» Ndlovu sing vir bewaring

Vir die olifante

Ndlovu simboliseer krag, wysheid en 'n diep verbintenis tot die natuur.

» Henriette Lamprecht

Ndlovu (/ˈndloʊvuː/) beteken in Zoeloe olifant en daarom is dit immers gepas dat 'n groep wat dié naam deel en op wêreldverhoë mense met hul stemme oorrompel, Afrika se mees majestueuse dier sal vier.

Volgende Saterdag (4 Oktober) weerklink die wydbekroonde Ndlovu-jeugkoor se harmonieuse stemme oor die Namibiese woestyn wanneer die koor tydens 'n spesiale optrede by Goanikontes-Oasis vir die land se woestynolifante sing.

Die jeugkoor is in Januarie 2009 deur die Ndlovu Care Group gebaseer in Elandsdoorn in Limpopo gevorm. Dit bestaan uit 'n groep jong mense van die versorgingsgroep in die landelike nedersetting Moutse in Elandsdoorn met hul ouderdomme wat wissel van 14 tot 25 jaar. Dit was die komponis en dirigent Ralf Schmidt wat besluit het om 'n musiekprogram vir kinders as deel van die versorgingsgroep te begin. Die doel - om die voordele van wêreldklas musiekonderrig na jong mense in 'n landelike gemeenskap te bring.

Dr. Hugo Templeman, 'n Nederlandse dokter, het die versorgingsgroep in 1994 begin om innoverende gesondheid- en kindersorg, onder- rig en gemeenskapsontwikkeling te verskaf. Ndlovu simboliseer krag, wysheid en 'n diep verbintenis tot die natuur en is 'n van wat algemeen in Suid-Afrika en Zimbabwe voorkom. Histories word die Ndlovu-van geassosieer met stamme en families wat 'n beduidende rol in die sosiale en politieke strukture van hul gemeenskappe gespeel het.

Sedert sy ontstaan het die Ndlovu-jeugkoor die lewens van sy lede diep aangeraak en gewys hoe enige mens, ongeag sy of haar agtergrond, opvoeding of komvandaan, ongelooflike hoogtes kan bereik. Dit van 'n nederige begin as 'n nasorgaktiwiteit tot 'n professionele ensemble wat op wêreldverhoë mense se harte met hul stemme roer en verower en selfs lede van die gewilde popgroep Queen oorrompel het met hul Zoeloe-weergawe van hul treffer 'Bohemian Rhapsody'.

Die koorlede se passie en energie tydens hul vertonings is aansteeklik en hul repertoire wissel van Afro-Pop 'classics' tot tradisionele Suid-Afrikaanse musiek en oorspronklike komposisies gekombineer met asemrowende choreografie. Die groep sing in al 11 Suid-Afrikaanse tale en wat Zoeloe, Xhosa en Engels insluit. Hul musiek sluit tradisionele Suid-Afrikaanse genres soos isicathamiya in, 'n styl wat beroemd gemaak is deur Ladysmith Black Mambazo.

In 2018 het die koor professioneel begin optree om te verseker dat die lede 'n inkomste vir hulself kon genereer deur die deel van hul musiek en talent.

Onder aanvoering en begeleiding van die koor se stigter Ralph Schmitt het die jeugkoor Beste Onafhanklike Musiekvideo by die Hollywood Musiek in Media-toekennings in Oktober 2018 gewen vir hul weergawe van Ed Sheeran se Shape of You saam met die fluitspeler Wouter Kellerman. In Suid-Afrika het hulle twee SA Musiektoekennings op hul trofeeërak. Die kersie op die toekenningskoek was hul buiging in die finale rondte van Seisoen 14 van America's Got Talent, die eerste keer wat 'n koor in dié sowel as die Britain's Got Talent-kompetisie die eindronde kon haal. Namibiërs het nou die voorreg om op 4 Oktober met die woestyn as agtergrond tydens 'n oggend van musiek en bewaring die koor en hul magiese stemme te kan ervaar. Die spesiale vertoning vind om 09:30 by Goanikontes-Oasis buite Swakopmund ter ondersteuning van Elephant Human Relations Aid (EHRA) plaas.

EHRA help sedert 2003 om vreedsame verhoudings tussen vrylopende woestynolifante en plaaslike gemeenskappe in Namibië te bou. Kaartjies kos N$300 vir 'n volwassene en N$150 vir kinders tot 12 jaar. Kontak Sonya Engelsmann by e-pos s.engelsmann@namibia-safaris.com of 081 129 9130 vir jou kaartjie!

Saam met die stroom

Keramiekkunstenaars het die inspirasie van die see en al sy wonders as inspirasie vir hul skeppings gebruik.

