

ANTHONY BANDIERO, ESQ.

OHIO

Search & Seizure Survival Guide

A FIELD GUIDE FOR LAW ENFORCEMENT

Blue to Gold

OhioSearch & Seizure Survival Guide

A FIELD GUIDE FOR LAW ENFORCEMENT

Anthony Bandiero, JD, ALM Blue
To Gold Law Enforcement Training, LLC SPOKANE, WASHINGTON

Copyright © 2024 by Anthony Bandiero.

All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced, distributed or transmitted in any form or by any means, including photocopying, recording, or other electronic or mechanical methods, without the prior written permission of the publisher, except in the case of brief quotations embodied in critical reviews and certain other noncommercial uses permitted by copyright law. For permission requests, write to the publisher, addressed "Attention: Permissions Coordinator," at the address below.

Blue to Gold, LLC
12402 N Division St #119
Spokane, WA 99218
info@bluetogold.com
www.bluetogold.com

Ordering Information:

Quantity sales. Special discounts are available on quantity purchases by government agencies, police associations, and others. For details, contact us at the address above.

Ohio Search & Seizure Survival Guide
ISBN 979-8534066920
Last updated 12-05-2024

Note: This is a general overview of the classical and current United States court decisions related to search and seizure, and liability. As an overview, it should be used for a basic analysis of the general principles but not as a comprehensive presentation of the entire body of law. It is not to be used as a substitute for the opinion or advice of the appropriate legal counsel from the reader's department. To the extent possible, the information is current. However, very recent statutory and case law developments may not be covered.

Additionally, readers should be aware that all citations in this book are meant to give the reader the necessary information to find the relevant case. Case citations do not comply with court requirements and intentionally omit additional information such as pin cites, internal citations, and subsequent case developments. The citations are intended for police officers. Lawyers must conduct due diligence and read the case completely and cite appropriately.

ADDITIONAL RESOURCES

FREE WEEKLY WEBINARS

VISIT WWW.BLUETOGOLD.COM/CALENDAR FOR MORE DETAILS

ASK THE EXPERT!

Submit your questions

bluetogold.com/show

ON-DEMAND COURSE AVAILABLE

VISIT WWW.UNIVERSITY.BLUETOGOLD.COM FOR MORE DETAILS

BlueToGold

Overview

Note about case citations:

The case names cited throughout this book are not formatted according to the Bluebook citation style, which is widely recognized in legal writing. Instead, these citations are presented in a more straightforward manner, primarily to facilitate ease of reference for readers who may wish to delve deeper into the cases themselves. This approach is adopted to enhance the accessibility of the material, especially for those who might not be familiar with the intricacies of legal citation formats. By presenting case names in a clear and direct way, the book aims to encourage readers to explore these cases further, providing a gateway to understanding the legal principles and precedents discussed more deeply.

Table of Contents

"If men were angels, no government would be necessary. If angels were to govern men, neither external nor internal controls on government would be necessary. In framing a government which is to be administered by men over men, the great difficulty lies in this: you must first enable the government to control the governed; and in the next place oblige it to control itself."

— James Madison, Father of the Fourth Amendment, 1788

Consensual Encounters

CONSENSUAL ENCOUNTERS

Consensual Encounters

The most common police encounter is the consensual one. You don't need a specific reason to speak with people and consensual encounters are a great way to continue an investigation when you have neither reasonable suspicion nor probable cause. As the Supreme Court said, "Police officers act in full accord with the law when they ask citizens for consent."⁶⁷

Start a consensual encounter by asking a question: "Can I talk to you?" Not, "Come talk to me." Also, your conduct during the encounter must be reasonable. Lengthy encounters full of accusatory questioning will likely be deemed an investigative detention, not a consensual encounter.

Finally, your un-communicated state of mind has zero bearing on whether the person would feel free to leave. Therefore, even if you had probable cause to arrest, this factor will not be considered as long as the suspect did not know that you intended to arrest him.

Legal Standard

A consensual encounter becomes a seizure when:⁶⁸

- Under the totality of the circumstances;
- A reasonably innocent person;
- Believes they do not have the freedom to terminate the encounter or leave; and
- Yields to a show of authority or physical force.

Some factors courts consider include:

- How the initial contact was made (was an order given?)
- Use of flashing lights or sirens
- Uniform versus plain clothes

⁶⁷United States v. Drayton, 536 U.S. 194 (2002)
⁶⁸CCDA Shannon Clowers

- . Number of officers
- . Demeanor of officer (conversational v. accusations)
- . Display of weapons
- . Physical touching or patdowns
- . Ordering person to move next to patrol car
- . Blocking their vehicle
- . Telling person they are free to leave
- . Reading Miranda (not recommended for consensual encounters)
- . Duration of the encounter
- . Public versus private location
- . And many others. Use common sense and talk to the person in a professional yet conversational tone.

Ohio Case Examples

These cases represent binding authority from Ohio, the 6th Circuit, or U.S. Supreme Court. It's important to confirm that these cases are consistent with current state law and agency policy which may be more restrictive.

When A Consensual Encounter Becomes A Seizure:

In State v. Jones, the Ohio Court of Appeals reviewed an encounter that began when officers approached Jones, who was parked in a high-crime area. The interaction initially qualified as consensual, as officers casually questioned Jones about his presence. However, the officers escalated the encounter into an investigatory detention when they retained his driver's license to conduct a warrants check, relying solely on their intuition and lacking specific, articulable facts to justify reasonable suspicion of criminal activity. The Court held that this transformed the encounter into a seizure, explaining, "What begins as a consensual encounter may escalate into an investigatory detention and seizure of a person that triggers Fourth Amendment scrutiny if, in view of all the circumstances surrounding the incident, a reasonable person would not feel free to leave or otherwise terminate the encounter."⁶⁹

Consensual Encounters Are Not Seizures:

⁶⁹State v. Jones, 188 Ohio App. 3d 628 (2010)

