performing since a very young age. I always loved presenting to a crowd of people something that I’ve done — I just like being out there. It’s a nice adrenaline rush.” However, her favorite part is seeing the creativity of her peers. “It’s funny to see kids just walking around then be like ‘oh, I watched you singing your original song.’ You don’t know them, but you know whatever they’re choosing to share with you on this platform.”

Frequenting Open Mic Night has been a staple in Zoger’s college experience at LMU, and has further improved her confidence in front of a crowd. She proudly stated that “I definitely think I could stand up and say anything in front of a crowd at this point,” and she’s not the only one.

Collin Crippin (Urban Studies '20) made a habit of arriving early to Open Mic to snag the coveted opening slot, and right before bounding up on stage to cover two of his favorite songs, said: “I love it just for what it is: it’s open, it’s free for everyone to just go up there and express themselves, whatever they want.” From original music and covers to poetry and stand-up comedy, Open Mic Night draws a varied crowd, and gives good reason to think of Mondays as more than just the start of another busy week. //

ALPHA KAPPA ALPHA

MOST PEOPLE WILL never have to organize 80-plus sorority sisters into a synchronized dance routine — and Melanie Guan (Marketing '20) of Alpha Chi Omega had only one week to do it. Her secret to choreographing one of the two winning routines (the other winner being Delta Zeta) at the annual Lip Sync & Stroll Off event with so little time? Preparation.

“It’s a lot of work over the summer that people don’t realize. Obviously the songs and the choreography, but also when and where to practice, the costumes, the props and what my sisters can handle choreography-wise.”

Alpha Chi Omega’s routine was comprised of a mash-up of songs, ranging from classic hits like “Who Let the Dogs Out” by Baha Men and “Get Low” by Lil Jon, The East Side Boyz & Yin Yang Twins, to more meme-able material like “Tokyo Drift” by Teriyaki Boyz and the “Scooby Doo, Where Are You?” theme song—the routine, after all, was Scooby Doo-themed.

Guan said, “I think our plot and our storyline really stood out to the judges. Props to our previous president, Aoife Tejada (Sociology '20), because she wrote it.”

Guan emphasized the work put in by others: “I choreographed all of last year’s routine, but this year Eliza Wood (Marketing '21) choreographed two out of the six sections. One group’s costumes didn’t arrive on time, and Gabriella Conte (Communication Studies '20) stepped up and said, ‘I can go to the store tomorrow and pick up 25 shirts of the same color.’ That was so helpful, and so nice.”

While Guan made it clear that the practicing and choreographing was difficult, she also pointed out how much fun they had working together: “You get to spend time with your sorority sisters struggling, tired, practicing together — it’s like a bonding moment, and it definitely brings the whole organization together. Lip Sync is something to take seriously; the money being raised is for our philanthropy and the money we won is going straight there, too.”

On the subject of how she celebrated the victory, Guan reminisced, “I watched the video about a hundred times. I was so proud of everyone and all the work we put in.” |||

LMU MADNESS overtook Gersten Pavilion on Oct. 17, bringing students together for a night of games, competitions and dance-offs. This event, used to ring in the beginning of the basketball season, is most easily described as a party, with droves of students getting involved in the fun. This year, a local credit union provided a special opportunity: a randomly selected student had the opportunity to win $10,000 if they could sink a half-court shot. Unfortunately, the shot was not sunk. However, the night set an exciting tone for the rest of the Lion basketball season, encouraging fans to get involved, support their team and cheer like mad. //

DANCE + SOCIOLOGY '21
INTERVIEWED BY M. FARREN

What's your passion behind dancing? What started my love for dance was just the idea that I'm such a kinesthetic learner, and I'm very hands on, so getting to move my body to express myself was something very unique that I found in dance that I didn't find in any other school subjects or arts that I tried out when I was younger.

How would you say that LMU supports you as an artist? LMU Dance is very supportive just as a department because they foster an environment of versatility. They're willing to let us try out new styles with different instructors—guest instructors—everything that will help us become a better artist.

What is the dance community like? Everyone's very supportive and caring and close, just because we spend so much time together during technique class and extra rehearsal. No matter how tired we are, everyone's just always having a good time together.

Do you have a favorite dance-related memory? My favorite memories are probably show weeks, just because it's awesome to see the department come together. You really feel how powerful the community is. So, going through late nights of tech rehearsal and warms ups and all of the different shows really brings us close together.

VOLLEYBALL | MARKETING '20

TO SAVANNAH SLATTERY (Marketing '20), it was just another game: she jumped into the air and spiked the ball onto the opponent's side. It was just another kill in Slattery's storied college career. But, unbeknownst to the 5-foot-11 outside hitter, it happened to be her 1,000th.

Slattery recalled how she felt when she discovered she'd passed such a significant milestone: "It's exciting. I didn't really know what number I was at before I hit it, but it was cool to learn that I had that many. It was a nice reminder of all my hard work over these four years. My teammate who graduated last year told me, and so did my assistant coach."

A kill is an outstanding way to score: a player spikes the ball, sending it crashing into the other team's court, earning the player's team an undefendable point. Kills can only be earned when a team is truly working together. "For however long the rally's going, that's really when you have to be focused in," Slattery said. |||

BLAZO MITROVIC (Accounting '22) has played water polo ever since he can remember. "My mother was a swimming coach, so she got me into water polo," he said. Hailing from the Balkan country of Montenegro, the sport was a significant part of his life growing up. Mitrovic recalled, "Ever since I was young, I've been watching water polo, since it's huge where I'm from. I've been watching the best in the world back home, and that's how I fell in love with water polo."

During the 2018 season, Mitrovic was named Western Water Polo Association Freshman of the Year. In 2019, he won the Western Water Polo Player of the Year Award.

Mitrovic attributed these accolades to his teammates, not only as great support in the pool, but as great companions apart from the game. "They were really helpful when I moved from my country to this one."

Mitrovic listed winning league as an important goal, but one he wouldn't be able to accomplish on his own; he emphasized the camaraderie and sportsmanship of his teammates as the driving force of his success. "We have really good chemistry in the pool and outside of the pool. The guys are amazing," Mitrovic affirmed. With multiple awards to his name already, Mitrovic's humility is an inspiring reminder of the importance of relying on one's team. |||

Eli Scott

BASKETBALL | SOCIOLOGY '21

A LOT CAN be understood about Eli Scott's (Sociology '21) basketball prowess by taking a look at his stats. In his third season as a Lion, Scott, #0, is the Swiss Army knife of players, averaging the most points per game (15.5), the most rebounds (6.7) and the most assists (4.3) on the team.

His unmatched versatility, however, was perhaps best exemplified through his achievement of a triple-double during a game against Grambling State University on Dec. 7. This rare accomplishment, in which a player reaches double digits in points, rebounds and assists throughout the course of a single game, was not only a personal triumph for Scott, but represented a major breakthrough for the LMU basketball program as a whole. Scott is the first basketball player in the University's history to attain the esteemed triple-double.

Scott recalled, "My teammates — they were rooting for me the most." This bond with his fellow members of the basketball team is one of the most rewarding and significant aspects of his experience at LMU thus far. "These guys are like my family," he explained. A leader not only in his actions on the court, but also in his words, Scott seeks to give his teammates the same support they offer him by reminding them that despite the challenging nature of transitioning from high school to college basketball, they should maintain confidence in their abilities. "College is a lot harder than high school," Scott asserted. "It's kind of like a rude awakening because everyone was the best player in their respective areas."

Regardless of this rude awakening, however, Scott has managed to excel on both an athletic and personal level. He reflected, "Emotionally I've matured a lot. That's probably the biggest thing. On the court and off the court, just the way I carry myself is different than when I first came here." He draws inspiration for this self-confidence from his two favorite athletes, LeBron James and Floyd Mayweather, both of whom he reveres for their ability to stay level-headed while others doubt them. This focus on an even-tempered perspective might be surprising to those who have witnessed Scott's remarkable intensity when competing on the court, but Scott contended that, "At the end of the day, it's just a game. It doesn't define who you are as a person." His motivation to play his best stems from a desire to build a legacy like those of LMU legends before him. "When people mention Hank [Gathers] and Bo [Kimble]," Scott envisioned, "they can hopefully mention my name also." |||

Jacob Jackson

SOCER | POLITICAL SCIENCE '22

EVER SINCE HE first toddled onto a soccer field at the age of 3, Jacob Jackson (Political Science '22) knew he wanted to be a goalkeeper.

"I walked onto the field and went straight to the goal," Jackson remembered. "Ever since then, I never wanted to be the guy on the field, never wanted to score a goal. I just wanted to be the guy that saved them and got hit by the ball."

And that's what he's done for the last 15-plus years.

