Gold Award Girl Scouts change the world

Gold Award Girl Scouts are change-makers. They have changed the world, changed their lives, and earned the most prestigious award in Girl Scouting.

To earn the Gold Award, a Girl Scout identifies an issue in their community, drafts a plan to address a root cause, and leads a team of volunteers to implement it. When the project is complete, the Gold Award Girl Scout and their team have made a sustainable impact on the world that continues to last beyond their involvement.

It's a huge accomplishment that also impacts the Gold Award Girl Scout as a person. How they see the world—and how the world sees them—is forever changed. It's also a credential that will be with them for the rest of their life; having the Girl Scout Gold Award on a high school transcript or resumé can make a Girl Scout stand out when it comes to college admissions, scholarship applications, internships, and job interviews.

The volunteer members of the regional Girl Scouts of Colorado Gold Award Committee meet across the state and work closely with each girl pursuing her Gold Award.

Gold Award Girl Scouts

Olivia Agbo

Community Food Drives

For her project, Olivia organized neighborhood food drives aimed at raising awareness about food insecurity and fostering solidarity with those in need. She collected an impressive 871 pounds of food for families in southern Colorado Springs through her efforts. Additionally, she established a partnership with Care & Share Food Bank to facilitate future donations and enable younger Girl Scouts to easily organize similar drives, ensuring a sustainable impact on the community's fight against hunger.

After high school, Olivia plans to attend college and begin her pre-medical track to become a pediatrician. Being a Girl Scout helped her to realize that she loves helping and caring for kids.

Trisha Balani

Improving Police Mental Health Response

For her project, Trisha spearheaded a suicide prevention project focused on enhancing the City of Aurora's Crisis Response Team (CRT) in collaboration with the Aurora Police Department (APD). This involved transitioning the CRT from grant funding to being fully funded by the city's General Fund budget, which allowed for the expansion of the team with additional officers and clinicians. She advocated for the replication of the CRT model by sharing its financial and social effectiveness with other police departments across the state.

Trisha is currently a first-year student at Syracuse University studying public policy and data analytics with a Spanish minor. Even a year later, her Gold Award informs her choices every day, and she is so thankful for the doors that Girl Scouts has opened for her.

Diana Baker

Trypanophobia Awareness

Through her project, Diana effectively raised awareness about needle phobia (trypanophobia), offering valuable resources and solutions for patients and medical offices. Her initiative included providing tools like the Buzzy Bee to her own doctor's office, alongside launching a dedicated website, www.trypanophobiaawareness.com, to disseminate information and support. By leveraging her personal experience with the issue, she made a significant impact, alleviating the challenges faced by those afflicted with needle phobia.

Diana plans to travel to Europe with her troop this summer to visit Pax Lodge – a WAGGGS World Centre, as well as Ireland, Wales, and London. After traveling, she is looking forward to taking advanced ceramics and jewelry classes next year during her senior year of high school. After high school, she plans to attend college to pursue a career in law and technology.

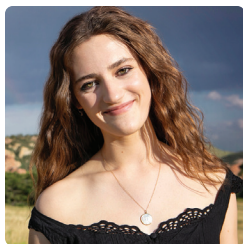

Addison Bauer

Feeding Our Neighbors

For her project, Addison built a vibrant community garden, fostering partnerships with local food pantries to ensure regular donations of fresh produce. Additionally, she founded a dedicated gardening club, ensuring the garden's upkeep and the sustained provision of nutritious goods to those in need. Through her efforts, she not only cultivated a green space but also forged strong community bonds and made a meaningful contribution to addressing food insecurity.

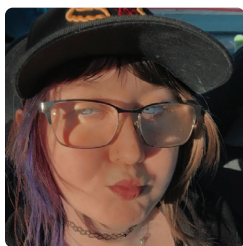

Addison is excited to attend the University of Wisconsin this fall. She plans to major in chemical engineering with a minor in business.

Ella Bygrave Preserving Whittier History

Ella tackled the preservation of history in gentrified neighborhoods by engaging high school students in their communities and encouraging exploration of their neighborhood's history. She developed a comprehensive website dedicated to her own neighborhood, Whittier, offering abundant resources and information. Her initiative will have a lasting impact as one of her teachers at East High School plans to integrate her curriculum from the website into their classes for future years.

