MAXWELL BRODIE Entrepreneurship

on his Wellness Wednesday booth, "Max's Closet"

What do you sell? Secondhand and vintage clothing.

When did you start selling clothing? I started selling clothing my freshman year of college, I was at a different school, [Santa Barbara City College] at the time, and I was 19 years old. I started selling at Wellness Wednesday the first year I transferred here, which was my junior year, that was 2023.

What's your favorite thing that you sell? I think the favorite thing that I sell is my jackets, specifically some of the higher quality ones. I really like some of the Carhartt jackets I've found, and I've even kept some of them for myself.

How has Wellness Wednesday helped your brand grow? I think Wellness Wednesday has opened me up to the L.A. market a little bit more, and I've been able to get some different opinions on fashion that I didn't have when I was in Santa Barbara. So, I would say it's challenged me to try to buy new things and offer up stuff to a market that I wasn't used to selling to. Another aspect to Wellness Wednesday that I really enjoy is the sense of community out here and being able to see the same people every single week — a lot of repeat customers I've formed friendships and relationships with — and other vendors I've gotten to know really well and work alongside.

I really like my brass jewelry because I hand cut all of them. So, it gives me a lot of freedom to kind of make whatever I want... . So that's really fun!

Q&A

SARAH HUTTER Economics

on her experience as executive producer of E2024

What were the most important events that you covered as a part of E2024? We went to Butler, Pennsylvania, two days after [Donald] Trump's assassination attempt. There were major news organizations from all over the country trying to get there, and we had booked this flight way in advance, which meant that we were able to get there before a lot of other major organizations. We went away from the scene and drove through the downtown area. We just pulled over on the side of the road, and I walked up and down the street. We took off our press passes and we were just speaking to the people as people. Even after having [Trump] almost get assassinated, their main issues were the down-ballot issues. So, their roads weren't paved. They weren't getting high-quality education. There's a huge drug crisis, and a lot of their friends and family were dying from that. Those were the issues that they were still focusing on.

Which event proved to be the most memorable for you? I think what I remember the most is driving hours upon hours through farm roads in middle America, driving through Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin and Michigan. We did four states in a four-day trip, really trying to understand what it means to be a swing state voter.

Transgender ROTC cadet dismissed as Trump reinstates military ban.

Vivi Dallmer, a biochemistry major at LMU, always dreamed of joining the military. Since middle school, she researched ROTC programs and initially pursued Army ROTC at Syracuse University. However, she chose not to disclose her transgender identity in her application during President Donald Trump's first term. After former President Joe Biden took office, she informed the program but was later told she could not be accepted, and her scholarship was revoked.

Frustrated but determined, Dallmer joined LMU's Air Force ROTC (AFROTC) program during her freshman year. She had never met another transgender ROTC cadet but resolved to fight for her place. Now, just months after graduation, she has lost her commission due to Trump's "Prioritizing Military Excellence and Readiness" executive order, which bans transgender individuals and those with gender dysphoria from serving.

The order, issued on Jan. 27, states that military excellence cannot be "diluted" by political agendas and mandates that service members meet strict physical and mental standards. It aligns with other Trump-era executive orders affecting the military, such as "Restoring America's Fighting Force," which opposes diversity, equity and inclusion (DEI) initiatives.

Dallmer's colleagues emphasize her dedication. Arlyn Liliana Argueta, a fellow ROTC cadet, praised her commitment to the Air Force's core values: "Integrity First, Service Before Self and Excellence in All We Do." However, under the new policy, transgender individuals like Dallmer face separation from service.

The military has long debated transgender inclusion. The Pentagon first lifted the ban in 2016, but Trump reinstated it in 2017. Biden reversed the policy in 2021, but the new administration has reinstated restrictions. The American Medical Association has stated that gender dysphoria should not disqualify individuals from military service, emphasizing there is "no medically valid reason" for exclusion.

Now, Dallmer is left searching for her next steps. Due to her military commitments, she has no internships or research experience. She is considering teaching chemistry or biology at local high schools. "I just have my degree and no resume," she said.

Despite it all, she refuses to be seen as someone who gives up. "I'm not leaving until you make me leave," she said defiantly. ◆

SMOKE, ASH & RECOVERY

Record-breaking Santa Ana winds and wildfires ravaged the city.

In January, devastating fires broke out across Los Angeles County, spreading rapidly due to unprecedented wind storms and dry conditions in Southern California. The fires forced thousands of people to evacuate. The Palisades and the Eaton fires burned 23,707 and 14,021 acres, respectively, destroying more than 16,000 structures.

NINA BERGLUND Marketing

on losing her home in the Pacific Palisades fire

Can you describe what happened the day of the fires? I was hanging out with a friend then, and so I drove back home and when we got the emergency evacuation notice, I wasn't even home yet. I was at the intersection of PCH and Sunset, and there were fire trucks blocking my way to get home. Basically, the entrance to the Getty Villa was the entrance to my neighborhood. And then I went up 87 steps to our condo that we owned. Yeah, [there was] no functioning elevator. Then I grabbed whatever I could hold in my two hands, and left in my car. [The next morning] a neighbor texted us to tell us that our condo was affected by the fire. We didn't know how gone it was until I saw a reel on Instagram of an aerial shot of my building.

What has it been like processing everything that has happened in the past few weeks? The first week was really, really hard. Lots of crying and also remembering all the things that I wish I got to bring and didn't. You know that question that you always get asked. It's like, "if there was a fire, what would you bring?" I don't think I brought the right things. But it just kind of really readjusts your vision and your perspective on what is important in life, and it makes you really grateful.

What's your family's living situation like now? We are in a short term rental, not too far from school, in Inglewood. And we thankfully found a two-bedroom apartment in Playa Vista that my family can move into, because we have two dogs too, which has made it harder to find a place. It's been really hard because with the 30,000 displaced people from Malibu and the Eaton fires along with the Palisades, not only is there price gouging for rent, but everyone has been looking for a spot.

My slice of heaven
Burned to dust.
Try not to cry,
But sometimes I must.

The place I called home
Is no longer there.
It disappeared
Into thin air.

Ashes now scatter
Where dreams used to stay.
A life rearranged,
In a single day.