Before coming to LMU, Jackson was a goalkeeper for Real Salt Lake Academy. He was there for three years and that's where LMU Assistant/Goalkeeper Coach Mike Oseguera saw Jackson in action. "I recruit the goal keepers, and when I first saw Jacob in club, I was like 'Man, this could be our guy for a long time.'" It wasn't long until Jackson joined the LMU soccer team.

Unfortunately, his college career had a rough start. His second week of training, Jackson suffered a devastating knee injury, tearing his ACL. Jackson was forced into a period of redshirting (keeping a student athlete out of competition to extend their period of eligibility).

Though he needed an entire year to recover, Jackson didn't give up. He worked hard every day to overcome his injury and get back in front of his goal.

Jackson's first game in goal was a shutout — no goals were scored on him. His next game also was a shutout. Then the next. Three more games after that, and Jackson's shutout streak had reached six games.

Oseguera was astounded. "These six games where he got the six shutouts in a row were his first six college games ever. That was pretty impressive, being able to come off such a substantial injury and not get any reps in spring, not get that much in the summer, and then step onto the field and be so successful."

When asked if he ever thought he'd be this successful, Jackson answered, "To an extent, yes. I always dreamed about playing college soccer and becoming a pro. I made it here so far, so I'm going to keep believing that I can achieve my dream." //

NICK FRASSO (Political Science '21) has had a love for baseball ever since elementary school. Ever since he was 6 years old, he's relished being on the field as frequently as he can — but he had a turning point during his senior year of high school that inspired him to take the sport even more seriously. "That's when I decided to play baseball in college. I came to LMU and they saw something in me and that just made me want to play more."

He chose LMU because of the care he felt from the school. "It's a good environment because they support every aspect of being a student here," he said. Frasso credits LMU for giving him the resources needed to grow stronger as a student athlete. "I came in kinda small ... Weight training and practicing helped me get stronger and gain weight. It's definitely what LMU has helped me out the most with."

Frasso and his teammates have all grown together under their coaches' tutelage. "We have 35 players on the team. Whether you're playing or not, there's always a way to help the team. To bring energy—being hype in the dugout—it all helps out. The baseball team is usually super close," he commented.

This emphasis on sportsmanship and strengthening the bond between the players put Frasso in the perfect position to shine in the diamond. When the All-American list for 2020 was announced, Frasso was listed as a second team pitcher. He was both excited and humbled to be included. Frasso said, "It feels good. It's college baseball, so just to be able to be named with some of the best players is an honor."

Frasso's secret? "Sometimes it can feel more like a job than what you really want to do. Always remind yourself to have fun. Whenever things get a little serious, it's nice to remember why I'm here." Consider that an insider tip from an All-American. |||

BASKETBALL | PSYCHOLOGY '20

THERE ARE MANY athletes who boast competition as being their inspiration, but Raychel Stanley (Psychology '20) boasts a different drive: love for her teammates. "All the teammates I have had are unconditional friends that I have for the rest of my life," she said. She wants to help her teammates be the best they can be, on and off the court.

Stanley studies psychology with the hopes of one day becoming a sports psychologist. She wants to help athletes navigate life and the pressures of being a part of an athletic team. As Stanley pointed out, "it's more than just a sport."

Athleticism has been a prevalent part of Stanley's life ever since she was a child. She detailed her family dynamics and described how her brothers inspired her to work and play harder: "They both played basketball and football. I just went along with them and played basketball." She found a knack for the game, and hasn't stopped playing ever since. Even when it got tough, she kept going. "I have a brother in the NFL, and I can't quit. I don't want to look like a quitter to my brothers," she confessed.

To help keep the challenges of being a student athlete from getting to her, she has certain rituals she always makes time for before she has to go on the court. "I always take a pregame nap. We have to be here pretty early. Then I come to the court, and I get ready."

Stanley has a serious dedication to the game, but when pressed about why she loves basketball specifically, her answer was in line with her care for those that surround her. "My favorite aspect of basketball is my teammates." //

ON FEB. 29, members of the LMU community gathered to honor the life of late basketball star Hank Gathers. Outside of Gersten Pavilion, where Gathers spent countless hours practicing, competing and entertaining fans with his mastery of the game, the crowd watched as a statue of the LMU legend was unveiled. Marking the 30th anniversary of the exceptional 1989-90 men's basketball season, in which Gathers helped lead the team to a West Coast Conference championship, the event welcomed back members of the '89-90 team as well as well as their coach, Paul Westhead, who reminisced on Gathers' extraordinary impact both on and off the court. Despite his sudden death at the age of 23, Gathers remains an inspirational figure. The statue stands as a reminder of his remarkable character, talent and legacy. //

"the one thing" WITH T.LAW

MATT FARREN (SCREENWRITING '21 + TOWER EDITORIAL DIRECTOR) SPENT THE MORNING OF JAN. 16 ON THE PHONE WITH PRESIDENT TIMOTHY LAW SNYDER, PH.D., WHERE THEY DISCUSSED THE PRESIDENT'S THOUGHTS ON THE SCHOOL, THE STUDENTS AND HIS STORIED PAST.

PRESIDENT TIMOTHY LAW SNYDER, PH.D.

INTERVIEWED BY M. FARREN

Edited for length and clarity

What's the one thing you think everyone should know about LMU?

President Timothy Law Snyder, Ph.D. (T. Law): That our mission guides us as we seek to create the world we want to live in. Our mission, founded in the Catholic, Jesuit and Marymount traditions, calls on us to be purposeful, to understand the dignity of every person born and to seek to make a better life for those here, for those to come and for the earth itself. It's pretty simple. You know, a lot of people will just try to place it in the Catholic terms and so they think, "Oh, you're Catholic, so, I guess y'all go to church." But it's much bigger than that and as you know it doesn't require that anybody go to church or do anything similar. It's a very broad, broad mission and it has to do with all humankind.

What is the one thing everyone should know about you, specifically?

T. Law: Oh, I'm kind of a rocker. I used to do that for a living, professionally. I think a lot of people know that I'm very musical, but I used to be in a rock and punk band in the '70s and '80s and toured the Midwest, so it was fun. And I sang — sang and played the guitar. We were called Whirlwind, and we hated the name after a while, but our agents forced us to keep it because once you build a following if you change your name you have to rebuild it.

What is the one thing you might suggest to improve an individual student's life?

T. Law: Develop comfort with failure. Learn how to fail. Learn how to embrace failure as a necessary step toward greater creativity. On a couple occasions, professionally, I did not behave according to reasonable human standards and I had to unpack that. I think, more abstractly ... I'm a mathematician and you learn when you're trying to prove something and you're kind of trying to find a secret in a cave—it's in a little cell in a cave—and you keep taking these pathways toward it and never know which one's going to pay off. And so ... when you're trying to prove something mathematically, [there's] a cascade of failures followed by—if you're persistent and if you embrace failure and learn from it—eventual success.

What is the one thing you wish you could do differently?

T. Law: I would start piano lessons at age 2. My mom wanted me to take them and I'm like, "Mom, get rid of that thing, it's just a piece of furniture." Cause I was into stereos, and things were electronic at the time, and I didn't really care that much about music. I kinda liked it, but then like a year later it was all I would think about, so that was a mistake. I should've said "Mom, let's pick up on that, let's go."

What is one thing that might unexpectedly connect you to a student?

T. Law: Well, music is one thing. I'll see a student who's carrying an instrument and we start talking and quite often through that experience I learn about some artist or they learn about one—usually it goes both ways—that's one thing. Another thing is DACA [the federal Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals program]. I'm just so passionate about upholding that and so when I meet with our DACA students, or students who think about DACA, either in support of it or against it, that can be a real connecting point. It's controversial and I think we're all pretty passionate about it.

What is the one thing that always makes you sentimental?

T. Law: Oh, it's when I hear from alumni. And they can be age-old, you know, they can be Golden Lions from 50 years ago, or they can be somebody who's been out five years and they're coming back for their reunion. But hearing how they're making an impact, how they're changing the world, and often how the core curriculum continues to guide their life and their love and their decisions—and almost always they say they should have paid more attention in the core—so just seeing that the core curriculum lives through and with our alumni, that's a great, sentimental joy.

What is the one thing you'd like to see change about the school?

T. Law: Well, there are a few things, but I think the biggest would be to make it more [financially] accessible. I think particularly about the community college students who have an on-ramp because of the great arrangements that we've made with some 26 schools, but often we don't have the financial aid to welcome them. And, you know, when they have everything you could want—they have the ability to learn at LMU, they have the desire, they've demonstrated the persistence, they've met all the criteria—but then they can't afford it, there's a certain tragedy there. And these are people who can go on to change the world for the better and when we're not accessible, that can be really frustrating.

What is the one thing you love most about LMU?