Ella is looking forward to attending Occidental College in Los Angeles this fall. She plans to major in psychology and minor in music to pursue her dream of becoming a music therapist.

Tara Cobb Building Self Confidence

Tara tackled bullying and self-confidence concerns among high school students by devising a program enabling students to share uplifting messages and affirmations in school bathrooms. Collaborating with the Skyline High School student council, she established a sustainable initiative to promote kindness and confidence among peers. Her endeavor has left a lasting impact, inspiring students to foster a culture of positivity and self-assurance within the school community for years to come.

Tara's plans to become a police officer, and after a few years, she plans to become a homicide detective.

Serena Flaxenburg

Art & Soul – Increasing Accessibility and Closing the Gender Gap

For her project, Serena addressed the lack of representation of women in art and provided free educational resources for young people, especially girls. She created a website to increase representation and access to educational resources, covering topics such as gender equity in jazz, interviews with women in the arts, and materials aimed at promoting increased participation in the arts. She also designed a Women in the Arts curriculum for a Girl Scout patch, furthering educational opportunities and empowerment for young girls.

Bryn Gallivan

Purposeful Play Kits for Kids

For her project, Bryn tackled the issue of elementary students lacking play options tailored to different learning styles. She devised kits that students take home to learn in a comfortable environment, thereby opening avenues for diverse learning experiences. Aspen Crossing Elementary School took on the responsibility of maintaining and distributing these kits, ensuring continued access to resources for enhancing learning.

Ardena Jordan

Better Sunscreen, Better World

Ardena spearheaded the Better Sunscreen Better World campaign, aimed at highlighting the detrimental effects of conventional sunscreens on ocean ecosystems, particularly coral reefs. Through a dedicated website offering guidance on eco-friendly sunscreen choices for ocean activities, alongside distributing QR code stickers linking to the site, she effectively educated and engaged her audience. Partnering with dive shops in Hawaii further expanded the campaign's reach, ensuring sustained awareness and action toward protecting marine environments.

Ardena currently attends Colorado School of Mines and is considering majoring in engineering design, applied mathematics, or material and metallurgical engineering.

Katherine Knapp

Band Building Blocks

As a musician herself, Katherine noticed an issue in her community with middle schoolers being asked to sign up for band without prior exposure to instruments at school. To address this, she formed a volunteer group of high school musicians who go to the local middle school and introduce various instruments to prospective fifth graders. The program is a success, and the middle school students enjoyed the experience, fostering a positive association with music and encouraging greater participation in high school band.

Katherine plans to continue her education at Boston University studying flute performance and music education. She hopes to perform professionally one day in a symphony orchestra and possibly teach at a collegiate level.

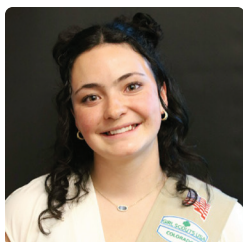

Miriam Koller

Solitary Bee Habitats

Miriam's project aimed to combat the declining population of solitary bees due to habitat destruction by raising awareness about their importance as pollinators and the threats to their habitats. The focus was on creating new habitats for solitary bees in the community and educating gardeners about the mutual benefits for gardens and bees. This involved building and installing bee habitats alongside an awareness campaign to engage and mobilize the community toward conservation efforts.

Miriam plans to pursue a major in chemistry at a four-year university. She has been accepted to the University of California Irvine, Colorado School of Mines, and the University of Illinois Urbana-Champaign. While she has not yet accepted any offers, she is eager to make a final decision and to take on new academic opportunities.

Catherine LaRock

Backcountry Wisdom for Kids

For her project, Catherine developed a program to educate kids in her community on first aid and Leave No Trace principles in the wilderness, recognizing that limited knowledge in these areas often deters outdoor activities. She tackled the issue of access by implementing her outlined curriculum at the local Boys and Girls Club, providing hands-on instruction to fourth graders. Through this initiative, she empowered children with essential skills and knowledge to safely enjoy outdoor adventures while fostering environmental stewardship.