But embers still glow,
Though faint and small,
A spark of resolve,
To rebuild it all.

With hands and with heart,
I'll craft something new.
A place full of love,
And a brighter view.

This chapter may end,
But the story's not done.
A new day begins
With the rising sun.

LMU's Center for Student Collegiate Recovery offers a safe space with a multitude of programs for students in or seeking recovery.

BRADLEY SMITH

Director of the Center of Collegiate Recovery

Tell me about your role at LMU Recovery. I'm a licensed professional clinical counselor [and] a licensed advanced alcohol and other drugs counselor. I guide initiatives in early intervention, prevention, and harm reduction in emerging adults for substance use disorders and wider community mental health advocacy.

How'd you get involved with Recovery at LMU? In 2005, the University was struggling with responding to increasing episodes of alcohol and other drug-related conduct violations. I was one of [the] University's early certified substance disorders counselors, and we began a relationship, [we wanted to] turn these episodes of drugs and alcohol to opportunities for growth and healing.

Why do you think Recovery is important on college campuses? We know that about 75% of all Americans know or love someone who's struggling with a substance use disorder. We know that alcohol and other drug misuse really accelerates in adolescence and early adulthood. If you wanted to catch addiction, one of the best places to do so would be in the American college.

Have you witnessed any student successes of those in Recovery that you've been inspired by? That's the reason we're in this work — student successes. Our sort of bumper sticker explanation for what we do is, "We turn crash and burn into bruise and bounce," but the truth is, most of students do get better and they go on to lead lives [with] decades of contribution to their families, to the ones they love and to the broader communities. It's really quite exciting!

Q&A

ANGELA O'MALLEY
Associate Director for Recovery

What services does the Recovery Center provide? The Recovery Center is located in Malone Student Center, first floor, suite 113. We provide services of prevention, early intervention, education, peer support, one-on-one counseling, referrals to treatment, weekly support meetings [and] we can help refer students to outside parties for treatment or for any other type of therapy assisted services. We also provide Narcan training for students and are a distribution site for Narcan.

Why do you think Recovery on college campuses is essential? It's so important to have a collegiate recovery because it's a time where students are experimenting, exploring their identity, exploring substances [and] trying to make sense of [the] conditions of their life. Often, substances go hand-in-hand with that. The Recovery Center is also super important for our community mental health. Lots of students who participate in our program are there for mental health reasons. We support all recovery pathways, and recovery is not limited to alcohol and drugs, but any unhealthy behaviors. We have support and resources for all.

Have you witnessed any student successes by members of the Recovery community at LMU? We have an annual graduation celebration, so to see our students walk across the stage and graduate is super exciting because often students need to leave school in order to take care of their mental health or their overall wellness. What's awesome about recovery is the opportunity to pursue both academics and recovery. Students can actually finish [college], and it's really awesome.

What would you say to a student who's struggling with their mental health and/or substance use and is scared to ask for help? Pursing recovery and wellness can be scary, but when we're uncomfortable, we grow. Help is here, and don't be afraid to do something different.

JACK SHAIN Graduate Assistant

How did you get involved with the Recovery Center? I was an undergrad student here. I had a drinking and pill problem. Bradley Smith, the director of the Collegiate Recovery Center, threw me into what we call sober living. I got sober in 2014 [and] became a registered drug and alcohol counselor in the state of California.

How did you stay connected to the center after you graduated? I kept in touch with Bradley over the years. I kept volunteering wherever I could with LMU and in 2021, Bradley gave me a phone call and he asked, "Why aren't you in grad school?" I said to him, "I'd love to be in grad school." I applied and got admitted into LMU. When I finally started coming back in 2023, Bradley said, "Great! You're the grad assistant at the Recovery Center." So I've been involved since the beginning, and in the last two years, I became the grad assistant.

How does LMU define recovery? LMU does [not] define recovery as a completely 100% abstinence space. We define recovery, whether you're abstinent, whether you're employing a harm reduction model, or even moderation, or mental health, or eating disorders or an ally or someone that self-harms. [We] also include sex addiction. We provide a space where students can come who are all struggling with that. It's important because if we didn't have this space, the students wouldn't be students anymore. We find it really important [to be in] higher education and make sure our students graduate, that they are able to walk across the stage.

Q&A

"At first my sober life and my school life were completely separate ... but meeting other people who are in recovery helped me establish a community.

DANA WEBBER English

"Part of our slogan [is that] everyone's welcome, no matter what you've used; just know that your story's welcome, [and] your story is meant to be heard and loved.

Q&A

KAREN MEDRANO GONZALEZ

History + Economics

on the Christian Life Community (CLC) at LMU

How were you initially introduced to CLC?
I was first introduced to CLC because I joined the R.C.I.A. [the Rite of Christian Initiation for Adults] program. I was in my confirmation process and after that, they would just invite us to go to Thursday night events. The first thing I did was go on Ignacio Companions which was a service trip. That was the first time I think I truly encountered faith with other students. After that, I just really began to like CLC and I heard about faith-sharing groups. I signed up and I joined.

What does the CLC community mean to you?
I think the biggest thing that CLC means to me as a community is that it's a faith-sharing space. It's a space that gives you the opportunity to have faithful conversations and be aware that faith is a part of our everyday lives, at least for us.

Q&A

ADELE JAWED Studio Arts
on LMU Muslim Student Life

How were you initially introduced to Muslim Student Life? I heard about Muslim Student Life my freshman year when I went to the club fair. And then I got in touch with [Associate Director of Campus Ministry] Kienan Taweil. He's Muslim, but he comes from an interfaith background, so it was nice to hear that. I also was part of some clubs, like the Middle Eastern Student Club and the South Asian Students [Association]. And with those, there are Muslim students who I met and kind of got connected with.

What has the Muslim Student Life community meant to you since you joined? It's been a chance to explore a part of a community I didn't really have growing up. Growing up in Portland, there wasn't a large Muslim community to begin with. There wouldn't be anything in my schools. I remember [my] grandma [used to take] us to mosques. But then, she was afraid of the news and attacks on Muslims, so we stopped going. So I think it's just a chance of reconnecting with a community that I wasn't really allowed to have growing up.