T. Law: Students. That's a no-brainer. I have to go the long way to get into campus. We're not far away, but if I could go through this little gate it would be a five-minute walk rather than a 20-minute walk, and the surprise gift in all that is sometimes when I go in I get to walk in with a student or faculty member, so, it's just really fun getting to know students and that's why we occasionally have seniors over for dinner and just—that's why academics are so young. Like, you'll see these professors, they're like 80 and they look 60. It's because of the students. You're just constantly regenerating all persons around you, and I love your optimism.

What is the one thing that's most surprising about being president?

T. Law: The width of the position compared to other positions I've had—provost, dean, professor and so on—is just dramatically larger, so you're answering to the public, you're answering to civic officials, you're answering to media, you're answering to parents, to alums, to athletics fans, and then obviously the students, faculty and staff. So, I think it's just—and this shouldn't surprise anybody—when you experience it ... everybody wants a piece of you. And I can be at Starbucks on a Sunday and I've had a mother come up to me and talk about what a miracle it is that I'm there because she's finally able to talk with somebody about her daughter's financial aid. Another thing that's surprising that I think people might get a kick out of is everybody thinks you're smarter than you are when you're president, I mean people really think I'm some savant or something and I might be an idiot savant, but half the time I'm an idiot ... I don't mind that because what it means is they think highly of the institution and they're pouring all those thoughts into you as the person who appears the most on the cover page, if you will, so that's kind of surprising.

SHANIYA EPPS MARKETING '20

What has been the most memorable moment of your college experience? I experience moments nearly every week at LMU that I know I'll remember forever. One of the most memorable and influential moments in my college experience was definitely when M-School [a marketing program] sent out acceptance emails.

What's the most important thing you've been taught in this program? CBA has taught me many invaluable lessons — both academic and practical in nature. BADM 4950 (Business and Social Responsibility in the Global Economy) taught me the most important one: businesses have an ethical responsibility to give back to the communities that they affect, which includes its employees, consumers and even the government.

What was the most important thing that you had to learn on your own through this program? In CBA, professors give tons of individual and group projects to simulate the work we'll be doing in the professional world ... I learned on my own that when you put in enough effort, projects you make for class can serve you way beyond their due date.

What is the most important change this program has inspired in your life? The change it's inspired in my life revolves around the choices I make. Many of the daily actions we take are connected to a business somehow. Am I personally supporting businesses and organizations that respect their employees, consumers and society at large? ... I reflect on that question every day.

What is your favorite thing about your program? The professors. Absolutely the professors. The business college is filled with brilliant, dedicated professionals who truly care about their students' enrichment and success in the real world.

Competition can bring out the best in CBA students.

BRYANT K. ALEXANDER, PH.D., DEAN
COLLEGE OF COMMUNICATION AND FINE ARTS

“As dean of a college that comprises Communication Studies, as well as the Performing and Fine Arts — I want every student in this college to embrace the immense power that they have to make a difference in the world.

This through the critical, artistic and creative skills that they have nurtured and developed here at LMU. Skills that far exceed the aesthetic and pleasure of seeing, doing and the experience of self and others. But skills based in an ethic of critical care, culture and community; skills that embrace communication as art, and art as communication — each presenting a mechanism that serve as mirror to society, and offering strategies to reimagine the world in which we want to live.”

CB YEVOLI PSYCHOLOGY '22

Whether using their hands – or their feet – CFA students create in a variety of ways.

Student performers fill the air with music, the melodies floating through the concert halls.

From Shakespeare to Lin-Manuel Miranda, the student actors can breathe new life into any text.

No detail is too small: with their precise linework, CFA students put the “fine” in fine art.

ZACHARY BIRDSALL MUSIC '21

What has been the most memorable moment of your specific college experience? The most memorable moment of my experience within CFA has been singing the National Anthem at the December [2019] DNC debate. It was such an incredible experience and such an honor to participate.

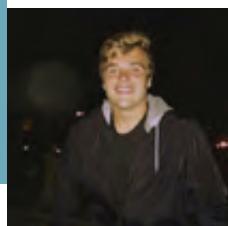

What's the most important thing you've been taught in this program? The LMU Music Department has not only exposed me to the depth and expanse of disciplines within music performance and composition, but has challenged me to broaden my horizons and draw what I can from each discipline to greater inform my knowledge as a vocalist and overall performer.

What was the most important thing that you had to learn on your own through this program? Coming into a classical music program with very little prior experience in classical music or music theory definitely proved to be a challenge initially. But working through those challenges has opened me up to an entirely new world of thought, aesthetics and possibilities.

What was the most important thing that you had to learn on your own through this program? Because of the LMU Music program I have become a more disciplined, dedicated and consistent musician. I feel incredibly equipped to continue to challenge myself to grow in whatever musical context that may be.

What is your favorite thing about your program? My favorite thing about the Music Department is 100 percent the people. It's an awesome community to be able to be a part of.

Meaningful Relationships

Dr. Stackle on Enduring and Profound Connection

TO SAY THAT RELATIONSHIPS can be complicated would be an understatement. From friendships and romantic partnerships to co-workers and professional associates, being in near-constant interaction with others allows for a lot of potential miscommunication and misunderstanding. Yet, within these encounters, there also exists the possibility of developing meaningful and enduring relationships. Dr. Erin Stackle, professor of Philosophy at LMU, explained the mindset and circumstances necessary to foster such a reality.

But, first: What is a meaningful connection? According to Stackle, a meaningful connection can likely be identified as one that is somehow central and integral to a person's identity. Determining whether or not a relationship meets that standard can be difficult, but it is not impossible. If students feel a lack of fulfilling relationships in their lives, looking outside of one's social circle might seem like the most logical first step. However, reflecting on the relationships one already has can be a good starting point. "It's probably the case that someone who feels like [they don't] have meaningful relationships nonetheless has some relationships," Stackle stated before continuing, "but it seems like if [they're] feeling like those relationships are not meaningful connections, there's some way in which [they're] not feeling like [they've] able to be [themselves] in the relationships." Thus, establishing the specific ways in which parts of one's identity are stifled in certain relationships is crucial to forming stronger ones in the future.

The value in creating strong bonds that stand the test of time, Stackle believes, is, in part, the sense of security that they provide. "We want to be loved for our own sake and we want to have people we can count on, but I think that just takes time," she explained. Without this time invested, it becomes more likely that a person's value in their relationships is derived from what others can gain from them, either materially or emotionally, rather than a genuine appreciation for the person themselves.

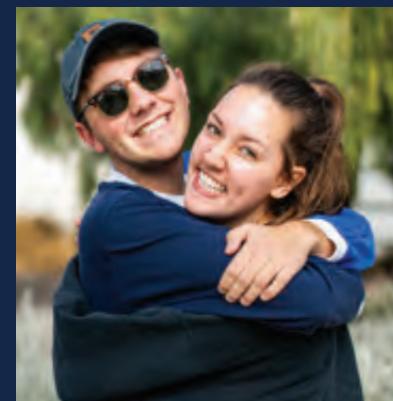

When it comes to academic and professional settings, such superficial, transactional exchanges can seem like the norm. To navigate one's transition into these territories, Stackle emphasized focusing on the concept of honor, asserting, "You have to establish an identity as a person that gets taken seriously by other people. You have to think... what's the realm that I'm entering, who are the people in that realm that already have honor, and what are the things that I need to do in order to communicate to the people who have honor that they should take me seriously."

Investing time into people may seem difficult during a busy semester, and self-discovery often gets pushed aside when stress is prevalent. These relationships are crucial in order to navigate the chaos, and knowing oneself is the foundation necessary to find the relationships that will stand the test of time, and will truly bring fulfillment. ///

WHAT I WISH I KNEW BEFORE I GOT TO COLLEGE
 THAT I KNOW NOW IS: ALWAYS SAY YES. THE
 MOST IMPORTANT MEMORIES, FRIENDSHIPS AND OPPORTUNITIES I HAVE BEEN BLESSED WITH HAVE BEEN DURING MY TIME HERE AT LMU. WITHOUT BEING COURAGEOUS AND ALWAYS SAYING "YES" (EVEN WHEN I DID NOT WANT TO), I WOULD NOT BE THE PERSON I AM
 TODAY. RECOGNIZE THIS SPECIAL TIME IN YOUR LIFE,
 THE SPECIAL PLACE THAT IS LMU, AND ALWAYS SAY
 YES. IT WILL CHANGE EVERYTHING.

Congratulations for graduating from LMU with a Bachelor of Arts in Business Entrepreneurship. We are so proud of you, Son! Your accomplishment is an honor for our entire family. It is a tribute to everyone who came before you and sacrificed in order to allow you to have the opportunity to attend college. Your ancestors would be so pleased to know you have earned this degree. Life is a journey, and the road is sometimes steep, unpaved and narrow. It is a testament to your determination that you have stayed on the path and reached this landmark—you are graduating from college! As you continue, remember to enjoy yourself along the way. Look for good mentors to show you the ropes, lend a hand and get good advice and encouragement when you are in doubt. Fill your extra time with healthy activities and worthwhile projects. Find friends who love life and are supportive, kind and dependable. Spend time with people who lift your spirits and appreciate your humor and kindness. Go out into nature and fill your eyes with beauty and your heart with wonder. Give back to your community. Keep loving deeply, believing in a power greater than yourself and stay connected to us. We look forward to seeing your life unfold and making memories with you always. We saw this on your school website, and it sure embodies you: "You might be an Entrepreneurship major if you have 'fire in the belly', have a passion for new ideas, believe in your own endless capability, enjoy being your own boss, look forward to hard work, dream about changing the world and don't mind taking on responsibility." Keep dreaming BIG, Adam. We are sure you will change the world for the better. You have already begun!