Henriette Lamprecht

Die mistieke wonderwêreld en skoonheid van die see en al haar geheime en eiesoortige inwoners was die inspirasie vir die Pottebakkersvereniging van Namibië (PAN) se uitstalling Shapes of the Current, 'n viering van Namibiese keramiek. Die uitstalling het op 19 September by die Kamma Art and Design Studio in Swakopmund geopen. PAN se voorsitter Gigi Mathias was vol lof vir die pottebakkers se skeppings met die kunstenaar en mede-eienaar van Kamma, Heidi Louw se skilderye wat dit volgens haar perfek aanvul “om stories te deel wat deur ons Namibiese kuslyn geïnspireer is”. Sy het verwys na die belangrike rol wat ondersteuning en borge speel om ge-leenthede soos dié moontlik te maak en haar dank uitgespreek teenoor Capricorn Asset Management vir hul jaarlikse borgskap. Louw en Clinton Lang was die kurators van die uitstalling, terwyl die Suid-Afrikaanse keramiekkunstenaar Lindsay Oldham die eregas tydens die opening was en in haar toespraak uitgebrei het oor die noue verweeftheid tussen kuns en die natuur. Sandy le Roux se Gin Bar en vars oesters van Seacore Food Market het verder gesorg dat die geleentheid 'n hoogtepunt op die kunskalender aan die kus was. Shapes of the Current kan nog tot 19 Oktober by Kamma Art and Design in Libertina Amathilasstraat in Swakopmund besigtig word.

Regulatory goals

Namibia's non-banking sector assets soar 14.3% to N$474.1 billion

Namfisa secures N$11.8 million in payouts, prioritising consumer protection and financial literacy.

OGONE TLHAGE

The Namibia Financial Institutions Supervisory Authority (Namfisa) reported a year of robust growth and strengthened regulatory oversight, according to its annual report for the financial year ending 31 March 2025.

Speaking at the launch, CEO Kenneth Matomola highlighted the non-bank financial institutions (NBFI) sector's resilience, with aggregate assets rising by 14.3% to N$474.1 billion in 2024.

Matomola emphasised Namfisa's successful mandate execution, anchored in advanced, data-driven risk-based supervision (RBS) to safeguard financial integrity. He also noted the regulator's commitment to consumer protection, with N$11.8 million in payouts secured for complainants.

"These improvements enable us to intervene more effectively and with greater precision, reinforcing consumer protection and ensuring the integrity of Namibia's financial system," he said.

The regulator further strengthened internal monitoring mechanisms, scenario planning and stress testing to identify potential vulnerabilities early and respond swiftly to emerging risks.

Matomola stressed that stakeholder engagement remains central to Namfisa's work. "The financial sector impacts a wide spectrum of people, businesses and communities. Our dialogue with government, industry and consumers ensures that policies are inclusive and collaborative," he said.

Namfisa remains committed to building a resilient, competitive, and inclusive financial sector that serves all Namibians.

Kenneth Matomola
Namfisa CEO

Consumer protection remains at the heart of Namfisa's mandate. In 2024, the regulator resolved 358 out of 373 consumer complaints, securing N$11.8 million in payouts to 87 complainants.

"We want consumers to be well-informed, confident, and protected in their financial dealings. Beyond resolving disputes, we continue to prioritise financial literacy and fair regulation," Matomola added.

Recognising the rapid pace of change in financial services, Namfisa continued to embrace innovation while maintaining financial stability. "We are supporting the adoption of FinTech and digital transformation, which are essential to improving efficiency, inclusivity, and consumer-centric solutions," Matomola said.

The NBFI sector demonstrated notable strength, with aggregate assets climbing to N$474.1 billion in 2024. Namfisa currently regulates 1,032 financial institutions and 14,701 financial intermediaries. This sector plays a vital role in Namibia's fiscal stability, supported by favourable market conditions, moderating inflation, and lower interest rates.

Matomola expressed gratitude to the board, executive team, staff, media, and stakeholders, while acknowledging the role of former finance minister Ipumbu Shiimi and his successor, Ericah Shafudah, in advancing Namibia's financial transformation.

"Namfisa remains committed to building a resilient, competitive, and inclusive financial sector that serves all Namibians. Together with our stakeholders, we will continue to drive stability, innovation, and prosperity," he concluded.

The Ukwangali Palace – A living symbol of tradition and authority

Ellanie Smit

Nestled in the heart of Nkurenkuru in Namibia's Kavango West Region stands the Ukwangali Palace, an emblem of cultural pride, unity, and traditional governance for the Ukwangali people. More than a physical structure, the palace serves as a beacon of heritage, a gathering place for community matters, and the seat of the Ukwangali Traditional Authority.