AYRE MINDELL Computer Engineering
on the LMU chapter of Hillel

How were you introduced to the LMU chapter of Hillel? Pretty much my first day on campus, Hillel had a welcome Shabbat. I went there and I met a bunch of people that were currently on board. They made me feel really welcome and at home, so I've been part of the community ever since.

And what does that community mean to you? [Hillel] not only provides a center for my Jewish life while I'm in college and a place to celebrate Shabbat and other Jewish holidays with people that share my faith, but it also gives me a community of people with similar backgrounds to me. Being Jewish at a school that's primarily Jesuit can be difficult at times. Feeling like I have solidarity with the community of other Jews on campus is really powerful for me, as well as [it] just being a really fun place to make friends and do fun activities.

Q&A

STEPHANIE FLORES Biology
on being a Student Worker

What kind of community have you developed in the Student Worker Program? I feel like I've gotten to know a lot of people in the program. I'm pretty close with them. Every Monday, I'll host dinners and I'll invite multiple student workers to come over and have dinner. After your first year, you're in a different department, so you don't really get to interact as closely with everybody. You only see them on Friday for crew time. So I feel like that's been a great way to check up on everybody, see how they're doing and get to know them better.

Is there anything you think people would be surprised to hear about the program? Probably how much we do. I feel like there's a misconception of [the difference between] a student worker and a student employee. We do commencement. We set up all those chairs.

We did Fallapalooza. We do a lot of huge events. We're kind of behind-the-scenes helping out, so we work a lot of hours, and I feel like a lot of people on campus probably don't know what we do. But, we do a lot of work. And then we do a lot of stuff for departments. We'll be asked to help set up Wellness Wednesday. We help them with literally anything they could ask for. So, I feel like a lot of people don't know how much we really do.

GETTING READY The crew arrives early to Alumni Mall to set up for Wellness Wednesday.

on being a Student Worker

Can you tell me about the Student Worker Program? We're students that work different types of jobs throughout campus. You have to work in the recycling yard during your first year. But, every other year after that, you can get a desk job almost anywhere on campus in different departments around campus. It has really good opportunities.

What's been your favorite memory from your time in the Student Workers Program? There have been many memories from my time working in recycling. For instance, when my friend opened up a bag and then all the contents in it just spilled on him. We all just [burst] out laughing. Obviously, it was bad for him, but it was a pretty funny moment, and it was very memorable.

Haunting of Hannon

my view

KEVIN WETMORE

Professor of Theatre Arts and MFAPP Program Director on the process behind Haunting of Hannon

We've been doing this for 12 years, so we've kind of refined it. I usually start in the fall for the next year. So, as soon as this ends, I take about a week off and then I start writing next year's. I write about three-quarters of the script throughout the year.

[Then] I wait to see who auditions. If people speak languages or have special skills, we need to incorporate that into the Haunting. So, I like to add the extra stuff that they show me. They just told me what next year's collection exhibit is, and it's always based on the special collection exhibit.

The problem I have with things like Universal Horror Nights, which is lovely, but they rely on jump scares which are not scary. And being startled is just a physiological response to something unexpected. I want you walking out of here looking behind you to make sure there's nothing following you. I want you when you lie down at night to go, "Man, I hope that wasn't true what they told us there."

So, it's really about creating creepy, eerie vibes. It's about filling the audience with dread as they watch things happen and working with the students to sort of find the best way to do that.

We use a lot of old theatre tricks that people aren't used to seeing. So, if you're used to a sort of a walkthrough where it's just people jumping out and yelling "boo," then to suddenly be stopped and told, 'I foresaw your death last night,' is a lot more freaky. That's what we do here.

SCARED SILLY Haunting of Hannon takes its guests on a tour through a spooky version of the library that promises scares, chills and screams.

Q&A

ETHAN MULLEN Theatre Arts

What'd you do with your extra week of winter break? I went to the mountains near my house in Seattle with my family, and I went snowshoeing for the first time! And I went to the aquarium!

Is getting an extra week of winter break and losing a week of summer break worth it? Yeah. I felt like I had more time with my friends during winter break than I would have in the summer with the extra week.

Was there anyone that you were excited to see when you got home? Mostly my family. It was my little brother's birthday, and I was excited to see my best friends. One [friend] was abroad the whole semester.

What did you do over winter break? I went to a whole bunch of Eagles games, [so] go Birds! I'm from Philidelphia, so [I'm a] huge Eagles fan. I went home, I saw the Rockettes in New York and I spent time with my family and my dogs.

How do you feel about the longer winter break and shorter summer? I don't mind it because last year a lot of my friends got home after me. [Last year] I went home, [and] I was alone for a week because none of my friends had finished their semesters yet. So, I like that [break] lines up with a lot more schools now.

What projects are you all working on this year? We are working on our first indie game. We are doing an RPG set in this museum and we're having all this design based on certain art styles like Renaissance surrealism and impressionism and we're having, building an RPG in that classic 48-by-48-bit style.

What do you like about the club's community? It's a very open space. It's very respectful. We're ultimately a group of people, even though we have maybe different opinions, maybe different interpretations, we're able to very quickly decide on things. I don't think anyone's overbearing, I don't think that anyone's overcontrolling. It's a very safe space to share your opinions and everyone's voice is properly heard, and everyone gets their input in it and if it's great, your input becomes part of the game. It's fine if it doesn't. We're doing what collectively we think is best.

What part of the process do you enjoy the most? That kind of goes back to the collaboration part. The idea of having people with different ideas and figuring out how that actually molds together because cooperation and compromises are ultimately what makes us the best creatives from a personal and holistic teamwork point of view.

Q&A

JONATHAN WONG

International Relations

on being a member of the Chess Club

When did you start playing chess? So when I was around five, my mom sent me to a chess club summer boot camp. That's when I learned how to play. But then I got back into it during COVID as a way to do something that wasn't just class. And also because of "The Queen's Gambit." That was a great show. So, I got back into it.

And why do you like chess? Even with how old chess is, the dynamics of it still haven't fully been captured. It's a game full of infinite possibilities. I forgot the exact number, but when it comes to the number of positions you can reach, I think even if the first 20 moves are the same, the end conclusion can be very different. So it's a game where you can always learn more. You can always develop yourself. You can always get better.