How time flies! From your fist day of school to the great man you have become. You make us very proud! Sabemos que vas a conseguir lo que te propones, sigue tenaz y nunca cambies ese carácter que te hace único! Adelante con la siguiente etapa de tu vida ...Te queremos muchísimo

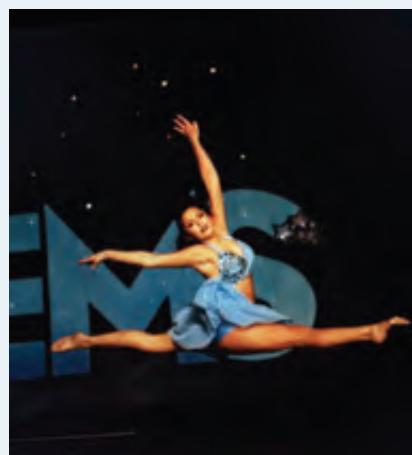

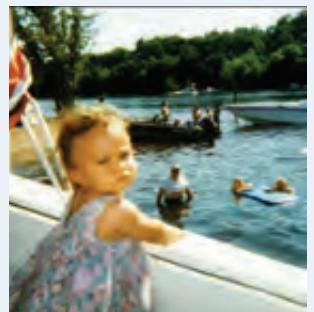

PAPA, MAMA, MARIFER Y ANA PAU

ALYSSA PARRA

I hope you never lose your sense of wonder
You get your fill to eat but always keep that hunger
May you never take one single breath for granted
God forbid love ever leaves you empty handed
I hope you still feel small when you stand beside the ocean
Whenever one door closes I hope one more opens
Promise me that you'll give faith a fighting chance
And when you get the choice to sit it out or dance

I hope you dance
I hope you never fear those mountains in the distance
Never settle for the path of least resistance
Give the heavens above more than just a passing glance
Promise me you will always choose to Dance!

LOVE YOU...
TO THE MOON AND BACK!

ERIKA NEGI

Erika Congratulations!! While these four years were meant for you to learn, I discovered I too learned a lot in the process (the conversations we had—and the occasional drama...) So thanks for that!

YOUR DAD

PS: Great to see you can now get up in time in the morning—that I estimate is worth half the tuition fees

BRIDGER CAICEDO

So proud of our Renaissance man! What an unbelievable journey of growth you've been on these fast and furious four years! You've taken the promise and achievements of your adolescence and found success through a ton of hard work, courage to take chances and just being a good dude. We can't wait to see what comes next on your great adventure!

ALL OUR LOVE, MOM AND DAD

AMBER LOGAN

Amber,

We are so proud of you and all your accomplishments. You are a beautiful young lady inside and out. We know you will excel in everything you do, and are so excited to see what journeys you will encounter. Your dedication, hard work and kind spirit have served you well. Always believe in yourself and trust

God for guidance.

WE LOVE YOU VERY MUCH,
DAD, MOM, GARRETT AND CONNOR

TIMOTHY TOOLE

Timothy, you are a unique individual composed of equal parts intelligence, creativity, humor, diligence and motivation. From an early age, through your years at Loyola Marymount, you have originated ideas and pursued your passions with complete and undeterred energy. Whether acting a part in a production, posting exceptional academic results, planning campus-wide events, perfecting EDM DJ performances or managing streetwear retail locations for MadHappy, you devote yourself and your limitless personal energy towards delivering excellence. It is fair to say you strive for perfection, every day. Few individuals possess the work ethic and dedication to achieve the results you achieve regularly. What is more astonishing is that you are exceptionally kind and achieve your ends while treating others respectfully, as you would like to be treated. You can elevate the mood and performance of all that encounter you. As parents, we are proud of the young man you have become and believe you are going to impact the world in a positive fashion, while staying true to your personal compass. Our sincere and heartfelt congratulations on a collegiate career very well done!!!

WITH LOVE, PRIDE AND ADMIRATION, MOM, DAD, LAINEY, GRIFF AND THE PUPPIES

NICOLE INFANTINO

When your journey began at Loyola Marymount University four years ago, it was hard to say goodbye to our little girl. We anxiously awaited your phone calls as you boldly traveled the world with a fellowship in Italy and semester abroad in Germany. While pursuing your BS in Biology pre-med you also held leadership roles in Sursum Corda and VP of Honors, started an official Just for Clicks Tap Dance Club, published for research and so much more..... Made some lifelong friends along the way. Your journey at LMU is not over yet, as you have already begun your Masters in Healthcare Systems Engineering. We are so proud of the young woman you have become, excited to see what the future holds.

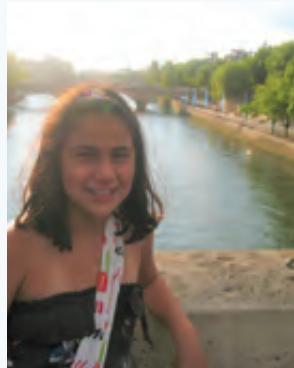

LOVE MOM, DAD, PETER AND GRANDPA

HALLIE RYAN

Hallie—Celebrate the accomplishment. Celebrate the achievements. Most importantly, celebrate the journey that allowed you to encounter the people that made your thoughts expand and your heart grow. We are so proud of you.

LOVE, MOM AND CHRIS

ALEXIA VOSKANI

LOVE MOM, DAD, AARON

AMELIA JAY

Congratulations Amelia! We couldn't be more proud of you. Stellar student, loving daughter, supportive sister, kind and caring friend, and a simply wonderful, genuine, beautiful human being. Thank you for sharing so much joy with us all!

WE LOVE YOU SO MUCH, MOM, DAD, TOBY AND BOOKER

MIA SAMSON

Boldly adventure forward, you've made your family proud!

MEGAN & RILEY HERBERT

Caps off to a job well done! Keep moving forward, do new things, dream big and believe, look back with a smile and go forward with courage. Experience life.

WE LOVE YOU BOTH, MOM AND DAD

DAVID ABRAHAM GOLSHIRAZIAN

Dear David,

We are so proud of you and your accomplishments. Rather than allow the many obstacles that lay in your path to hinder your progress, you built high standards and principles, making a strong foundation for the future. The development of your self-reliance is a strength that you built on your own, and it served you well on many occasions. We know you will generously share your extraordinary gifts with the people and situations you encounter along the way. We wish for you a healthful and happy life and may that beautiful smile and laughter that so many of us love will always grace your face. You know how much we love you, but frankly, we may be a bit jealous of how fine you have become. Our hearts are filled with pride—and so should you be on reaching this worthy achievement.

LOVE, MOM, DAD AND BRANDON

*The Matterhorn, Switzerland

ROBERT "WALLY" DRYDEN

Wally, Congratulations!

We are very proud of you. We are in awe of your superman accomplishments while you were at LMU. From being president of Phi Delta Theta, playing lacrosse all four years and being a team officer, being a senator for the ASLMU, being in Order of Omega, studying abroad — there is nothing you did not succeed at. We are also very proud of your academic accomplishments and know that you will apply your degree in Entrepreneurship successfully. Most of all we honor your kindness and thoughtfulness to us and everyone whose lives you have touched.

LOVE, MOM AND DAD

PRISCILLA MORENO

PRISCILLA your dedication, amazing work ethic and commitment over the last four years define you as an awesome young lady!! We are so proud of you! We have enjoyed watching you grow in your love and perseverance of theater, your dedication to your a-cappella group, your friendships and continued commitment to academic success! Congratulations on this amazing accomplishment! LMU graduate 2020! May life bring you many new adventures, successes, and always remember to believe in yourself!!

LOVE YOU AND ADMIRE YOU,
MOM, DAD & BROTHER XOXO

KATIE DAVIS

Kates! We could not be prouder of you! You did it ... finished in four ... and completely rocked it! You are wise beyond your years and have such a great head on those shoulders! You've conquered challenges and navigated change like none other! How is it that our little girl is now a college graduate! Watch out world ... Katie is out to get ya! We love you beyond words and MORE always!

MOM, DAD AND JOSH

RALEIGH BURK

Congratulations Raleigh! We love you and are so proud of you! Enjoy your sweet life!