This case clarified the boundaries of consensual encounters versus seizures under the Fourth Amendment. The Court stated, "law enforcement officers do not violate the Fourth Amendment by merely approaching an individual on the street or in another public place, by asking him if he is willing to answer some questions, by putting questions to him if the person is willing to listen, or by offering in evidence in a criminal prosecution his voluntary answers to such questions." This ruling emphasized that police questioning, in itself, does not constitute a seizure, and such encounters are considered consensual, not implicating Fourth Amendment interests.⁷⁰

Police Can Ask People If They Are Willing To Answer Questions:

The Court reinforced the principle that police interactions with individuals in public spaces, such as streets or buses, where they ask questions or request consent to search luggage, do not violate the Fourth Amendment's prohibition of unreasonable seizures. The Court noted, "Law enforcement officers do not violate the Fourth Amendment's prohibition of unreasonable seizures merely by approaching individuals on the street or in other public places and putting questions to them if they are willing to listen." This decision further established that such interactions are considered consensual and do not implicate Fourth Amendment interests.⁷¹

Briefly Asking Factory Workers Questions Was Not A Seizure:

This case examined the nature of interactions between law enforcement officers and individuals, particularly in the context of questioning by officers in a factory setting. The Court's decision turned on the proposition that the interrogations by the INS were merely brief, "consensual encounters," that did not pose a threat to personal security and freedom, and thus did not amount to seizures under the Fourth Amendment.⁷²

Suspect Fit Drug Courier Profile And Police Conduct Was Not A Consensual Encounter:

A suspect who fit the so-called "drug-courier profile" was approached at an airport by two detectives. Upon request,

⁷⁰Florida v. Bostick, 111 S. Ct. 2382 (1991)
⁷¹United States v. Drayton, 122 S. Ct. 2105 (2002)
⁷²INS v. Delgado, 104 S. Ct. 1758 (1984)

but without oral consent, the suspect produced for the detectives his airline ticket and his driver's license. The detectives, without returning the airline ticket and license, asked the suspect to accompany them to a small room approximately 40 feet away, and the suspect went with them. Without the suspect's consent, a detective retrieved the suspect's luggage from the airline and brought it to the room. When the suspect was asked if he would consent to a search of his suitcases, the suspect produced a key and unlocked one of the suitcases, in which drugs were found. Court found this was not a consensual encounter and suppressed the evidence.⁷³

Non-binding Case Examples

These cases represent persuasive authority from other courts outside of Ohio and the 6th Circuit. Though not binding, they have been selected for inclusion here because if officers in Ohio find themselves in a similar situation, the outcome will likely be the same, at least in federal court.

Order To Come Over And Talk Is Not Consensual:

Suspect was observed walking in mall parking lot after stores were closed. Officer said, "Come over here, I want to talk to you." Court held officer gave command to suspect and therefore needed reasonable suspicion. Evidence was suppressed.⁷⁴

Even If Police Have Probable Cause, They Can Still Seek A Consensual Encounter With The Suspect:

"Therefore, even assuming that probable cause existed at some earlier time, there was no violation of the Fourth Amendment...No Fourth Amendment privacy interests are invaded when an officer seeks a consensual interview with a suspect."⁷⁵

Consensual Encounter And Search Valid After Officer Released Driver Following A Traffic Stop:

Where the officer stopped a vehicle to issue a traffic citation, concluded the traffic stop, indicated to the driver that he was free to leave, but then asked if the driver had drugs and whether or not the officer could search the vehicle, consent to search was voluntary.⁷⁶

Many cops call this move the "two step." After releasing the offender, the officer will turn towards his patrol car, stop, turn around, and in a Columbo-like manner say, "Sir, ⁷³ Fla. v. Royer, 460 U.S. 491 (1983).

⁷⁴ People v. Roth, 219 Cal. App. 4th 211 (Cal. App. 4th Dist. 1990).

⁷⁵ People v. Goodington, 23 Cal. 4th 529 (2000), as modified on denial of reh'g (Sep 27, 2000).

⁷⁶ U.S. v. Rivera, 906 F.2d 319 (7th Cir. 1990).

can I ask one more question before you leave....” It’s a solid way to separate the stop from the consensual encounter.

Whether Someone Feels “detained” Is Based On Objective Facts:

“The test provides that the police can be said to have seized an individual ‘only if, in view of all of the circumstances surrounding the incident, a reasonable person would have believed that he was not free to leave.’ As the test is an objective standard—looking to a reasonable person’s interpretation of the situation in question... This ‘reasonable person’ standard also ensures that the scope of Fourth Amendment protection does not vary with the state of mind of the particular individual being approached.”⁷⁷

Violation Of A State Law Does Not Equal Automatic Fourth Amendment Violation:

Although the officers may have violated state law requirements in not informing the person answering the door during “knock and talk” investigation that he had a right to terminate the encounter, that circumstance did not render the consent to talk involuntary under the Fourth Amendment.⁷⁸

⁷⁷State v. McKellips, 118 Nev. 465, 469 (2002).

⁷⁸U.S. v. Cormier, 220 F.3d 1103 (9th Cir. 2000).

CONSENSUAL ENCOUNTERS

Knock and Talks

There is no Fourth Amendment violation if you try to consensually contact a person at his home. The key to knock and talks is to comply with social norms. Think about it this way, if the Girl Scouts could do it, you can too.

You must be reasonable when you contact the subject. Constant pounding on the door, for example, would likely turn the encounter into a detention if the subject knows that it's the police knocking (an objectively reasonable person would believe that police are commanding him to open the door). Additionally, waking a subject up at 4 a.m. was viewed as a detention requiring reasonable suspicion (see below). In other words, if the Girl Scouts wouldn't do then it's probably unreasonable.

What about "No Trespass" signs? Trying to have a consensual conversation with someone is not typically considered trespassing. The same goes with "No Soliciting" signs. Still, there will be situations when a no-trespassing sign along with other factors will indicate to a reasonable person that no one should approach the front door and knock. Still, these rules don't apply to calls for service where there is an ongoing issue, like a domestic violence call or loud party complaint.

Legal Standard

Knock and talks are lawful when:

- The path used to reach the door does not violate curtilage and appears available for uninvited guests to use;
- If the house has multiple doors, you chose the door reasonably believed to be available for uninvited guests to make contact with an occupant;
- You used typical, non-intrusive methods to contact the occupant, including making contact during a socially-acceptable time;

- Your conversation with the occupant remained consensual;
- When the conversation ended or was terminated, you immediately left and didn't snoop around.