And you've made a lot of friends in the chess club? Yes! We all use chess club as a way to hang out with each other and just play some casual chess.

How did you get into ROAR Studios? Tom [Nelson] and Kevin [O'Keeffe] asked me if I wanted to be the executive producer of ROAR, and to work my senior year to produce more projects and make ROAR a more established organization on campus, [with] us specifically focusing on podcasts and documentaries.

What are the plans for ROAR's future? I have two assistant producers working under me and we're looking to grow ROAR a ton. I won't be here but when I leave, I think it will aim to produce several documentaries and podcasts. [ROAR] gives the opportunity for students to have their voices heard. I think that there's a lot of room for strong ideas to be communicated through ROAR and impact campus in a really positive way, so I'm hoping [to see] that leveraged in the next coming years.

What's your favorite part of being in the DRP? I just love being able to do technical theater, I love doing sets, all the set things. I love construction, I love painting and I love just being part of the theatre community even though I'm not a major because it's a little bit harder to break into the actual productions when you're not a major. ZAC BROSKY Political Science on Midfield Avenue performing in Tiny Dorm concerts

How did you get involved in Tiny Dorm? [The Tiny Dorm team] reached out to us around early November. We're actually close with some of the guys that are sophomores. They hit us up, and they said, "let's do three songs, three original songs." We came one night. They already had [set up] all the cameras and everything. That's how we did it.

Can you tell me about the recording process for your performance? We have all the tracks prerecorded now and mixed. [We have] different mixers, and there are different tracks for each part. Each part was genuinely recorded and mixed to fit the sound in the studio. It was like a really professional setup with those tracks. We could potentially put out a live version or like a Tiny Dorm type thing on Spotify.

How did all the parts of Tiny Dorm come together? I think that the whole LMU music scene is really well-interconnected. Since these guys were able to use their skills behind film and television, and they had a lot of friends that were musicians and artists, it's like a merging of both aspects. It's fluid because everyone already knows each other, and everyone is super creative [and] knowledgeable in their field. That's why when you watch Tiny Dorm, it looks extremely professional. And so they saw how their friends in the music scene were doing and they said, "Let's bring this to life and show everybody by using the things that we're good at.

Q&A

JULIAN CURRIER Recording Arts

on directing a Tiny Dorm Concert

How did Tiny Dorm begin? I've been a huge fan of NPR's "Tiny Desk Concert" series forever. I saw that one of my friends at NYU was working on this Tiny Dorm concept over there, and I said, "I have to bring that to LMU." I proposed it to my roommate before the school year even started, and we picked our on-campus apartment with Tiny Dorm in mind. We wanted to make sure that the space made sense for what we were trying to do.

Where do you see the Tiny Dorm project going in the future? I would like [Tiny Dorm] to be like a staple of the [Recording Arts] community [because] it's a super small major and all four years, you [only] have classes with the people in your major. I'd like it to be a project that allows that community to be even tighter and also expanded, and for everyone in their unique skill set to be able to bring that to the project. It would be really cool if NPR was able to pick it up and kind of take it under their wing. Maybe even sponsor it a little bit financially.

Can you tell me about your musical skills, and how that comes into play with Tiny Dorm? I've always been a musician. I was never really able to master an instrument, but I was always really into technology and collaboration. I started doing music production, making beats and recording guitar. Eventually, I realized that a lot of those skills could translate easily into this project. Understanding that language definitely helps me a lot with just understanding how music is recorded and captured both sonically and visually.

Bill Nye, famed for his series "Bill Nye the Science Guy," visited campus for a discussion about science, specifically within the context of the First Amendment.

Bill Nye began the conversation by whipping out his pocket-sized Constitution, highlighting that the word "science" is stated in Article I, Section 8, Clause 8 of the text. Urging the importance of scientific literacy, he encouraged students to critically evaluate the content they consume amidst the increasing spread of misinformation.

The scientist also emphasized the impact of one's vote and how necessary it is for students to be engaged in politics. Though times may feel bleak, Nye believes that young people have the power to influence the future.

In closing, Nye shared three pieces of advice he would give his college self: Never pull an all-nighter to finish a paper, study all the questions that you could be tested on and get enough sleep. From watching him on the wheeled television in science class to listening to him speak on the Bluff, Nye has certainly impacted the lives of Lions.

"I guarantee you guys your degree from Loyola Marymount will be worth more the day after you graduate than the day you graduate ... on Crimson Circle's 95th Anniversary

How have you seen Crimson Circle change and evolve since you first got involved? I think all of the core elements are the same. Our values are the same, but our ability to live those values has really grown. Coming out of the pandemic, we knew who we were, but we weren't sure how to live that. So, it took a couple of years for us to build back up all of our traditions, all our relationships with our placements and once again become the org that we want to be. I think we really are that now. We excel in the service that we do. We have long-standing relationships with our placements. We also have really good relationships with each other. The brotherhood aspect of Crimson is really strong and that comes from how good our retreats are, our weekly meetings, serving with each other, all of that stuff. It makes us a really well-connected org.

During the anniversary celebration, did they highlight any significant facts about the org from the past 95 years? We also used to have a bigger presence on campus. There are a lot of events where, instead of having ASLMU or Mane [Entertainment] or even professional staff run them, Crimson was chosen as an organization to volunteer at these events and run these events. There was a lot of that, but also, Crimson was tapped for official functions of the school. We used to volunteer at registration every year when registration was something in person. Crimson volunteered at registration. And so I think Crimson Circle used to be much more involved in the operational fabric of the University.

HEARTS at work

The Service Organization Community is comprised of 10 recruitment-based groups each with its own focus. However, they share a common commitment to service and social justice.

"[My biggest achievement was that] for the first time in ages, Women in Politics had a full e-board and roster of members. We had lost a bunch of members and e-board members and were able to build it back up."

Giovanna Umpierrez
Screenwriting + Theatre Arts

"[My biggest achievement was] sharing insights with the club [learned from] having interned at [James Wan's] Atomic Monster production company. With those skills, we got funding [for] our members to submit to a horror screenwriting contest called Killer Shorts. We had a member place in the top 20% of all scripts submitted, and this year, we got even more people to submit! It was a wonderful opportunity to get to practice our writing [and] give feedback to each other. It makes me very happy to be able to foster such a collaborative environment filled with creative people!"