MICHAEL CASIM

Dear Michael,

Congratulations for achieving a very important milestone in life. Your hard work and dedication paid off. We never doubted your decision to make LMU as part of your college experience. LMU has given you the opportunity to develop lifetime friendships. You have continued your vision to be a man for and with others. Your passion for business will support your commitment to create social change. We could not be prouder of what you have become and looking forward to your bright future. We will always continue to support and pray for your continued success, happiness and more blessings. We love you and thank you for letting us enjoy and be part of your ride.

TAKE CARE!
MOM, DAD AND MATTHEW

MANNA ZELEALEM

Congratulations Manna! We are so proud of you for achieving this milestone! You have worked so hard over the past four years, made your dreams come true along the way, and have been a major inspiration to us all. We can't wait to see what God has in store for you next. May God bless you & help you always. We are forever proud to be your family.

WITH ALL LOVE AND RESPECT,
HASSET, AMAN, MOMMY AND DADDY

CHRISTINE PETERSEN

Congratulations on all you've accomplished, Christine. You've left your mark at LMU and now it's time to move on to your next grand adventure. We're your biggest fans, and we'll be behind you every step of the way — loving you and supporting you in all you do. As you've sung so many times, "May the road rise to meet you. May the wind be at your back. May the sun shine warm upon your face. May the rain fall softly on your fields. And until we meet again may you keep safe in the gentle loving arms of God." We love you so much!

LOVE, DAD, MOM, MICHAEL & CHRISTINE, ANDREW AND MATTHEW

KELLIE KRIEVS

Your journey to graduate hasn't been an easy one. The past four years have come with many ups and downs. Through it all, I have most admired your strength. You have fought through all adversity in being a student, mother of two, and wife. Your family and I are extremely proud of this milestone of an accomplishment you've achieved. We look forward to many more ahead of you.

LOVE YOU,
MOM, ADAM, JAMES, AND JOSEPH

JINGMEI HELM-MACLEOD

Jingmei,

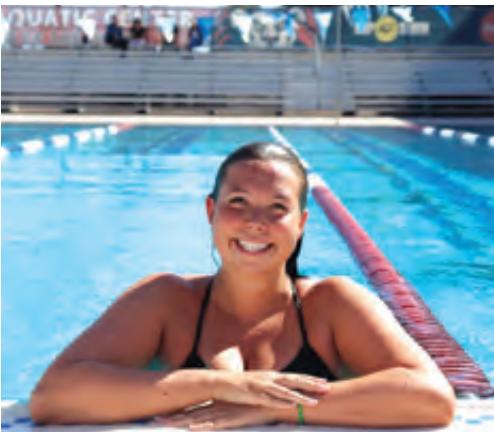

You have accomplished & done more than we could have ever imagined. So confident. So strong. So wonderfully you. When you are determined, nothing can break your stride. Jingmei Helm-MacLeod. You have been blessed with strength in body and mind. You have been burdened, with an amazingly long name. Sorry about that. We love you to the moon and beyond. Maybe you know that but we will say it again, and again. And again. 143

GABRIELLE CARUFEL

From the time you were born, you have amazed us. We couldn't be more proud of the fun, loving and compassionate woman you have become. You have faced challenges with strength, confidence and determination. These attributes along with your dedication and perseverance will help you to be successful wherever life leads you. We love having you as our daughter/sister and know that no one could ask for a more loyal friend. Congratulations on all you have achieved including being on the Lions swim team, Deans List and Biology major. Keep pursuing your dreams! We have loved every moment of your journey so far and look forward to what is yet to come.

WE LOVE YOU, MOM, DAD, ISABELLA AND BIANCA

ANN WARQUE

A better Lord, we praise and thank you for giving us Ann! We acknowledge the talents that you have bestowed on her and the graces and the blessings that empowers her to share it to the world. Truly, we are humbled. Ann, continue to walk in the way of the Lord. He will guide your every move and bless your decisions that it may be in accord with His plan for you. Believe that His way is the fruitful and life affirming way. We are proud of your many accomplishments. You continue being a conscientious and generous person. And most especially, do not stop being our beloved daughter!

CORINNE JONES

So hard to believe the sweet little girl in this picture is now a senior in college! What an amazing journey it has been and it has been an honor and a joy to share it with you! You are a bright, kind, loving, smart and feisty young lady and we know you have an incredible future ahead! We could not be prouder of you! We love you all the tons!

Today is a milestone. It tells you how far you've come. Keep learning, keep accomplishing, and keep venturing on through your journey. We are so proud of you Miranda. You are smart, strong, courageous, resilient and beautiful inside and out and we are blessed to be your family and will always support you in all you choose to do. As Oprah Winfrey said: "If you really want to fly, just harness your power to your passion. Honor your calling. Everybody has one. Trust your heart and success will come to you."

CONGRATULATIONS AND ALL OF OUR LOVE, MOM, DAD AND KYLER

AVAMARIE SCHROEDER

Congratulations! Your family is very proud of you and we enjoyed the many adventures along the way. You have achieved a solid foundation of knowledge and have grown into a confident young woman. Life will continue to challenge you and test you, but know that you can overcome anything because of the person you are now. Keep positive company and continue to make time for your mind, body, and soul. Embrace the journey ahead of you and keep your eyes on the prize!

WE LOVE YOU, MOM, DAD AND JORDAN

ANDREA CARVAJAL

Congratulations on this big moment of your life! There are simply no words to describe how proud we are of the woman that you have become. You are ready to conquer the world! Go and chase your dreams. Remember that we will always be there for you in the good times and the not so good ones. Love you so much!

MOM, DAD AND ALEX

AMERICA NEGRETE

“As your new adventure begins, be fearless and conquer what lies ahead.”

—America Negrete, 2016 HMSA Graduate

Congratulations, Ame! We are so incredibly proud of you! You have worked hard and accomplished so much. We pray that God will always bless you and guide you, and that you can give the best to your life. Tu familia que te ama!

PAPA, MAMA Y FERNANDA

CAMERON BELLAMOROSO

We're so proud of all that you've accomplished at LMU and, even more, of the kind, hard-working, compassionate man you have become. Thank you for being such an amazing son, brother, grandson, and friend! You bring light, laughter, and love into our lives. Armed with that, and your creative, enthusiastic, brilliant mind, you can accomplish whatever you dream. Dream big!

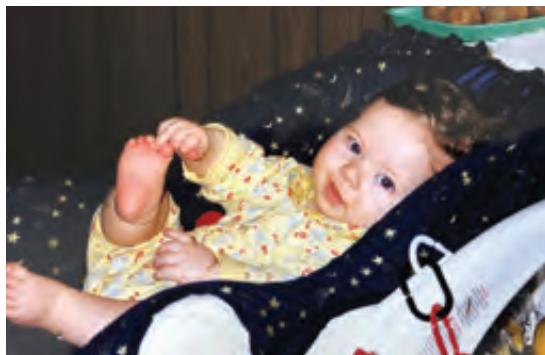

ALL OUR LOVE, MOM, DAD, MARIAH, KIKI, PAPA, TUTU
AND THE REST OF YOUR FAN CLUB

NANA TURKSON

Congratulations sweet Princess, we are incredibly proud of you. It seems just like yesterday when you started your beautiful journey at LMU, and here you are graduating with your classmates. Your hard work and perseverance paid off. You've accomplished so much in your 21 yrs and can't wait to see what's next. Your focus, drive and vision is going to take you exactly where you should be: the top, excelling in life, faith, family, and career.

YOU ARE DEARLY LOVED, MOM AND DAD

LUISA BROWN

My baby girl (Boots) I am so proud of you! You did it! Watching you grow up & succeed in all that you do has been my greatest pleasure; the last 21 years with you have been full of adventures and fun, and the best of my life. You are smart and funny and beautiful and independent, and we all love you and your fun and sarcastic sense of humor. Grandma, Grandpa, and Steve would be so happy and proud to see you graduate from LMU. My wish for you is simple –enjoy life, take chances, be true to yourself, make your dreams come true and always have fun! I LOVE YOU so much!

LOVE, MOMMY XOXOXO

ISABEL GONZALEZ

Very proud of you and all that you have accomplished. Continue to be your amazing self! So much ahead of you, keep reaching. Love you very much!

LOVE YOU VERY MUCH WITH ALL OUR HEARTS, MOM,

DAD WHO WILL ALWAYS GUIDE
YOU FROM HEAVEN.....AND YOUR ENTIRE FAMILY!

JESSICA DICKERSON

You have been, are, and always will be our SUNSHINE! We love you more than life itself & we don't have the words to express how proud we are -not of what you've done, but of everything you are -everything you've worked so hard to become -all the experiences you've braved and all the amazing future plans you've set for yourself. Your kindness, perseverance, positivity and sense of discovery have, and will continue to inspire us and everyone who is lucky enough to have you in their lives! We love you, Jessica Nicole Dickerson! Team Dickerson is always here for you! Congratulations! U DID IT!