Ohio Case Examples

These cases represent binding authority from Ohio, the 6th Circuit, or U.S. Supreme Court. It's important to confirm that these cases are consistent with current state law and agency policy which may be more restrictive.

Backyard Patio Protected by the Fourth Amendment, but Conducting Knock-and-Talk is Authorized:

In State v. Young, the Court of Appeals of Ohio addressed the legality of a warrantless entry onto a backyard patio to conduct a knock and talk. A detective, investigating a possible methamphetamine manufacture, went to the subject's house to conduct a knock and talk. After knocking on the front door and receiving no response, the detective walked to the back of the house and onto a back patio, where he knocked loudly on the back door. The court found that the backyard patio was part of the home's curtilage and thus entitled to Fourth Amendment protection. However, the police detective was authorized to make a warrantless entry onto the patio to conduct a knock and talk after exhausting efforts to alert the defendant by knocking on the front door. The court stated, "[W]here knocking at the front door is unsuccessful in spite of indications that someone is in or around the house, an officer may take reasonable steps to speak with the person being sought out even where such steps require an intrusion into the curtilage."⁷⁹

Officers May Knock On The Door Reasonably Believed To Be Used By The General Public:

The U.S. Supreme Court addressed the boundaries of the "knock and talk" exception in law enforcement, particularly focusing on where officers can lawfully approach a residence without a warrant. The case revolved around whether police officers could approach a residence at a location other than the front door under the "knock and talk" exception.

The case involved Officer Carroll, who, while searching for a suspect, approached the Carmans' house and entered their deck without a warrant. The Carmans argued that this violated their Fourth Amendment rights, as the "knock and talk" exception should not apply when officers approach areas of the residence other than the front door. The District Court initially ruled in favor of Carroll, but the Third Circuit Court of Appeals reversed this decision, asserting that the "knock and talk" exception requires officers to begin their encounter at the front door.

⁷⁹State v. Young, 31 N.E.3d 178 (2015)

The Supreme Court, however, reversed the Third Circuit's decision, granting qualified immunity to Officer Carroll. The Court emphasized that the "knock and talk" exception allows officers to approach a residence in the same manner as any private citizen might, which includes areas like walkways, driveways, porches, and other places where visitors could be expected to go. The Court noted, "A government official sued under §1983 is entitled to qualified immunity unless the official violated a statutory or constitutional right that was clearly established at the time of the challenged conduct."

The Court's decision highlighted the flexibility of the "knock and talk" exception, allowing law enforcement to approach different parts of a residence, not strictly limited to the front door, as long as those areas are accessible to the general public and used as common entrances. This ruling underscores the balance between law enforcement's need to perform their duties and the protection of individual privacy rights under the Fourth Amendment.⁸⁰

Non-binding Case Examples

These cases represent persuasive authority from other courts outside of Ohio and the 6th Circuit. Though not binding, they have been selected for inclusion here because if officers in Ohio find themselves in a similar situation, the outcome will likely be the same, at least in federal court.

Knock And Talk At 4 A.m. Held Invalid:

Officers went to suspect's residence at 4 a.m. with the sole purpose to arrest him. There was no on-going crime and the probable cause was based on an offense that occurred the previous night. This was a violation of knock and talk because officers exceeded social norms.⁸¹

Command To Open Door Was Not A Consensual Encounter:

⁸⁰Carroll v. Carman, 135 S. Ct. 348 (2014)
⁸¹United States v. Lundin, 47 F. Supp. 3d 1003 (N.D. Cal. 2014)

“Officers were stationed at both doors of the duplex and [an officer] had commanded [the defendant] to open the door. A reasonable person in [defendant’s] situation would have concluded that he had no choice but to acquiesce and open the door.”⁸²

Constant Pressure To Consent To Search Held To Be Unlawful:

During a knock and talk, officers continued to press the defendant for permission to enter and search. Later consent-to-search was the product of an illegal detention.⁸³

Officer’s Statement That He Didn’t Need A Warrant To Talk With Occupant Found To Have Tainted Consent To Enter:

Officers made contact with a suspected alien at his apartment. The officers asked to enter the apartment, and the occupant asked whether they needed a warrant for that. The officers said they “didn’t need a warrant to talk to him.” Based on the totality of the circumstances, the consent was involuntary, since a reasonable occupant would have thought that police didn’t need a warrant to enter and talk.⁸⁴

Unless There Is An Express Order Otherwise, Officers Have The Same Right To Knock And Talk As A Pollster Or Salesman:

“One court stated more than forty years ago: ‘Absent express orders from the person in possession against any possible trespass, there is no rule of private or public conduct which makes it illegal per se, or a condemned invasion of the person’s right of privacy, for anyone openly and peaceably, at high noon, to walk up the steps and knock on the front door of any man’s ‘castle’ with the honest intent of asking questions of the occupant thereof—whether the questioner be a pollster, a salesman, or an officer of the law.’”⁸⁵

⁸²United States v. Poe, 462 F.3d 997 (8th Cir. Mo. 2006)
⁸³United States v. Washington, 387 F.3d 1060 (9th Cir. Nev. 2004)
⁸⁴Orhorgaghe v. I.N.S., 38 F.3d 488 (9th Cir. 1994)
⁸⁵People v. Rivera, 41 Cal. 4th 304 (2007)

 CONSENSUAL ENCOUNTERS

Investigative Activities During Consensual Encounter

Just because you're engaged in a consensual encounter doesn't mean you can't investigate. However, be careful as to how you go about it. Be cool, low key, and relaxed. Make small talk and just present yourself as a curious cop versus someone looking to make an arrest (though that may be your goal).

During a consensual encounter, there are really three investigative activities you can engage in; questioning, asking for ID, and seeking consent to search.