The Horror House Theatre Club

Grayson von Goetz
Computer Science

"When I started this club back up, every existing member had already graduated. We began as three people at the Involvement Fair trying to convince freshmen and friends to join. I feel that my biggest achievement has been going from that to having nearly 50 people attend our first meeting of the spring semester this year. We grew our numbers past what I ever pictured we could have."

The Mane Zone is LMU Athletics' official student fan club.

The Mane Zone is LMU Athletics' official student fan club, created to unite passionate fans and elevate school spirit at athletic events. Designed as a dedicated cheering section, the Mane Zone aims to energize stadiums and support student-athletes with pride, energy and enthusiasm. With guidance from Katie Hinkle, the associate athletic director for marketing and fan engagement, the initiative was launched to encourage students to rally behind their teams throughout the season. With its mission to build an inclusive and engaging fan culture, the Mane Zone provides a platform for students to actively shape game-day traditions and showcase their unwavering Lion pride.

SCHOOL SPIRIT Students gather and show off their Lion pride dressed in LMU merch.

THOMAS KLAPP Film & Television Production on pitching the idea of the Mane Zone

How did Mane Zone get started in the first place? It was the first home basketball game when I first started here. I noticed that there was no real student section. I had gone to Syracuse and there was a club there. In high school, we had that too. So, it was really shocking not to see that. And then I workshopped the idea for a few months. I went up to Matt Lerman, who is one of our associate athletic directors, and I pitched him the idea. He liked it. I had a meeting [with him]. I [went] more in depth about the idea. [And] one thing led to another...

Tell me more about what you want to do for the Mane Zone in the long term. Since I'm graduating next year, I really want it to continue. I want to make sure that everyone is welcome to join the Mane Zone. I always have this joke where I tell everybody, if you want to be a part of the Mane Zone, you just gotta ask me or show up to these games and say, "I want to be a part of the Mane Zone." I'll give you the blessing. I'll just say, "You're in!" It's really [about] letting people know that this is a thing. It's really all about fostering [a] kind of family commitment right here... LMU is family.

Iggy's change

From a playful cartoon to a more lifelike rendering, Iggy has transformed over time, embodying LMU's history, school spirit and enduring legacy of pride and resilience.

1955 Walt Disney Studios gifted Loyola College an early mascot illustration.

1987 An early version of Iggy poses with the Pep Squad.

1994 Iggy took on a more cartoonish look as he supported LMU through an athletics golden age.

2019 Iggy grew out his long red mane to mimic the University's logo.

2025 Leaving the gray and red behind, Iggy is back to his natural lion colors.

After dominating in West Coast Conference play, the women's volleyball team won its first-round NCAA playoff game, capping off a stellar season.

The women's volleyball team completed one of the finest seasons in its history by winning a thrilling five-set match against the University of Washington in the first round of the NCAA playoffs. The Lions later lost to Stanford University in the second round.

The team's 25-6 overall record included 16 wins (against two losses) in conference to finish as West Coast Conference (WCC) champions for the first time since 1996.

The team concluded regular-season play with a 3-0 sweep against the Oregon State Beavers. The victory completed an undefeated season at home.

Clinching the conference championship at home was a fitting end to an accolade-peppered, dominant year — as the players on the team combined for multiple WCC Player of the Week awards.

"This team's super special. I think all of us getting awards has to do with everybody on the team," said outside hitter Sophia Meyers (Sociology) before the team's first playoff game. "Every single one of us has contributed to the success of individual awards [and] team awards. We have so much love on this team — we love each other so much and that's why we've been so successful. We look at every single opponent the same, and I think we're going to achieve really good things this weekend doing the same exact thing," she added.

Numerous players were tabbed for WCC end-of-season honors, including Sam Hastings (WCC Libero of the Year) and Mia Schafer (WCC Co-Setter of the Year). Hastings and Schafer were names to the all-WCC first team along with outside hitters Meyers and Paige Flickinger.

Middle blocker Jiana Lawson was named to the WCC second team and outside hitter Marlee Arrington (Psychology) made the all-freshman team.

After taking WCC Coach of the Year honors, Trent Kersten took the top job at the University of Oregon and was replaced by Kolby O'Donnell, the eighth head coach in program history.

"[The team's] togetherness, their leadership, their work ethic — I couldn't have asked for a better team to be able to coach this season and to be able to make the NCAA tournament with," Kersten said. "We like to celebrate each other. If our bench isn't getting yelled at by the referee early in a set, then we're not bringing it enough."