NICHOLAS AVALOS

We're so proud of you. You're a hard worker, thoughtful and kind person. You have a bright future ahead of you.

WE LOVE YOU. FROM DAD, MOM & DANNY

ERIN PURNELL

KAELYN NOVAK

Kaelyn, I am proud and humbled by the way you approach your life and how you move through each challenge and milestone with strength, grace, and a loving heart. I hope you continue to listen to that quiet voice that comes from your gut. It is powerful, intuitive and instinctual. Continue to be courageous and listen. Go forward with your silliness, vulnerability and innocence. They can co-exist happily alongside your strength, resilience and maturity. There are endless adventures & possibilities around the corner waiting for you. Go out into the world and know you are so very loved.

AMANDA COLLETTE TIETZ

Congratulations to our incredibly amazing, magnificent and beautiful daughter, Amanda, on her LMU graduation! The past four years have whizzed by and we are so proud of everything our little girl has accomplished. You can achieve whatever you want in life, all you have to do is believe you can and we believe in you. Take pride in how far you have come and have faith in how far you can go. Your future is bright and it's time for you to shine. Stay sweet, stay fierce, and most importantly, stay you!

WE LOVE YOU,
DAD, MOM AND ERICA

ALLEGRA HENNINGTON

Congratulations, our beautiful daughter, Allegra! You are exactly what your name suggests – joyful and lively! We've watched you mature from a toddler who didn't take to strangers, to a young woman who loves to meet new people, stands up for her beliefs, asserts her opinion, makes people laugh, travels the world and is the life of the party! We're so proud to see you, an only child, go from a girl who didn't love to share her toys, to someone who'd give her last dollar to a person in need and who is concerned with the fates of others around the world. We admire your work ethic and how you always take a leadership role and never follow the pack. Your academic achievement during college has been incredible. You be YOU and we love YOU so much!

YOUR MOMMY, LORNA D. HENNINGTON, ESQ.

Daughter we are so proud of you! You have achieved, at this stage in life, more than many young people ever will. You have demonstrated the courage to walk through your fears and sacrifice your time with friends & family for something so great that no one can ever take away from you — a bachelor's degree. Education is the key to life. The more you learn, the more mindful and enriching your life will become. Your father has always told you that they can never go where you are going in life because one day you will be a future leader of the world! You are the greatest daughter I could have ever imagined having. I love you forever, Booosch!

YOUR FATHER, MARSHALL L. HENNINGTON, PH.D.

MONICA WILLIAMS

Monica,

You'll always be our "Tiny Dancer" and now you're our "LA Lady!" We're so proud of all you've accomplished and beam with pride as we watch you grow as an artist. Keep chasing your dream and do what you love... a new adventure awaits.

LOVE ALWAYS, MOM, DAD, MICK, BEN & BEAR

ASHLEY RIETMANN

Congratulations on your graduation! LMU has been a wonderful home for you for three years. You were able to study abroad in Croatia, volunteer service in Nicaragua, help with research in the biology department, work for the tour guide office, be involved with Delta Gamma, and make life long friends. You are such a beautiful, inspiring, and intelligent woman on your way to doing great things in your life. We are so proud of you.

LOVE, DAD AND MOM

ADAM GREGER

Adamo, we are so proud of you! You continue to amaze and inspire us every day. We admire how you make a difference in this world through the passion, fire and energy you bring to what is most important. You will always have our love and support for everything you do. Congratulations!!

WITH LOVE, MOM, DAD, KARA AND CHLOE

ALEXANDRA B'LLAMAS-REYNOSO

Another milestone! You grew into a beautiful, strong woman right before our eyes, but you will always be our little girl. Congratulations!

LOVE, MOM AND DAD

LILLY WEBBER

Dearest Lilly,

You are our wish and you came true. Congratulations on your outstanding achievements, a double major and a minor in four years! Your drive, intelligence, and commitment will continue to serve you well as you move forward toward your next wonderful adventure. But please remember, you are so much more than your accomplishments and what you do. It is your love, your kindness and your compassion that make you who you are, a woman of grace, depth, character, and soul. Wherever you go in the world and whatever you do, we are always behind you and always cheering you on! We love you infinitely and are so excited for you! Rock on, Lilly!

MAMA AND LALA

VICTORIA CASTRO

In the blink of an eye, you went from our brown eyed and curly haired baby girl, to a determined, beautiful young woman. From all-night study sessions, to all night parties with your friends, you have made memories you will cherish forever. We are so proud of your accomplishments, and are excited for your future.

LOVE MOM, DAD AND STEPHEN

ANDREW NARAG

“In a world where you can be anything — be kind.”

Dearest Andrew,

Congratulations on your college graduation! We are extremely proud of what you and your brother, Jared, have accomplished. We look forward to seeing your dreams and aspirations become a reality now that you have a good foundation to build on. Believe in yourself as we have always believed in you and be the best version of yourself you can be. Put your trust in God for he will never lead you astray. Remember you and Jared will always be our greatest treasures. Take care of yourselves and each other.

OUR LOVE AND SUPPORT FOREVER,
MOM AND DAD

SARAH SHARPE

“Discipline is the bridge between goals and accomplishment.”
—Jim Rohn

Congratulations on your graduation! Our lovely Sarah, we are so proud of you. You have reached your goal with determination, intelligence and hard work. Enjoy this moment and let it sink in. Remember this day and the sense of pride and accomplishment you feel. Know that you can call upon this memory as inspiration to move forward towards your dreams. Life is an adventure... enjoy the journey!

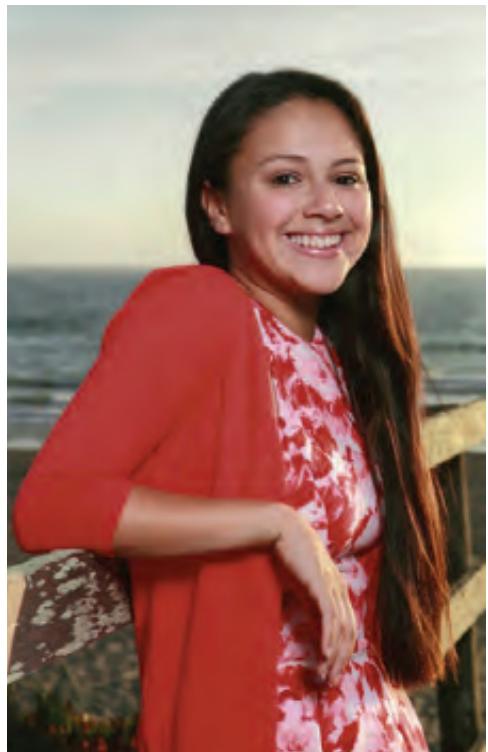

WITH ALL OUR LOVE, MUM, DAD AND CHRISTINA

CHRISTIAN HUHN

Life is not linear. There is no script. You have the heart of a lion, let it lead your path. Have faith in the journey ahead, and above all else, trust life. With all of our love and belief in you, we could not be more proud as your parents.

CASSANDRA NUNEZ

Congratulations Baby Girl, Time has flown by before our eyes. You have become an accomplished and compassionate young woman. We have no doubt you will do wonderful things wherever you go. Continue to shine your light on the world!

LOVE MOM, DAD & MINNIE

AYLA KHOSHABA

You're going to stumble along the way any time you learn a new skill or start a new task. The only way you'll ever learn anything is by making a few mistakes first and then improving for next time. Work may seem like too much to deal with, but just take everything a step at a time. Remember that you can't accomplish everything in one giant sweep, so just do a small task at a time. Before you know it, a huge feat will be under your belt. "Everything small is just a smaller version of something big." —Finn from Adventure Time

TESSA KRAEMER

To our dear Tessa—You are a rising star of stage, screen...and the classroom! We are proud of your tenacity and dedication to excellence. Congratulations!

LOVE, MOM, DAD, ALEXANDRA, JOEY AND SADIE!

ANDRE HACOBIAN

To our son Andre,

You have made it to the finish line! We are so proud of you. Over the years, we have watched you evolve into the passionate young man you are today. Your creativity and innovation have captivated us and brought immense joy to our family. Not only are we blessed in having such a hardworking son such as yourself, but your sisters are equally as grateful for having such a caring brother. We all love you dearly, and have no doubt you will achieve greatness in your lifetime. Now is the time for you to shine and make your mark on the world.

WE LOVE YOU,
MOM, DAD, SARAH, CAROLINE &
CHRISTINA

DONOVAN MOINI

Dearest Donovan,

We admire you for your noble characteristics and impressive leadership skills. You have shown strength by accomplishing remarkable achievements. Graduation is an exciting beginning for you to explore your new dreams. Embracing your greatness is your gift to the world that opens you to new possibilities and opportunities. You are a charitable treasure to us, and we love you very much. Incredibly proud of you, we are!