Catherine committed to attend the University of Michigan this fall. She plans to major in biological sciences and pre-health. Go Blue!

Jacey LaRock

Just Have Confidence

Jacey wanted to tackle the challenges of low self-esteem and confidence among younger children, particularly those who are influenced by unrealistic beauty standards on social media. To address this, she developed and presented a comprehensive curriculum focusing on self-care practices, confidence-building exercises, and the importance of giving and receiving compliments. Her initiative culminated in delivering the program to local fourth graders, and she has provided the curriculum to the school for use in future classes.

After graduation, Jacey will be attending Gonzaga University in Spokane, Washington. She plans to major in criminology or business and hopes to continue dancing and expanding the world's knowledge of building self-esteem and confidence.

Louise Larsen

Music on the Spectrum

For her project, Louise sought to facilitate music immersion for students on the autism spectrum in a calming and less overwhelming manner, recognizing the limited availability of music programs tailored to neurodivergent individuals due to resource constraints. To address this gap, she developed a comprehensive program containing various strategies such as games and lessons, which she implemented herself at Niwot Elementary School and distributed to educators to raise awareness about music education for children with autism.

After graduation, Louise plans to attend a university to major in music education to pursue a career of teaching in K-12 and spreading the importance of music education to everyone.

Amelia Lineberger

Building a Legacy of Literacy

For her project, Amelia tackled the issue of book deserts and the scarcity of literary resources for families in her community. She compiled a detailed guide of local resources and organized a scavenger hunt at the local library, which will be an ongoing initiative. Additionally, she crafted book bags for Southeast Elementary School, which will continue to be distributed to students. Her efforts aim to improve access to reading materials and promote literacy within the community.

After graduation, Amelia would like to attend college at the Fashion Institute of Technology in New York City. She plans to study fashion history and restoration. Once she graduates college, she would like to make costumes for opera and theater.

Alexa Marshall

Giving is Golden – Food Scarcity Awareness

Alexa's project addressed food scarcity in her community through awareness campaigns, a successful local food drive, and the establishment of an emergency mini pantry at her local YMCA. The food drive amassed more than 700 pounds of donations, all of which were contributed to the Weld Food Bank for distribution. The emergency pantry remains a crucial resource for providing immediate food assistance to those in need, showcasing her commendable efforts in rallying community support to combat food insecurity effectively.

Alexa is currently studying animation and graphic design at Aims Community College, with the goal of working as a game designer in the future. She is involved with the leadership for FCGS day camp, local theaters, and the games club at her college and hopes to continue her involvement with them for many years to come. She is unsure what her future entails, but she knows she wants to continue doing things that bring her joy and better the world around her.

Emily Michel

Barefoot Sensory Path

Aiming to cater to the sensory processing needs of elementary students with special needs, Emily developed a portable barefoot sensory path for her project. The portability enables its utilization across various schools and environments, indoors or outdoors. Delivered along with a care kit and instruction manual to the Aurora Public School District, it serves as a resource for teachers to address students' sensory difficulties, significantly enhancing their support options.

Emily plans to continue her education at Sweet Briar College while also competing at the collegiate level for soccer. She plans to major in engineering with a minor in math and hopes to intern with Disney to work toward becoming a part of their Imagineering Team.

Alexa Moss

School Skills Tips

Alexa's project tackled the challenge of students lacking essential skills for academic success, exacerbated by the pandemic. To address this, she crafted a curriculum centered on healthy habits, incorporating academic and social-emotional topics via video modules. Her program serves as a resource for students to cultivate motivation, combat procrastination, and hone fundamental study skills. The curriculum is now integrated into her school's educational framework through a lasting partnership with the National Honor Society.

Alexa attends Colorado School of Mines studying computer science - robotics and intelligent systems while also pursuing a minor in business entrepreneurship and the cybersecurity certificate. She remains an active member in her community through the Residence Hall Association, Society of Women Engineers, 2023-2027 Vanguard Scholars cohort, Engineering Grand Challenges, as an equestrian, and a member of many technical and extra-curriculars on campus. In the future, she hopes to gain experience in industry and innovate software and hardware to aid technological advancement.