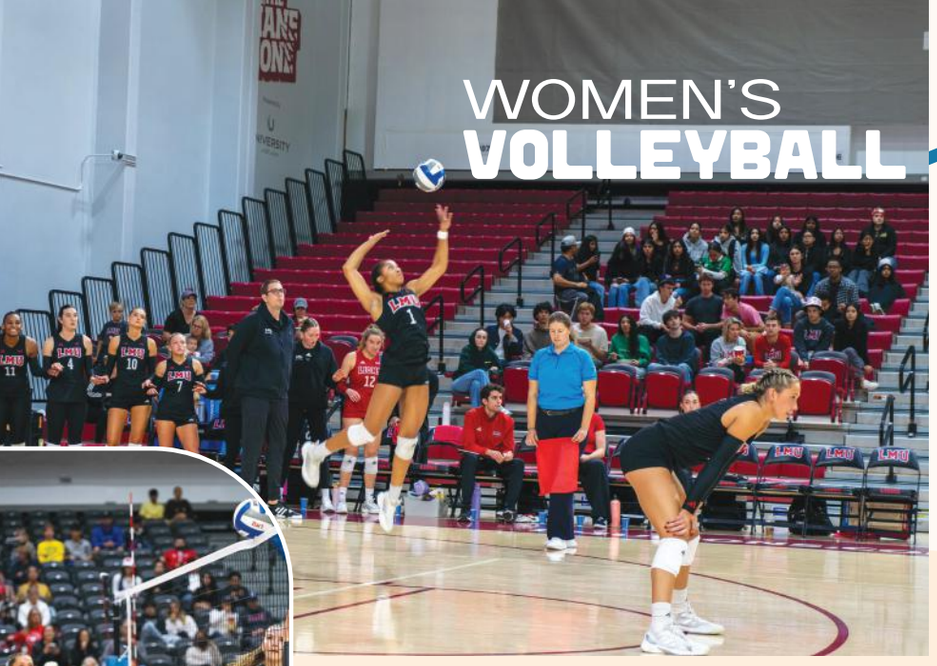
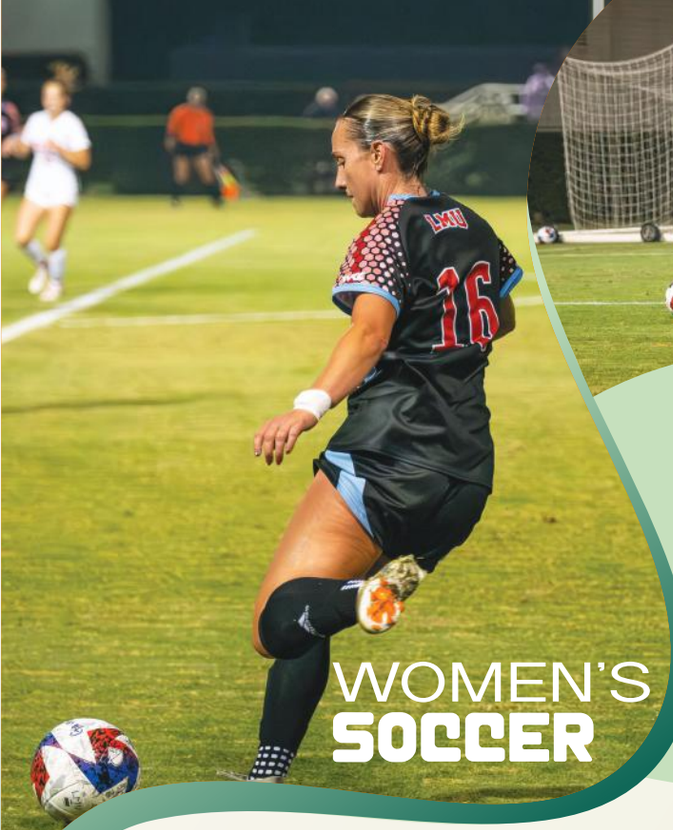
WOMEN'S VOLLEYBALL



WOMEN'S VOLLEYBALL completed one of its finest seasons in program history by winning a thrilling five-set match against the University of Washington in the first round of the NCAA playoffs before falling to Stanford in the second round. The team's 25-6 overall record included 16 wins (against two losses) in the WCC conference, where they finished as champions for the first time since 1996. Head Coach Trent Kersten capped off his tenure at LMU by taking home WCC Coach of the Year. Now at University of Oregon, Kersten was replaced by Kolby O'Donnell, the eighth coach in program history.

MEN'S SOCCER

MEN'S SOCCER struggled to regain the form of its historic 2023 campaign, finishing under .500 (6-8-3 overall, 3-4-1 in conference) on the year. The team completed WCC play mid-table in fifth place and were unable to qualify for the NCAA tournament. Sophomore forward Alejandro Fuentesal-Atalaya led the team with three goals.



WOMEN'S SOCCER

WOMEN'S SOCCER enjoyed a bounce-back season after a winless campaign in conference last year, winning 11 games (including five in the WCC). Senior forward Kylie Dobbs and grad student defender Jenessa Groves led the scoring with 11 and nine goals respectively. The Lions, who finished the year 11-5-2 with a 5-3-2 conference record, ultimately placed fifth in the 11-team WCC.

MEN'S WATER POLO

It was a down year for the MEN'S WATER POLO team, which finished 9-16 overall and posted a winless 0-6 record in conference play. Alum and Associate Head Coach David Carrasco was named the program's head coach at the end of the season, replacing longtime coach John Loughran who served nearly three decades in the top spot.

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL

MEN'S BASKETBALL

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL The team struggled out of the gate, enduring an eight-game losing streak in December and January, but rattled off four straight wins at the end of the season before falling to University of San Francisco in the West Coast Conference (WCC) tournament by a 75-65 margin.

Guard Naudia Evans was the only Lion to receive all-conference honors, making the second team. In January, Evans laid 37 points against Washington State University, scoring the second-most points in a single game in program history.

The Lions (14-16 overall, 7-13 in WCC play) finished the regular season in ninth place in conference. Head coach Aarika Hughes now has a 43-77 overall record and a .358 winning percentage in four years leading the program.

MEN'S BASKETBALL LMU's flagship athletic program spent yet another year mired in mid-major mediocrity as the men's basketball team concluded the 2024-25 campaign with a 17-15 record (8-10 in conference) and a third-round exit from the West Coast Conference (WCC) tournament.

After ending the regular season tied for sixth in conference play, the Lions were unceremoniously dumped out of the WCC tournament via a 94-77 trouncing at the hands of Washington State University during which the Lions never led.

Caleb Stone-Carrawell (who averaged 13.4 points per game) and Jevon Porter (12.5 ppg) were named WCC honorable mention selections. Underscoring the strong headwinds LMU faces in collegiate athletics' NIL era, Porter entered the portal immediately after the season ended and transferred to University of Missouri.

BASEBALL The Lions began with a 14-12 start to the season, which was bolstered by an impressive 11-4 record at home. First baseman Beau Ankeney was in the midst of a monster season at the plate, hitting .368 through 26 games with an OPS of 1.134 as of late March. He also led the team with nine homers.

SOFTBALL

SOFTBALL The team flirted with .500 at the season's midpoint, sporting a 14-18 record. Catcher Izzy Jamgotchian emerged as an offensive force, leading all Lions in homers (eight), RBIs (20) and OPS (1.096).

GOLF

BEACH VOLLEYBALL

BEACH VOLLEYBALL The 2024-25 season saw head coach John Mayer continue to develop one of the top beach volleyball programs in the nation. The team was ranked No. 3 nationally at midseason with a 22-2 record. LMU student athletes received West Coast Conference Pair of the Week honors four times by the end of March.