CONGRATULATIONS,

MOM, GRANDMA, ELLA, DANIELLA, ARIAN, ANDREW
AND CATHRYN

CHLOE FORD

Your success is not only a gift to yourself but also to those who have loved and cherished you as their legacy.

Undoubtedly, you will leave your own and we cannot wait to watch. Those who continue to love and cherish you wish you the best in all that you do and with God's blessings, we know you will continue to succeed. Thank you for being a loving, honorable member of our family.

LOVE, GRANDMA, GRANDDAD AND LIZ, MOM,
DAD, PAPA RON, UNCLE RALPH & BRANDY
AND FAMILY, SUE & JAMES & FAMILY, RYAN
& GG AND ALL OF YOUR COUSINS AND EXTENDED FAMILY.

JAMIE KOLBRENNER

There are not enough words in the universe to truly describe how we feel about the most beautiful, caring, and talented young woman in the world. Your epic life's journey continues and we are so excited to see how it will unfold. There is no doubt that the dreams and goals that you have set for yourself will be accomplished. We will continue to be your guide on this map of life, and we are certain that one day you will raise the OSCAR and/or Emmy for the BEST in every category!!!

BRANDON LOVE

Brandon,

We've watched in amazement as you've grown into the person you are today, and we're watching with great anticipation to see what you become. With your talent and determination, the sky's the limit! Needless to say, we are so proud of you!

You have inspired us and taught us so much. May God continue to keep you and bless you as you create your path in life like no other. "Dedication, hard work, plus patience, the sum of all your sacrifice".

Congratulations, you did it!

LOVE YOU BEYOND MEASURE,
MOM, JASON, JUSTIN AND FAMILY

SARAH GOULART

Congratulations Sarah! You are going to be an incredible teacher. We all love you very much and are so proud of you!

JESSICA DE LA TORRE

Our sunshine, Jessica. We are so proud on how you've grown into a remarkable woman, loving daughter and inspiration to your sister. You've faced and conquered every challenge with grace and determination; now a wonderful career is waiting for you. With our unconditional love, we will always be here for you & with you. May God continue to bless you & keep you safe. Congratulations & cheers to your bright future!

DAD & MAMA

Jess, I am so proud of how far you have come and the accomplishments you have had along the way. I could not ask for a better role model in my life. Remember that I will always be here for you as your sister & best friend. Are you ready to conquer the world? I am! I can't wait to watch you take life head on.

I LOVE YOU FOREVER & ALWAYS. YOUR SISTER, SHOBE

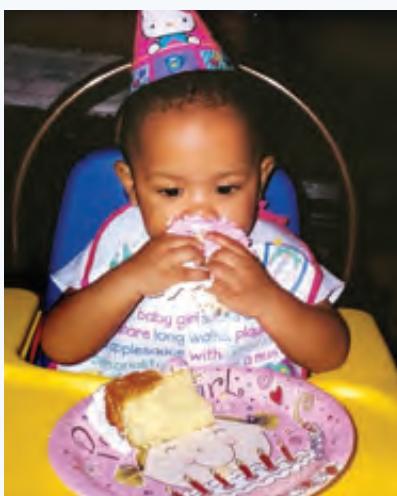

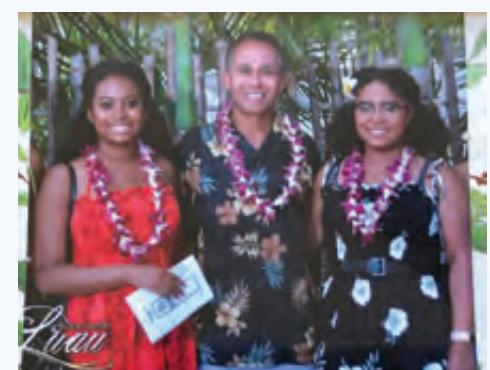

Congratulations GD1 Jashley. We are so happy & proud to see you finish your undergraduate and continue with your MSA. Lola & Lolo are just in the wings excitedly watching you attain your goals in life.

KEEP IT UP, JASHLEY! STAY SAFE & GOD BLESS! MORE!

As you end a chapter in the Jashley Chronicles, may you never lose sight of what is ahead and face each day with much appreciation in life. We are proud & excited to see the Jashley up ahead! Congratulations!

LOVE YOU -TITO MENG, AUNTIE, & KRISSY

MANDY MOORE

OUR DEAREST MANDY,

We are so proud of you and have always called you our very own “Celebrity!” You have always worked hard and excelled in everything you have done through grade school, high school and now at LMU. We look forward to your achievements in your career and in life. Congratulations to our smart, gifted and lovable daughter!

ELLIE PITCHER

It has been my life's joy watching you blossom into the woman you are today. I am in awe of your resilience, compassion and drive. I cannot imagine a more perfect daughter. I look forward to watching you continue to grow and make the contributions to our world that I know you are destined to make!

LOVE, YOUR BIGGEST FAN, AKA
MOM

OFELIA PULIDO

Dear Ofelia, Congratulations for accomplishing a major milestone in earning your Bachelor's Degree in Sociology! We are all so proud and happy for you. You made it! You are a strong Latina leader! Si Se Puede! Enjoy life, challenge yourself, and make wise choices. The journey is not finished, let God be your guide. All of us will always be here for you, we love you always and forever. Don't forget to take a walk on the beach, enjoy the waves, and look up to the sky. The best is yet to come! I'll always be with you mijita.

God Bless you always. LMU 2020!

LOVE,
DAD AND THE PULIDO FAMILY

NATHAN SANTOS

Nathan,

Four years ago, after we dropped you off and watched you move into Rosecrans dorm, we left our hearts on campus and could never imagine how fast these years would pass. Today, mere words can't describe our happiness. Your college graduation is a day we have envisioned since you were born. You have proven to be a hard worker and relentless in achieving your personal goals. During this journey you have transformed into a stellar human being. Thank you for giving us the opportunity to be by your side every step of this journey. Never doubt that you are loved beyond measure, God is with you ALWAYS, and that you have the brightest future ahead of you! WE pray the Lord's greatest blessings on your life! May He cover you with His unfailing love wherever you go and give you the confidence and grace to live out the great purpose He has for your life! Wishing you endless love, happiness and success!

LOVE ALWAYS,

NDILULA NAUKALEMO GLORIA DEL MAR

From small beginnings to great heights! Missy: It is with a feeling of awesomeness and gratitude we've reached this day. You climbed the mountain and conquered it. We love your determination and humility, your consciousness about your environment and people around you, your zeal for life and your beautiful intoxicating laugh. You have the world at your feet to conquer! Step into adulthood with confidence! Step into your greatness!

COLE JACOBI

Congratulations, Cole, you did it! We are so proud of you and all that you've accomplished. You have so much in front of you. You'll achieve much, but you'll also be challenged. Just know that you have the tools and character to overcome those tests of life with perseverance, integrity and honesty. Enjoy the adventure to come and know that your family is always behind you.

LOVE, MOM, DAD AND TREY

MORGAN BURROUGHS

To our dear Morgan,

We are so proud of everything that you have accomplished at Loyola Marymount University! You have taken the steps to create the future you desire. Even though we have lost you to Los Angeles, this is where your future lies. We love you and can't wait to see what exciting opportunities come your way!

LOVE FROM YOUR FAMILY,

MOM, DAD, MADISON, BOOTS, BITSY, JAX AND CYRUS

CAROLINE OTTEN

After four years at LMU, you are a new creation. Your new found talents are showing through and we can't wait to see what path you take. Keep making life-long friends, dare to be different and challenge the status quo. We love you and are praying for your future happiness and success.

LOVE MOM & DAD

RYAN RIEBE

Dear Ryan,

Congratulations on earning your Bachelor of Science Degree in Mechanical Engineering!! You have worked hard, put in long hours and persevered. You are a man of character with a sincere sense of personal integrity. We love you and are so proud of you! Remember always, the road that leads you away ~ will also bring you home. AMDG.

LOVINGLY MOTHER & DAD

NIKKI NOORI

Sweet Congratulations Nikki!

As we celebrate this milestone and everything you have accomplished, we want you to know that we are extremely proud of you! We have watched you grow into a mature and confident young lady. Good luck in your next adventures in life and we wish you only the best as you move forward to fulfill your dreams. We know you're headed for greatness! We are truly blessed to have you in our lives.

We admire and love you to the moon and back...

WITH ALL OUR LOVE,
BABA, MOM, CAMERON, RYAN & SEAN

CALLA KELLEY-REND

Calla: You have always possessed the spirit, intelligence, wisdom and open heart required of anyone interested in living a good life. We love you to the moon and we are so proud of you and your accomplishments. Keep following your passion, for "Only the wasteful virtues earn the Sun."