"[L]aw enforcement officers do not violate the Fourth Amendment by merely approaching an individual on the street or in another public place, and asking him if he is willing to answer some questions, [or] by putting questions to him if the person is willing to listen."⁸⁶

Asking for ID and running a subject for warrants doesn't automatically convert an encounter into a detention.⁸⁷ Hint, return ID as soon as possible so a reasonable person would still "feel free to leave."⁸⁸

Legal Standard

Questioning

Questioning a person does not convert a consensual encounter into an investigative detention as long as:

- Your questions are not overly accusatory in a manner that would make a reasonable person believe they were being detained for criminal activity.

Identification

Asking a person for identification does not convert a consensual encounter into an investigative detention as long as:

⁸⁶Fla. v. Royer, 460 U.S. 491 (1983)
⁸⁷People v. Bouser, 26 Cal. App. 4th 1280 (1994)
⁸⁸United States v. Chan-Jimenez, 125 F.3d 1324 (9th Cir. Ariz. 1997)

- The identification is requested, not demanded; and
- You returned the identification as soon as practicable; otherwise a reasonable person may no longer feel free to leave.

Consent to search

Asking a person for consent to search does not convert the encounter into an investigative detention as long as:

- The person's consent was freely and voluntarily given;
- He has apparent authority to give consent to search the area or item; and
- You did not exceed the scope provided, express or implied.

Ohio Case Examples

These cases represent binding authority from Ohio, the 6th Circuit, or U.S. Supreme Court. It's important to confirm that these cases are consistent with current state law and agency policy which may be more restrictive.

Consensual Encounters Are Not Seizures:

This case clarified the boundaries of consensual encounters versus seizures under the Fourth Amendment. The Court stated, "law enforcement officers do not violate the Fourth Amendment by merely approaching an individual on the street or in another public place, by asking him if he is willing to answer some questions, by putting questions to him if the person is willing to listen, or by offering in evidence in a criminal prosecution his voluntary answers to such questions." This ruling emphasized that police questioning, in itself, does not constitute a seizure, and such encounters are considered consensual, not implicating Fourth Amendment interests.⁸⁹

Police Can Ask People If They Are Willing To Answer Questions:

The Court reinforced the principle that police interactions with individuals in public spaces, such as streets or buses, where they ask questions or request consent to search luggage, do not violate the Fourth Amendment's prohibition of unreasonable seizures. The Court noted, "Law enforcement officers do not violate the Fourth ⁸⁹Florida v. Bostick, 111 S. Ct. 2382 (1991).

Amendment's prohibition of unreasonable seizures merely by approaching individuals on the street or in other public places and putting questions to them if they are willing to listen." This decision further established that such interactions are considered consensual and do not implicate Fourth Amendment interests.⁹⁰

Briefly Asking Factory Workers Questions Was Not A Seizure:

This case examined the nature of interactions between law enforcement officers and individuals, particularly in the context of questioning by officers in a factory setting. The Court's decision turned on the proposition that the interrogations by the INS were merely brief, "consensual encounters," that did not pose a threat to personal security and freedom, and thus did not amount to seizures under the Fourth Amendment.⁹¹

Suspect Fit Drug Courier Profile And Police Conduct Was Not A Consensual Encounter:

A suspect who fit the so-called "drug-courier profile" was approached at an airport by two detectives. Upon request, but without oral consent, the suspect produced for the detectives his airline ticket and his driver's license. The detectives, without returning the airline ticket and license, asked the suspect to accompany them to a small room approximately 40 feet away, and the suspect went with them. Without the suspect's consent, a detective retrieved the suspect's luggage from the airline and brought it to the room. When the suspect was asked if he would consent to a search of his suitcases, the suspect produced a key and unlocked one of the suitcases, in which drugs were found. Court found this was not a consensual encounter and suppressed the evidence.⁹²

Non-binding Case Examples

These cases represent persuasive authority from other courts outside of Ohio and the 6th Circuit. Though not binding, they have been selected for inclusion here because if officers in Ohio find themselves in a similar situation, the outcome will likely be the same, at least in federal court.

Consent To Search Was Involuntary After Arrest-like Behavior:

⁹⁰ United States v. Drayton, 122 S. Ct. 2105 (2002)
⁹¹ INS v. Delgado, 104 S. Ct. 1758 (1984)
⁹² Fla. v. Royer, 460 U.S. 491 (1983)

Suspect did not voluntarily consent to the search of his person, and suppression of a handgun discovered was warranted, where the suspect was in a bus shelter, was surrounded by three patrol cars and five uniformed officers, an officer's initial, accusatory question, combined with the police-dominated atmosphere, clearly communicated to the suspect that he was not free to leave or to refuse the officer's request to conduct the search. The officer never informed the suspect that he had the right to refuse the search, and the suspect never gave verbal or written consent, but instead merely surrendered to an officer's command.⁹³

Child illegally questioned at school while officer was present:

A child was illegally seized and questioned by a caseworker and police officer when they escorted the child off private school property, and interrogated the child for twenty minutes about intimate details of his family life and whether he was being abused. The government argued that this was a consensual encounter, but no reasonable child in that position would have believed they were free to leave.⁹⁴

Note: This case may have come out differently if they did not remove the child from school grounds. Involuntary transportation usually converts an encounter into an arrest.

⁹³ U.S. v. Robertson, 736 F.3d 677 (4th Cir. 2013)

⁹⁴ Doe v. Heck, 327 F.3d 492 (7th Cir. 2003)

CONSENSUAL ENCOUNTERS

Asking for Identification

If you make a consensual encounter, you can always request that the subject identify themselves. But remember, there is no requirement that he do so. Additionally, there is likely no crime if the subject lied about his identity during a consensual encounter (however, possession of a fraudulent ID may be a crime).

I know a lot of officers don't understand how a person can lie about his identity and get away with it. But think about it, what law requires a person to identify himself during a consensual encounter? There may be a requirement the suspect identify himself during an investigative detention, but not a consensual one.

On the other hand, lying about one's identity may help develop reasonable suspicion that the person is engaged in criminal activity, but this can't be the sole reason to detain or arrest the person.

Legal Standard

Asking a person for identification does not convert a consensual encounter into an investigative detention as long as:

- The identification is requested, not demanded; and
- You return the identification as soon as practicable; otherwise a reasonable person may no longer feel free to leave.