Despite the hot start, the team remained focused on staying grounded. "Our coach says the most important moment is now and the most important match is the upcoming match.... That's a good reminder, just saying the next practice, the next game is the most important," said Magdalena Rabitsch (French).

GOLF The golf team shot 27-under over the final two rounds of University of Arizona's National Invitational Tournament (N.I.T.) to finish fourth in the 14-team tournament. Trevor Algya recorded a Top 10 finish at the event, tying for eighth by posting rounds of 71, 69 and 67. Algya also recorded 16 eagles.

WOMEN'S TENNIS

WOMEN'S TENNIS The Lions hit a rough patch to start the season sporting a 4-9 record through their first 13 matches. Stefania Rogozinska-Dzik led the team with seven singles wins as of the end of March.

WOMEN'S WATER POLO

WOMEN'S WATER POLO As of the end of March, the Lions were ranked 11th nationally and off to a hot 4-0 start in conference play (14-11 overall). Attacker Ruth Arino Ruiz and Goalkeeper Alyssa Barnuevo were both named Golden Coast Conference (GCC) Player of the Week by midseason. The team had high hopes for a title at the GCC championships in April.

MEN'S TENNIS

MEN'S TENNIS The men's tennis team got off to a disappointing 5-10 start that included dropping their first two conference matches to Pepperdine and Santa Clara, respectively. Cesar Cruz was leading the team with an 8-5 singles record.

The Men's Club Ice Hockey team celebrated 20 years on the ice.

The LMU Division II Men's Ice Hockey team had a stellar '24-25 season, advancing to the semifinals of the West Coast Hockey Conference (WCHC) playoffs. The team was ranked No. 3 by the American Collegiate Hockey Association in the Men's WCHC Division II category. In their final regular season game, LMU played their rival, the University of California, Los Angeles' (UCLA) Men's Division II Ice Hockey team. LMU lost 4-2 to UCLA.

Prior to this game, player Foster Krueger told the Loyolan, "I think we all know that we could potentially be doing better, so ... we're going to be heading into this game with a chip on our shoulder and go at UCLA as hard as we can."

Despite their increased intensity in practices leading up to this game, the team was unable to perform in the way that they had hoped to. "As the end of the season comes, for a lot of us seniors the intensity is ramping up because we know our days are limited," Kruger said.

In the playoffs, the team advanced to the semifinals after defeating Long Beach State University 4-3, but lost 5-2 against Arizona State University in the semifinals.

The team also celebrated 20 years of sportsmanship, honoring the legacy of ice hockey at LMU. This season proved LMU's position as a strong competitor in WCHC Division II and Division III Men's Ice Hockey.

SNYDER'S SENDOFF

The LMU community gathered at the Lawton Plaza to watch President Timothy Law Snyder, Ph.D., give his ninth and final convocation address, "Forward," in November. Snyder, who announced his retirement as University president in October, looked both to the past of LMU and to its future in a conflicted society.

Snyder expressed that communicating with truth, creativity and care uniquely positions the University to aid in healing fractures seen at LMU and across the world.

Snyder cited that the first pillar, truth, remains at the forefront of LMU's mission — the encouragement of learning.

Touching on the second pillar, creativity, Snyder highlighted recent collaborations between disciplines such as the Master in Entertainment Leadership Management and the Master of Science in Entrepreneurship and Sustainable Innovation.

Care, Snyder's final pillar, called for rejecting all forms of dehumanization and disdain and instead treating all as individuals made in the image and likeness of God.

Finishing his final convocation address on the Bluff, Snyder gave a statement of thanks to the LMU community and a big "Go Lions!"

A version of this article previously appeared in The Los Angeles Loyolan.

LMU President Timothy Law Snyder oversaw the construction of new academic buildings, residence halls and renovated existing spaces.

EXPANSION
Under his leadership, LMU opened a third campus in Playa Vista to widen the community and enroll more students.

INCLUSION During his tenure, LMU's student body has diversified through diversity, equity and inclusion (DEI) initiatives, allowing for a greater feeling of community to flourish on campus.

ACADEMICS Snyder played a significant role in creating new academic programs for Lions and broadening current ones.

The first floor fosters a collaborative environment.

Stepping into the library, students are greeted by an open space with many seats and laptops to work at, with Starbucks only a door away. The first floor is popular among groups collaborating on homework, contributing to the floor's lively and engaging atmosphere.

> My favorite floor to study on is the first floor in the little cubicles or the big white tables just because I feel like there's more light on the first floor, and I feel like it's louder. I don't like having to be quiet, I like talking out loud to myself to go through certain homework questions. Also if I want to collaborate with my friends, it's easier to do that on the first floor.

JASH SHAH Film & Television Production on completing his senior project

How much involvement is there from students in your student production? A lot, actually. It's entirely student involvement. That's always been the case. I think every student wants to have the most talented students on their sets. Through the process, it's always going to be the students on your set who will make your film. I would even argue and say that all the people you bring on board, all the students that work with you, have more involvement in the film than you do yourself.

How has what you've learned at SFTV contributed to this project? Four years of just learning everything about production and now it's come to the point where you're not guided. There's no class for writing your script. There's no class for producing the film. You do it yourself. It's almost like taking what I have [done] in the past three and a half years, and putting it into this one project. The school is basically telling me, 'We've trained you. You know your stuff. Be confident enough and do it yourself.'

How did you go about selecting who would be a part of the production? It's 50/50. You have people you've known and worked with before and people you've known as a part of your class who want to work on your film. You bring them back and you do the on-campus SFTV pitch parties. All the new people that show up to those, all the freshmen, will eventually just join your film through that. So, it's both ways.

REEL THEM IN At SFTV's biannual pitch party, student filmmakers can pitch their projects, share open crew positions and mingle with fellow creatives.

on presenting his work at the Burns Fine Art Center

What does your photo work mean to you? My photo work means capturing the world or the events I'm at. The way I see it, I was trying to look at it in a different way so that it can be shared with others and they can see the world through my eyes, through my camera lens and maybe in a different angle than they might have [otherwise].