LOVE ALWAYS, MOMS AND MARINA

OLIVIA LANCEFIELD

To our daughter with the infectious smile, who was brave enough to take a leap of faith to attend a school 2,600 miles from home, leaving family and friends behind, and join varsity rowing; a sport she had never tried. All to fulfill a dream! And despite injury, she never complained; brought enthusiasm, a fierce work ethic, never to disappoint her team mates. Truly awesome! We love you to the moon and back.

SOFIA MERIZALDE

Sofi,

Hace 4 años con mucha ilusión y nostalgia te despedimos para que iniciaras tu vida universitaria. Me haces sentir el papá más orgulloso del mundo viendo todo lo que has logrado en tan poco tiempo. Una vez más te has demostrado que con esfuerzo cualquier cosa que te propongas se hará realidad. Me haces mucha falta pero me siento feliz de ver como ese bebe hermoso se ha convertido en una mujer capaz e increíble. Vienen nuevos sueños, metas, lugares, esta aventura de la vida continuará por siempre. Estaremos a tu lado amándote y apoyándote siempre. Nunca te olvides lo que te dije hace 4 años “Lo que somos es el regalo de Dios hacia nosotros, lo que seamos será nuestro regalo de Gracias a Dios”.

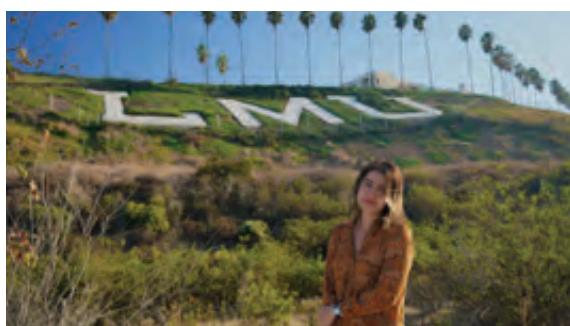

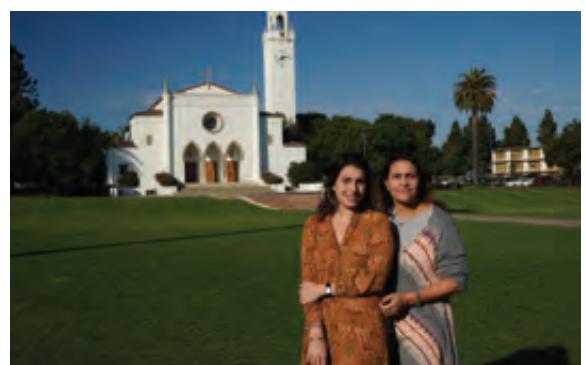

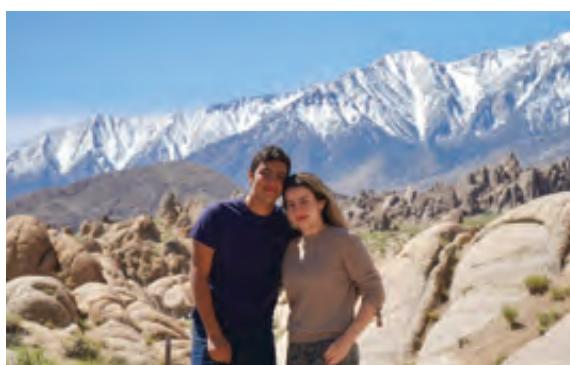

TE ADORO, PAPILI

Sofia,

Cuando te traje a la U tenia nostalgia y miedo de dejarte lejos y solita, pero verte feliz, segura y llena de ilusiones me dio la fuerza de hacerlo. El vacío que dejaste se llenó con tus logros y viendo como disfrutabas cada día. Eres bendecida por esta oportunidad. Gracias por tus enseñanzas, alegría y amor. Son tantas las satisfacciones que nos has dado que sólo puedo dar Gracias a Dios. Tu esfuerzo, pasión y el amor que le pones a todo se ve reflejado en este gran logro. Felicitaciones. Sigue disfrutando tu vida al máximo y trabajando por alcanzar lo que te propones. Y sigue tu camino de la mano de Dios, buscando cada día ser una mejor persona agradecida con todas las bendiciones recibidas.

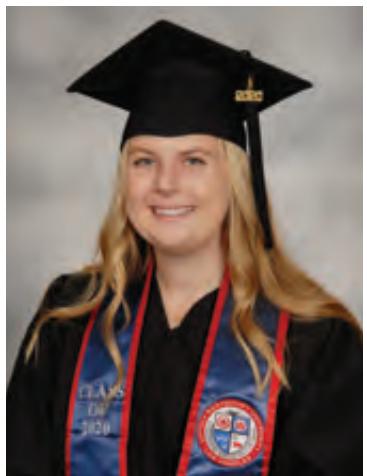

TE AMO, TU MAMÁ, CLAUDIA

SHARLA DAVID

Congratulations Sharla!
You have made us all very proud. We wish you the best of luck in your future.
We love you!

MAGGIE FREI

Congratulations Maggie! It seems like yesterday you started kindergarten and now you are graduating from college. We are so proud of you. You have accomplished so much with hard work, dedication and passion. You are a blessing and fill our hearts with joy every day.

ALL OF OUR LOVE, MOM, DAD AND KATIE

JULIANNA DUNIVIN

KELLY MILLER

Congratulations Kelly!

Sharing your life has brought us such joy, and it has been a pleasure to watch you grow and blossom. You are brilliant and kind and strong and brave and hard working. We couldn't be more proud of all you have accomplished.

Wherever your adventures take you, all our love goes with you. We love you so very much.

MOM, DAD, TOMMY, STACEY AND RUSSELL

Always remember – “You are braver than you believe, stronger than you seem, smarter than you think, and loved more than you can imagine.”

LENA ANI KAZANCHYAN

Dear Ani,

You make us proud in so many ways. It only takes an intelligent and smart daughter to graduate four-year college in three years. It was tough in many ways, but now you know how strong you are. Your compassion and commitment burst our hearts with pride. With your talents and determination, the sky is the limit. You are kind and confident and never let anyone to tell you otherwise. Don't ever settle for the second best, fight for what's right and never give up. I trust you will always make the best and the right choices. This is just the beginning. Can't wait to celebrate more of your achievements and accomplishments with you. You will always be our little girl, even as you grow into a beautiful and strong woman right before our eyes. Love you forever, like you for always, as long as we are living, our baby you will be!

LOVE, DAD, MOM, GEV

The Tower

The thirty-seventh volume of the The Tower was printed by Walsworth Publishing Company, 306 N. Kansas Avenue, Marceline, Missouri, 64658. Its 372 pages were submitted electronically as PDFs. Pagination was completed on four Macintosh Intel iMac computers using Microsoft Word 2016, Adobe Lightroom CC 2019, Adobe Photoshop CC 2019 and Adobe InDesign CC 2019.

Copy for the yearbook was written and edited by The Tower staff and supplemented by articles from the Los Angeles Loyolan. Interviews were edited for length and clarity. Throughout the book, type was set in Brandon Grotesque, Domaine Text, Jessica Sutta, SERRONA SANS, KIONA, Hunter, FAROE, SERRONA SANS OUTLINE, SEASPRAY and Ravensara.

Images were taken using a Canon 5D Mark III, a Canon T3i, a Canon 7D, a Canon 6D, Nikon D750, and a Sony A6500 digital camera. Some images that appear were submitted by students, faculty and school organizations.

Senior portraits were taken by Lauren Studios.

The Tower was printed for all full-time undergraduate students at Loyola Marymount University. The book was distributed on campus and each full-time undergraduate student was assessed a yearbook fee of $40. Inquires about any aspect of this book may be directed to.

Final Moments

A dynamic photograph capturing a moment of intense communication during a basketball game. In the foreground, a coach with light-colored hair and a grey polo shirt is leaning forward, his mouth wide open as if shouting. Behind him, another man in a grey polo shirt and a basketball player in a white jersey with 'MU' and the number '10' are visible, looking towards the action. The background is a blurred red wall, suggesting a gymnasium setting.

After an uneven six years at the helm that resulted in an 81-108 record, men's basketball coach Mike Dunlap ('80) was let go in March. Dunlap, who had an exemplary student-athlete graduation rate, was replaced by Marquette assistant Stan Johnson.

“If I have learned anything it is that you cannot run away from who you are or from how you've been shaped by your experiences. Instead, you must integrate your past and present”

Monica Lewinsky takes the stage as the keynote speaker for the Los Angeles Loyolan's annual First Amendment Week. Lewinsky emphasized the importance of sharing one's story and speaking up with intention rather than for attention.

Perspective

From a new point of view, even the simplest things can turn into a work of art.

SPIRIT SQUAD

Inspirit

---

May we encourage and enliven the world with what we've learned here.

This Too Shall Pass

---

In the midst of a storm, it's easy to forget that the clouds cover a sunny sky that will shine once again.

Gratitude

Eventually it comes time to close a book and set it aside, but could we have asked for a better place to study?