Ohio Case Examples

These cases represent binding authority from Ohio, the 6th Circuit, or U.S. Supreme Court. It's important to confirm that these cases are consistent with current state law and agency policy which may be more restrictive.

Valid Request For Identification During Consensual Encounter:

In United States v. Dede, the Sixth Circuit held that an entirely consensual encounter does not implicate Fourth Amendment interests. Officers from an airport drug courier interdiction task force approached two passengers, asked questions, requested identification, and sought consent to search luggage—all of which were provided voluntarily. The court stated, “Even when law enforcement officers have no basis for suspecting a particular individual, they may pose questions, ask for identification, and request consent to search luggage—provided they do not induce cooperation by coercive means.”⁹⁵

Detaining A Subject For Identification Requires Reasonable Suspicion:

“When the officers detained [suspect] for the purpose of requiring him to identify himself, they performed a seizure of his person subject to the requirements of the Fourth Amendment.”⁹⁶

Non-binding Case Examples

These cases represent persuasive authority from other courts outside of Ohio and the 6th Circuit. Though not binding, they have been selected for inclusion here because if officers in Ohio find themselves in a similar situation, the outcome will likely be the same, at least in federal court.

Providing A False Name Is Not A Crime Unless Lawfully Detained Or Arrested:

Defendant's arrest was premised on his giving a false name. The state statute criminalizes a person's false representation or identification of himself or herself to a peace officer “upon a lawful detention or arrest of [that] person” The law applies only where the false identification is given in connection with lawful detention or arrest, and does not apply to consensual encounters with police. Since defendant's subsequent arrest was based upon an unlawful detention, and the search incident to the arrest was likewise unlawful, suppression is required of contraband seized after search incident to unlawful arrest.⁹⁷

Asking For Identification, Among Other Activities, Is Held To Be Consensual:

Where a narcotics officer approached the defendant after she deplaned, identified himself and asked to speak with her; asked for her ticket, which she gave to him; asked for identification, which was produced; asked for permission to search her purse, which she allowed; and asked whether a female officer could pat her down for drugs, to which she

⁹⁵United States v. Dede, 83 F. App'x 732 (6th Cir. 2003)

⁹⁶Brown v. Tex., 99 S. Ct. 2637 (1979).

⁹⁷People v. Walker, 210 Cal. App. 4th 165 (Cal. App.6th Circuit Dist. 2012) agreed; all consents were voluntary even though the defendant was visibly nervous and became more so as the interview progressed.⁹⁸

Consent To Search For Identification Was Valid:

Following a patdown of defendant, and after defendant was not “immediately forthright” about his identity, giving only his first name and providing several false dates of birth, the officer asked defendant if he had any identification. Defendant indicated that it could be found in his back pocket. The officer asked for, and was granted, consent to retrieve the identification from defendant’s back pocket, but the pocket turned out to be empty. When asked if the identification might be located elsewhere, defendant suggested that it might be in his left front pocket, where the officer found not only an identification card, but what appeared to be cocaine.⁹⁹ Double prizes!

Holding Passenger’s Identification While Seeking Consent To Search From Driver, Held To Be An Unlawful Detention:

After stopping a car, the trooper obtained the driver’s license and the passenger’s identification card. After writing the citation, the trooper spoke to the driver outside the car. He handed the driver a citation and his license, but held onto the passenger’s identification. The trooper sought and obtained consent to search. The court held that since the passenger’s ID was still being held, the driver was not truly free to leave and the search was suppressed.¹⁰⁰

⁹⁸U.S. v. Galberth, 846 F.2d 983 (5th Cir. 1988)
⁹⁹U.S. v. Chaney, 647 F.3d 401 (1st Cir. 2011)
¹⁰⁰United States v. Macías, 658 F.3d 509, 524 (5th Cir. 2011)

 CONSENSUAL ENCOUNTERS

Removing Hands from Pockets

Generally, you may ask a subject to remove his hands from his pockets without worrying about converting the encounter into a detention. Courts understand the importance of officer safety.¹⁰¹ What if the subject refuses to comply? If you can articulate a legitimate officer safety issue, then ordering a suspect to show his hands may be deemed reasonable.

Moreover, an order to show hands may be considered a minimal interference with a person's freedom and therefore may fall under the "minimal intrusion doctrine."¹⁰² However, I do not recommend ordering a person to show their hands unless you have a legitimate and articulated safety concern.

What if the suspect still refuses to show his hands and tries to leave? Remember, this is a consensual encounter and if you decided to detain the subject you would need reasonable suspicion. An order to show hands may be a minimal intrusion, but a detention is not.

Legal Standard

Asking a person to remove his hands from his pockets does not convert a consensual encounter into an investigative detention as long as:

- . You requested that he remove his hands from his pockets; and
- . You did it for officer safety purposes.

Ordering a person to remove his hands from his pockets may not convert a consensual encounter into an investigative detention if:

- . You had a legitimate safety reason for ordering it; and ¹⁰¹People v. Franklin, 192 Cal. App. 3d 935 (Cal. App. 5th Dist. 1987)

¹⁰²Id.

You articulate that ordering the person to remove his hands was a minimal intrusion of his freedom.¹⁰³

Non-binding Case Examples

These cases represent persuasive authority from other courts outside of Ohio and the 6th Circuit. Though not binding, they have been selected for inclusion here because if officers in Ohio find themselves in a similar situation, the outcome will likely be the same, at least in federal court.