Emma Rose Perkins

Paws of the Community

Emma Rose noticed that, despite existing stations pet waste stations in her community, there was an issue of dog waste littering public spaces because the number of pet waste stations had not kept pace with the area's population growth. To address this issue, she initiated partnerships with ColoradoScapes and the Tollgate Crossing Metro District to secure funding and support for several new waste stations. Their collaboration resulted in the donation of new stations, assistance with installation, and a commitment to ongoing maintenance and restocking, effectively addressing the problem and enhancing community cleanliness.

After attending community college, Emma plans to move to a four-year university to pursue bachelor's and master's degrees in marine biology, with a focus on sharks, skates, and rays, as well as a minor in environmental sciences. She hopes to one day work as an aquarist or curator at an aquarium.

Reagan Petitt

Engaging with Nature

Reagan collaborated with Craig Hospital to implement an outdoor education program for patients and their families. The program focuses on the significance of outdoor activities and intentional time spent in nature, particularly for those with traumatic brain injuries. She also integrates lessons about the vital role of pollinators, fostering a deeper understanding of ecological interconnectedness among participants. By partnering with the hospital, she promotes the benefits of outdoor experiences in rehabilitation and overall well-being.

Reagan is currently studying human services at the University of Northern Colorado, class of 2027. She hopes to study abroad in New Zealand next year and pursue a master's degree in social work.

Lena Rasch

Bringing Birds to My Backyard

In her effort to counter the declining bird population in America, Lena collaborated with the Bird Conservancy of the Rockies to establish an annual seed library for her community. By focusing on native wildflowers, she encourages her community to plant diverse native plants, enhancing bird habitats. Through partnerships with the Chatfield Banding Station, she utilized localized data to have her team plant five different native plant species there, contributing directly to habitat restoration efforts.

Lena is attending California Polytechnic State University to earn a degree in anthropology and geography. With her degree, she plans to travel and study as many cultures as possible. Using what she learned from Girl Scouts, she hopes to change the world in as many ways as possible.

Megan Schmalz

The Borrow-Me Bag

For her project, Megan created a lending program for concert uniforms at her high school to address the financial barriers preventing students from participating in extracurricular activities, like band and choir. Her efforts involved establishing a storage space for the uniforms and implementing a structured sign-in and sign-out system. Collaborating with the band director and boosters, she ensured the sustainability of the program for future students.

Megan is studying veterinary technology at Colorado Mountain College. Once she graduates, she plans on returning home to work as a veterinary technician and continue to be a part of Girl Scouts in some way. Overall, she plans on working with animals, helping them throughout her life, and continuing to learn about who she is as a person.

Keaghan Short

Live Diversified

Keaghan's project focused on filling a gap in community support for children with different abilities. To address this, Keaghan initiated a movement class to teach youth with varying abilities the freedom of expression. The program has been integrated into a regular dance class schedule in her community for the foreseeable future. The class will provide sustained support and opportunities for children with disabilities within the community.

This fall, Keaghan will be attending the University of Colorado Colorado Springs to major in biology with a focus in forensic science. After college, her goal is to attend medical school to become a forensic pathologist.

Havanna Terrell

Tennis Ball Dispensers

Partnering with her local humane society, Havanna recognized that playing fetch with dogs using tennis balls was burdensome for volunteers. To enhance the experience, she designed tennis ball dispensers and cleaning stations, streamlining the activity for volunteers and dogs. Additionally, she conducted training sessions to empower volunteers in utilizing these stations effectively and encouraged them to replicate the concept for sustained convenience and enjoyment.

Havanna plans to attend art school in either Florida or California to major in illustration. After college, she hopes to work at a major studio.

Samantha Tripp Sensory Walls for Memory Care Facilities

Through her research, Samantha discovered that patients with advancing Alzheimer's Disease and dementia often face challenges in finding activities to engage their restless minds.

In response, she constructed a sensory room for a local memory care facility, accompanied by a detailed booklet outlining the usage and benefits of various sensory tools. These tools provide patients with a sense of purpose and engagement, offering a solution for moments when they struggle to initiate or complete tasks independently due to cognitive limitations. The memory care facility plans to integrate the sensory room into their ongoing care practices for the benefit of their patients.