The Ukwangali Palace is the residence of the Hompa, the traditional leader of the Ukwangali people. The Hompa holds not only symbolic significance but also an active role in guiding the community, preserving customs, and fostering dialogue on development and social cohesion. As such, the palace embodies the intersection of tradition and modern governance, where age-old practices are upheld alongside efforts to address contemporary challenges.

Architecturally, the palace reflects both cultural identity and modern influences. Traditional elements, such as thatched meeting areas and symbolic carvings, are preserved to emphasize continuity with the past. At the same time, newer facilities have been added over the years to accommodate the administrative functions of the Traditional Authority. The palace grounds are often used for ceremonies, meetings with government representatives, and events that unite the wider community.

The Ukwangali people, like many communities in Namibia, place strong emphasis on respect for leadership and cultural practices. The palace plays a key role during festivals, initiation rites, and other cultural activities that showcase music, dance, and oral storytelling. These occasions are not merely celebrations but also opportunities to reinforce shared identity and transmit values to the younger generation.

Aurelia Afrikaner

Tucked away in northern Namibia, Abenab Lodge is a destination where history and modern comfort blend seamlessly. The site of mining activity between 1923 and 1958, the area has transformed into a welcoming retreat for travellers journeying through some of Namibia's most well-known attractions.

This dedication to preservation makes Abenab Lodge more than just a stopover, it is a place where the past is remembered while the present is enjoyed.

The lodge's amenities go beyond accommodation. Visitors can relax in the swimming pool, rejuvenate with treatments at the hydro spa, or add a thrill to their stay with zip lining.

Abenab also doubles as a venue for business and celebration, offering conference facilities and hosting weddings in a setting that blends tranquillity with character.

Its location makes Abenab Lodge an even greater asset to travellers. Situated just 24 km from Grootfontein and 40 km from Tsumeb, the lodge is perfectly positioned for those heading to Etosha National Park, the Hoba Meteorite, Waterberg Plateau, the Okavango Delta, and even further north to Victoria Falls.

CELEBRATING 35 YEARS OF LOW PRICES

Thank You NAMIBIA

Feel the thunder, hear the heart

The 4th Annual Motorcycle Show roared into Windhoek's Olympia suburb with chrome, charisma, and a cause. It was epic. Hosted by the local Harley Owners Group, HOG Namibia at the iconic Old Wheelers Club, this wasn't just a feast for bike lovers. It was a full-throttle celebration of community, charity, and the fearless spirit of Namibia's riding culture.

From polished Harleys

“We want people to come out, see what the biking community is about. It's not just tattoos and leather it's about giving back.” - Vincent Van Rooyen to powerful moments, the show united riders, families, and clubs from across the country. Why do bikers give back?

Because behind every engine is a heart that beats for something bigger. A range of bikes and related services were on display. The Show supported the WeCare Foundation and a blood donation drive.

Our heritage, and the November elections

With Heritage Week celebrations in full swing, Erongo Talk-presenter Leandrea Mouers dressed the part last week. In this episode's main interview, Olympian Phillip Seidler spoke about his decision to enter local politics as a member of the Swakopmund Residents Association, and how he hopes to use sport and community development as a platform for change. “I have a dream of becoming Namibia's sports minister one day and also being in Parliament,” Seidler said. “If every leader and politician did their job 100%, we would probably be the best country in Africa.” • Click the image to watch the show.

Savanna Beef uit die blokke met slagplanne

Savanna Beef het onlangs 61 bees in sy eerste proeflopie geslag en uitvoerende hoof Ian Collard sê die volgende stap is om produksie tot ongeveer 250 bees in 'n week en 'n half te vermeerder.

Collard was Woensdag die gas in Kletskompane onderhou. Oor vooruitgang sedert Mei sê hy: “Teen Mei-maand was die struktuur [van die gebou] al op gewees en al die bin-negoed is van daar af ingesit. Van daardie tyd af tot nou het ons eintlik baie gevorder met die masjienerie en alles. “Die beplanning is dat ons teen middel Oktober die oorname van die gebou gaan doen van die kontrakteurs af.”

Mixing the football beat with Marco Ndlovu

In last week's episode, In The Mix Africa dived deep into Africa's sports scene, featuring football analyst Marco Ndlovu. The show explores how players gaining experience abroad can elevate the game at home, offering fans insider perspectives on talent development and national team growth. This In The Mix highlights how international exposure shapes African football, showing the ripple effect from individual careers to national pride, making it a must-watch for sports enthusiasts across the continent. “The more players play outside the country, the more the national team benefits,” says Ndlovu.