Asking A Person To Remove Hands From Pockets Is Not A Detention:

State v. Baldwin: In this case, the Florida District Court of Appeal differentiated between a command and a polite request for a suspect to remove their hands from their pockets, emphasizing officer safety. The court stated, "a request for a defendant to remove hands from pockets for reasonable purpose of officer's safety, does not elevate a consensual encounter to a detention." This case highlights that a courteous request for safety does not necessarily convert a consensual encounter into a detention.¹⁰⁴

Legal Difference Between Mere Request And Command:

The California Court of Appeal in this case clarified that simply asking a suspect to remove their hands from their pockets does not constitute a detention. The court noted, "merely asking a suspect to take his hands out of his pockets is not a detention." The case underscores the distinction between a mere request and a command in the context of police encounters.¹⁰⁵

Person Must Feel Free To Leave:

In re J.F.: The District of Columbia Court of Appeals discussed the fine line between a consensual encounter and a seizure, stating, "an officer's request that appellant take his hand out of his pocket may be considered merely a pre-seizure consensual encounter." This case illustrates how a consensual encounter can evolve into a seizure based on the perception of freedom to leave.¹⁰⁶

¹⁰³ United States v. Enslin, 327 F.3d 788 (9th Cir. Cal. 2003).
¹⁰⁴ State v. Baldwin, 686 So. 2d 682 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1996).
¹⁰⁵ People v. Frank V., 233 Cal. App. 3d 1232 (1991).
¹⁰⁶ In re J.F., 19 A.3d 304 (D.C. Ct. App. 2011).

Request Is Not The Same As A Command:

In re Frank: Similar to People v. Frank V., this case by the California Court of Appeal also dealt with the distinction between a request and a command. The court observed, "A mere request that a citizen remove his hands from his pockets is not the same as a command to stop or stay." This decision further clarifies the difference between a request and a detention during police encounters.¹⁰⁷

Direct Order To Remove Hands Is Likely A Seizure:

In re Rafeal E., the Appellate Court of Illinois found that a police command can transform a consensual encounter into a seizure. The court stated, "when a police officer approaches an individual and immediately tells him 'to remove his hands from his pockets,' a reasonable person would understand that statement as a command, not a request." This case demonstrates how a direct order from police can constitute a seizure.¹⁰⁸

Refusal To Remove Hands Is A Factor Justifying Frisk:

"The officers, after initiating the stop, twice ordered that [defendant] remove his hands from his pockets, which he refused to do. The report of an assault in progress, the matching description, and the additional factors that supported the stop provided the officers with reason to believe that [defendant] was armed and dangerous, and that the refusal to remove his hands was an effort to conceal a weapon."¹⁰⁹

D.C. Court Upheld Request To Remove Hands:

The District of Columbia Court of Appeals held that a non-intimidating request by a police officer does not constitute a seizure. The court observed, "Officer's request that appellee remove his hands from his pockets, followed by two questions and appellee's voluntary answers, met the Supreme Court test for a pre-seizure, consensual encounter." This case underscores that certain police interactions can remain within the bounds of a consensual encounter.¹¹⁰

¹⁰⁷ In re Frank, 233 Cal. App. 3d 1232 (1991).
¹⁰⁸ In re Rafeal E., 2014 IL App. (1st) 133027 (Ill. App. Ct. 2014).
¹⁰⁹ United States v. Simmons, 560 F.3d 987 (D.C. Cir. 2009).
¹¹⁰ United States v. Barnes, 496 A.2d 1040 (D.C. Ct. App. 1985).

CONSENSUAL ENCOUNTERS

Transporting to Police Station

There is no Fourth Amendment violation if you consensually transport a subject to the police station for a consensual interview or to a crime scene. The key is that the subject's consent must be freely and voluntarily given.

Legal Standard

You may voluntarily transport a person in a police vehicle. However, if the person is a suspect to a crime and you are transporting the person for an interview, remember:

- Make it clear to the person that he is not under arrest;
- Seek consent to patdown the suspect for weapons; if the patdown is denied, do not patdown and you probably should not transport.

Ohio Case Examples

These cases represent binding authority from Ohio, the 6th Circuit, or U.S. Supreme Court. It's important to confirm that these cases are consistent with current state law and agency policy which may be more restrictive.

Transporting To Police Station Without PC Held To Be Unlawful:

In State v. Byrd, the Court of Appeals of Ohio examined whether the police officers had probable cause to transport the defendant to the police station for fingerprint identification without her consent. The defendant, a passenger in a stopped vehicle, failed to provide identification, but provided the officer information which matched the computer check. However, there were inconsistencies with her arrest record and driver's license history, so the officer took her to the police station for fingerprint ID. The court found that the officers lacked probable cause, making the transport a violation of Byrd's Fourth Amendment rights. The Court stated, "... the Fourth Amendment prohibits transporting a suspect to the station house for fingerprinting absent probable cause, the suspect's consent, or prior judicial authorization. While articulable suspicion may be enough to justify a brief detention in the field for fingerprinting, it does not justify the involuntary removal of a suspect to the police station, which is sufficiently akin to arrest to require probable cause."¹¹¹

Involuntary Transportation To Police Station Will Normally Be An Arrest:

In the case of Dunaway v. New York, the U.S. Supreme Court addressed the issue of whether police actions violated the Fourth and Fourteenth Amendments. The case revolved around the petitioner, Dunaway, who was taken into custody without probable cause, transported to a police station, and detained for interrogation. The Court scrutinized whether this constituted an unreasonable seizure under the Fourth Amendment.

The Court's analysis centered on the nature of the seizure and the lack of probable cause. The key excerpt from the case is: "We first consider whether the Rochester police violated the Fourth and Fourteenth Amendments when, without probable cause to arrest, they took petitioner into custody, transported him to the police station, and detained him there for interrogation. [...] There can be little doubt that petitioner was 'seized' in the Fourth Amendment sense when he was taken involuntarily to the police station. And respondent State concedes that the police lacked probable cause to arrest petitioner before his incriminating statement during interrogation."¹¹²

Non-binding Case Examples

These cases represent persuasive authority from other courts outside of Ohio and the 6th Circuit. Though not binding, they have been selected for inclusion here because if officers in Ohio find themselves in a similar situation, the outcome will likely be the same, at least in federal court.