How did the opportunity to present your work come about? It was a group of photography students here from LMU. We all just got together with an idea to do a show in the gallery here on campus made up of different types of photography. It was great. [There was a] huge variety and a lot of talented artists.

Did you feel like you got what you wanted out of the event? I definitely did. It was the first time I had shown any work in one of the galleries. It also gave me a chance to prepare for my senior thesis that I'm currently working on and to get a better sense of what it's like showing work in that space.

on being a research assistant

What work do you do with the LMU athletics program? I do research with Dr. [Sarah] Strand. Dr. Strand is a professor for LMU Health and Human Sciences, so she teaches modalities and rehabilitation classes, but she also happens to be a certified athletic trainer. [She's] the athletic trainer for the LMU ice hockey team … Her research basically encompasses both of her areas of work.

How does your research look during the season? We do pre-season testing and post-season testing. All the players come in at once for pre-season testing and we assess their balance and their stability on a force plate and different positions. There's a foam pad as well, so we assess all of their balance, and then they take a survey about their concussions and also their orthopedic injuries. Throughout the season, I don't really get involved in any of their injuries unless they get a concussion. Then I just report it to my database. At the end of the season, we do post-season testing with the team again. We make sure to specifically analyze the people who got concussions during that semester [to] compare their selenium balance.

ON THE CAMPUS SPOT YOU'LL MISS MOST

The patio on the third floor of [the Life Sciences Building] has been my favorite space for a while. It overlooks the whole campus and at night, you can enjoy the solace and make out planes landing at LAX.

TELL US ABOUT YOUR WORST EXAM EXPERIENCE.

"It was our first midterm, and I forgot to turn in all of my work. Once I returned to the class, the computer I used had been turned off and all the data was lost."

MAXWELL BRODIE

"I accidentally overslept for my first-ever final and it scared me so much. I had never jumped out of bed so fast."

ARACELLI FAYE MARIE CAMPOS
Psychology

"I had three finals on my birthday sophomore year."

MATT MARTINEZ
Computer Science

"I had to study like crazy for two of my hardest finals that were on the same day. That being said, I had forced myself to stay in the Hilton building for almost 24 hours at this point while only eating the free snacks they provided on the first floor. 0/10, would never do again."

ON THE CAMPUS SPOT YOU'LL MISS MOST

The Bluff, specifically over by O'Malley and Leavey 4. I feel I've had some of the most hilarious and valuable moments with myself and my friends ever since I transferred here. The Bluff is such a beautiful spot to relax, calm your mind and overall focus on yourself and your being.

ON YOUR MOST EMBARRASSING MOMENT

I was told that I should try out for LMU Panhellenic. The only problem is that I didn't know the difference between a sorority and fraternity. I received an email about a Zoom informational meeting about joining a fraternity, so I joined. I didn't know that it was for guys only. I immediately left the meeting.

ON THE CAMPUS SPOT YOU'LL MISS MOST

I will miss [Sunken Garden] the most. [It's] just a happy place for me on campus because my friends and I will always lay there any chance we get, sitting and chatting between class or even racing each other to see who can run the fastest.

WHAT WAS YOUR MOST EMBARRASSING MOMENT?

"I got out of the communal bathroom, only to figure out I locked my OneCard in my room. So I had to go to the Area Housing Office to get a temporary card with no shirt in 60-degree weather."

EXODUS BROUSSARD Animation

"There are SEVERAL really embarrassing moments, but I think the most is always a fall. There was one time I fell down the stairs right by McKay towards the fine arts building. I fell like an inflatable tube man."

ON YOUR WORST FINALS EXPERIENCE

"I was taking my Supply Chain final on the lab computers when, of course, my computer decided to crash and wiped out my entire Excel file halfway through. Lucky for me, my professor worked some kind of magic and recovered it. I somehow managed to finish on time, but I'm pretty sure I lost a few years off my life in those 20 minutes of panic."

WHAT WAS YOUR MOST EMBARRASSING MOMENT?

"On my first day, I got lost trying to find my classroom, and when I got late to class, the door made an incredible amount of noise. [Then,] someone called me on my phone, and my Harry Potter ringtone started to go off."

ON THE CAMPUS SPOT YOU'LL MISS MOST

The Den. Every day going to get my vanilla latte and sitting there doing work. Seeing people and chatting around. Becoming friends with baristas and getting tea when you do not feel well. Pastry hour with your best friends during your freshman year or struggling to find a seat during finals. Truly my favorite place ever, and I am going to miss it so much.

WHAT SPOT ON CAMPUS WILL YOU MISS THE MOST?

"THE BLUFFFF! The sunset views are always immaculate and being there gives you perspective on how big the world really is."

ELORA DANNAN

"The University Hall Bluff view. Freshman year, I ate many bagels looking down on L.A."

SAM LANCASTER

the TOWER

The forty-second volume of The Tower was printed by Walsworth Publishing Company, 306 N. Kansas Ave. Marceline, Missouri, 64658. Its 248 pages were submitted electronically as PDFs. Pagination was completed on Macintosh Intel computers using Microsoft Word, Adobe Lightroom Classic, Adobe Photoshop 2024 and Adobe InDesign 2024.

Copy for the yearbook was written and edited by the Tower staff and supplemented by articles from the Los Angeles Loyolan. Interviews were edited for length and clarity. Throughout the book, type was set in BUENO, Laquela, Chido, FOKUS, Sunday Bloom, Neuthing, Domaine and Lora.

Images were taken using a Fujifilm X-T3, Fujifilm X-T4, Sony A7 IV, Sony A6000 and Canon EOS R. Some images that appear were submitted by students, staff, faculty and school organizations. Senior portraits were taken by Lauren Studios and self-submitted.

The Tower was printed for all full-time undergraduate students at Loyola Marymount University. The book was distributed on campus and each full-time undergraduate student was assessed a yearbook fee. Inquires about any aspect of this book may be directed to:

PICS OR IT DIDN'T HAPPEN

Seniors share their favorite photos from their time as Lions.

The Class of 2025 arrived to the Bluff fresh off a year-and-a-half campus closure due to COVID-19. Throughout their time here, they have learned, grown and managed to readjust to a sense of normalcy post-pandemic.