After graduation, Samantha plans to combine her skills as a Gold Award Girl Scout and her passion for disability accessibility to promote inclusive environments in her community and beyond. Her goal is to ensure that everyone, regardless of ability, has equal access to opportunities and resources.

Amy Turton Teen Personal Safety

To tackle the lack of personal safety awareness among middle school girls, Amy organized a self-defense class at a nearby martial arts studio. She extended the invitation to parents, urging them to participate alongside their daughters to foster shared learning and discussions. The success of the event has prompted the studio to incorporate these classes into their annual schedule, ensuring a continued emphasis on empowering young girls with essential self-defense skills and promoting family engagement in the topic.

Amy will graduate high school this spring, and then will attend university in the United Kingdom studying fashion design. She has enjoyed being involved in community service projects during her time in Girl Scouts and plans to continue participating in similar projects in future.

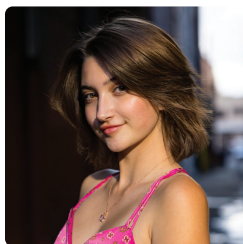

Brianna Westbarn

Colorado Cold Cases

For her project, Brianna launched an awareness campaign and developed a website dedicated to shedding light on cold cases in Colorado. In addition to the website, she produced compelling videos and utilized social media spotlighting the narratives of cold cases. People can engage with these videos, either conducting independent research prompted by the stories or contributing support for the cases through her website. The website serves as a valuable repository of information on historical cold cases, ensuring that these cases remain in the public consciousness for years to come.

During her time as a Girl Scout, Brianna found a passion for working with kids which is why she has decided to major in elementary education at Fort Lewis College. Her Gold Award project also gave her a newfound passion for learning about criminology, which is why she chose a double-major program in criminology and justice studies. She also will be working at Sky High Ranch Girl Scout camp this summer.

Morgaine Wilkins-Dean

Preventing Gun Violence in Schools

Motivated by personal experience, Morgaine spearheaded efforts to combat gun violence in schools by creating a comprehensive policy aimed at keeping firearms off school premises and educating families about the hazards posed by lax gun laws. Collaborating closely with the Denver Public Schools school board, she successfully advocated for changes in DPS policy concerning gun violence prevention. The newly implemented policy educates families about the risks associated with unsecured firearms at home, with the goal of prompting a reassessment of gun storage practices to ensure the safety of children and teenagers.

Morgaine will be attending the University of California, Sacramento next year, majoring in journalism. She is very excited to explore the opportunities that Girl Scouts has given her!

Jillian Zettle-moyer

ADA Sandbox at Trinity Park

In her pursuit of inclusivity, Jillian spearheaded a project to ensure every child's right to play by leading a team to construct an ADA-compliant sandbox within the Trinity Lutheran community park. This innovative sandbox features a digger accessible to wheelchair users, breaking barriers and fostering equal opportunities for recreation. Through her dedication, she transformed a simple park into a symbol of inclusivity and accessibility, enriching the community for all children to enjoy.

Jillian attends the University of Northern Colorado in Greeley pursuing a degree in education.

Silver Award Girl Scouts

When Girl Scout Cadettes focus on an issue they care about, learn the facts, and take action to make a difference, they gain the confidence and skills that will catapult them to lifelong success. It all adds up to the Girl Scout Silver Award—the highest honor a Cadette can achieve.

We are Girl Scouts

Girl Scouts bring their dreams to life as they work together to build a better world. Through programs from coast to coast, Girl Scouts of all backgrounds and abilities can be unapologetically themselves as they discover their strengths and rise to meet new challenges—whether they want to climb to the top of a tree or the top of their class, lace up their boots for a hike or advocate for climate justice, or make their first best friends. Backed by trusted adult volunteers, mentors, and millions of alums, Girl Scouts lead the way as they find their voices and make changes that affect the issues most important to them.

Bronze Award Girl Scouts

When Girl Scout Juniors team up to make a difference in their community, they learn important leadership skills, discover new passions, and watch how seemingly small actions make a big difference. It all adds up to the Girl Scout Bronze Award—the highest honor a Junior can achieve.