No Violation When A Person Agrees To Accompany Police:

Appellate courts have held that when a person agrees to accompany the police to a station for an interrogation or some other purpose, the Fourth Amendment is not violated.¹¹³

¹¹¹State v. Byrd, 185 Ohio App.3d 30 (2009)

¹¹²Dunaway v. New York, 1979 U.S. LEXIS 126, 442 U.S. 200 (1979)

¹¹³In re Gilbert R., 25 Cal. App. 4th 1121 (Cal. App. 2d Dist. 1994)

No Seizure After Agreeing To Accompany Police To The Station And Staying For Five Hours:

No seizure where defendant went with police to station and stayed there five hours before probable cause developed for his arrest.¹¹⁴

CONSENSUAL ENCOUNTERS

Consent to Search

Absent good reason, you should routinely seek consent to search a person or his property even if you have reasonable suspicion or probable cause. Why? Because this will add an extra layer of protection to your case. For example, let's imagine you have probable cause to search a vehicle for drugs but still receive consent to search, the prosecution essentially needs to prove that consent was freely and voluntarily given.¹¹⁵ If that fails, the prosecutor can fall back on your probable cause.

Without consent your case depends entirely on articulating P.C. Why not have both? Plus, juries like to see officers asking for consent. Either way, do your prosecutor a solid and write a complete and articulate report.

Legal Standard

Asking a person for consent to search does not convert the encounter into an investigative detention as long as:

- The person's consent was freely and voluntarily given;
- He had apparent authority to give consent to search the area or item; and
- You did not exceed the scope provided, expressed or implied. Scope is determined by objectively viewing the situation from the suspect's position.¹¹⁶ Where would a reasonable person think you would search? It's not based only on where police think evidence would be found. .

¹¹⁴ Craig v. Singletary, 27 F.3d 1030 (11th Cir. 1997)

¹¹⁵ Bumper v. North Carolina, 391 U.S. 543 (1968)

¹¹⁶ State v. Ruscetta, 123 Nev. 299 (2007)

. Courts may look at four factors when evaluating whether or not the scope of search was exceeded: time, duration, area, and intensity.¹¹⁷ See case examples below.

- . Time: Was the search executed within the time frame contemplated by the suspect?
- . Duration: Was the search unreasonably lengthy?
- . Area: Did officers search areas where the item sought could be found?
- . Intensity: Did the methods used to search exceed the bounds of consent?

Things that help consent:¹¹⁸

- . Telling person they do not have to allow the search
- . Telling person what you are searching for
- . Fewer officers
- . Plain clothes
- . No weapons displayed
- . No trickery such as hinting “no prosecution”
- . Relatively short contact before consent given
- . Friendly tone of voice, not threatening or commanding.
- . Giving Miranda warnings (especially if person is in custody)
- . All factors about the person giving consent such as: age, experience with the police, physical and mental condition, fluency in English.

Things that hurt consent:¹¹⁹

- . Display of weapons or hand on weapon
- . Large number of police, especially uniformed
- . Deceit or trickery about either purpose or outcome
- . Officer’s threatening demeanor, tone of voice

¹¹⁷Id.

¹¹⁸Clark County Nevada DA Search and Seizure Manual for Lawyers (2015)

¹¹⁹Id.

- A claim that police have authority to do the search anyway such as false claim that police have a warrant
- Negatives about the person giving consent (young, lower intelligence, drunk, poor English).

Ohio Case Examples

These cases represent binding authority from Ohio, the 6th Circuit, or U.S. Supreme Court. It's important to confirm that these cases are consistent with current state law and agency policy which may be more restrictive.

Taint Of Unlawful Entry Dissipated By Consent To Search:

In State v. Barnes, the Court of Appeals of Ohio examined whether the defendant's roommate voluntarily consented to the search of their residence and whether the taint of the officer's unlawful entry into the residence dissipated by the time the roommate consented to the search. Police arrested Barnes at his residence for drug trafficking. After the arrest, another officer who remained at the scene unlawfully entered the home without a warrant and spoke with the roommate who later signed a consent form allowing a search that uncovered drugs and weapons. Barnes moved to suppress the evidence, arguing that the roommate's consent was involuntary and tainted by the officer's illegal entry. The Court held that Barnes' roommate voluntarily consented to the search of their residence and the taint of the officer's unlawful entry dissipated by the time the roommate consented to the search. The Court stated, "Consent to a search waves the requirement that the State procure a warrant if that consent is freely and voluntarily given."¹²⁰

The Officer Has The Burden To Prove Consent Was Voluntary:

In the Supreme Court case Bumper v. North Carolina, the Court addressed the issue of whether a search can be justified as lawful on the basis of consent when that "consent" has been given only after the official conducting the search has asserted that he possesses a warrant. The Court held that there can be no consent under such circumstances, stating, "When a prosecutor seeks to rely upon consent to justify the lawfulness of a search, he has the burden of proving that the consent was, in fact, freely and voluntarily given. This burden cannot be discharged by showing no more than acquiescence to a claim of lawful authority."¹²¹

¹²⁰State v. Barnes, 96 N.E.3d 969 (2017)

Consent Is Based On The Totality Of The Circumstances:

In Schneckloth v. Bustamonte, the Supreme Court dealt with the issue of consent in the context of law enforcement searches. The Court held that the voluntariness of consent to search must be determined from the totality of all the circumstances, and knowledge of the right to refuse consent is not a prerequisite to establishing a voluntary consent. The Court stated, "It is only by analyzing all the circumstances of an individual consent that it can be ascertained whether in fact it was voluntary or coerced." This decision highlights the Court's recognition of the practical challenges in requiring law enforcement to provide warnings about the right to refuse consent in the context of routine investigations.¹²²

Non-binding Case Examples

These cases represent persuasive authority from other courts outside of Ohio and the 6th Circuit. Though not binding, they have been selected for inclusion here because if officers in Ohio find themselves in a similar situation, the outcome will likely be the same, at least in federal court.

"I Don't Care," Response Implied Consent:

Suspect was stopped for speeding. He was suspected of drug possession and officer asked for consent to search. Suspect responded, "I don't care." Search revealed crack cocaine. Suspect's statement implied consent to search.¹²³

Note: this type of consent is not ideal and officers should try to get unambiguous consent to search.

Patdown Of A Suspect Who Wanted To Get Out Of The Vehicle Upheld:

A vehicle was stopped for an equipment violation. The driver wanted to get out and see proof that his taillight was broken. The officer said only on the condition that he be subject to a patdown. Suspect said, "that was fine" and stepped out. The patdown revealed drugs. The suspect voluntarily consented to the patdown.¹²⁴

¹²¹ Bumper v. North Carolina, 391 U.S. 543 (1968)

¹²² Schneckloth v. Bustamonte, 412 U.S. 218 (1973)

¹²³ United States v. Polly, 630 F.3d 991 (10th Cir. Okla. 2011)

¹²⁴ State v. Cunningham, 26 N.E.3d 21 (Ind. 2015)

Search Of Van Two Days After Written Consent Received Was Upheld As Reasonable:

In-custody suspect gave written consent to search van for forensic evidence of a rape. Van was searched two days later by different agents. Under these particular circumstances, the time of the search was reasonable.¹²⁵

Note: Ideally, the suspect would have been told the search would be executed two days later. But since he was in custody and never revoked consent, the court upheld it.

Request For A “real Quick” Search Was Exceeded After 15 Minutes And Unscrewing A Speaker Box Panel:

With defendant agreeing to the officer’s request to “check (defendant’s car) real quick and get you on your way,” the scope of that consent was exceeded at some point before the search had continued for fifteen minutes without finding anything, and certainly when the officer later pulled a box from the trunk and removed the back panel to the box by unscrewing some screws.¹²⁶

Directly “touching” Genitals Was Beyond The Implied Consent:

Officer got consent to search for drugs and “within seconds” reached down the defendant’s crotch and felt the suspect’s genital area searching for drugs. This area was not included in the consent to search.

Note: Searching “near” genital area is often upheld.¹²⁷

Damaging Property Requires “express Consent”:

Officer got consent to search for drugs and opened a “tamales in gravy” can. Drugs were found inside. Since the officer “rendered the can useless” express permission was required.¹²⁸

¹²⁵U.S. v. White, 617 F.2d 1131 (5th Cir. 1989)
¹²⁶People v. Cantor, 149 Cal.App.4th 961 (2007)
¹²⁷U.S. v. Blake, 888 F.2d 795 (11th Cir. 1989)
¹²⁸U.S. v. Osage, 235 F.3d 518 (10th Cir. 2000)

CONSENSUAL ENCOUNTERS

Third-Party Consent

You may seek consent to search a residence from co-occupants or others in control of property belonging to another person. However, the situation changes when there is a present non-consenting co-occupant. If one occupant tells you to “Come on in and bring your friends!” and another yells “Get the hell out, I’m watching Netflix!” Well, you must stay out.

What about areas under the exclusive control of the consentor? For example, the “cooperative” tenant says you can still search his bedroom? Or a shed that he has exclusive control over in the backyard? There is no case that deals directly with this issue, but if the area is truly under the exclusive control of the consenting party, and you can articulate that the non-consenting party has no reasonable expectation of privacy in that area, it would likely be reasonable to search just that area. But one issue remains; you still may not be able to access the area under the cooperative tenant’s control without walking through common areas—common areas would still be off limits because the non-consenting party has authority over them.

The best practice is to wait until the non-consenting occupant has left the residence and then seek consent from the cooperative occupant. In other words, if the non-consenting occupant goes to work, a store, or is lawfully removed, the remaining occupant can consent to a search. Still; do not search areas under the exclusive control of the non-consenting party. This may include file cabinets, “man-caves,” purses, backpacks, and so forth.

Finally, if the consenting party has greater authority over the residence, then police may rely on that consent. For example, if a casual visitor or babysitter objected to police entry, it may be overruled by the homeowner. Remember, you may not search personal property under the exclusive control of the visitor or babysitter.

Legal Standard

Spouses and Co-Occupants:

Spouses or co-occupants may consent to search inside a home if:

- . The person has apparent authority;
- . Consent is only given for common areas, areas under his exclusive control, or areas or things the person has authorized access to; and
- . A non-consenting spouse or co-occupant with the same or greater authority is not present.

Articulating Greater Authority:

An occupant with greater authority over the premises may consent to search over areas either under his exclusive control or common areas if:

- . The co-occupant had greater authority over the area searched;
- . You did not enter or walk through any area where the non-consenting occupant had equal or greater authority;
- . You did not search any property under the exclusive control of the non-consenting occupant; and
- . Your search did not exceed the scope provided by the consenting occupant.

Ohio Case Examples

These cases represent binding authority from Ohio, the 6th Circuit, or U.S. Supreme Court. It's important to confirm that these cases are consistent with current state law and agency policy which may be more restrictive.

Apparent Authority To Consent Justified Warrantless Search Of A Bedroom:

In State v. Bradley, the Court of Appeals of Ohio examined whether the facts available to the officer were sufficient to support a reasonable belief that a third party had apparent authority to consent to a search of the upstairs bedroom where the defendant was located. An officer responded to an aggravated menacing complaint involving Bradley, who was accused of pointing a handgun at his brother-in-law,

Eric Potter. Believing Potter was the homeowner, the officer obtained his consent to search an upstairs bedroom, where they discovered a handgun, ammunition, drug paraphernalia, heroin, and crack cocaine. The Court held that the facts available to the officer were sufficient to support a reasonable belief that a third party had apparent authority to consent to a search of the upstairs bedroom where the defendant was located. Moreover, the defendant's Fourth Amendment rights were not violated by the warrantless search conducted pursuant to the third party's consent. The Court stated, "Even if an officer erroneously believes that a third-party is authorized to give consent, using an objective standard, third-party consent is valid if an officer looking at the then-available facts could reasonably conclude that the third-party had apparent authority to consent."¹²⁹

If Non-consenting Occupant Is Arrested Or Leaves, Remaining Occupant May Consent To A Search Despite Prior Objection:

Police could conduct a warrantless search of defendant's apartment following defendant's arrest, based on consent to the search by a woman who also occupied the apartment, although defendant had objected to the search prior to his arrest and was absent at the time of the woman's consent because of his arrest.¹³⁰

If An Occupant Invites Police Inside, Police May Assume Other Occupants Wouldn't Object Unless They Speak Up:

In the case of Georgia v. Randolph, the Supreme Court of the United States addressed the issue of whether a warrantless search of a residence is lawful with the permission of one occupant when another occupant, who is present at the scene, expressly refuses to consent. The Court held that "a physically present co-occupant's stated refusal to permit entry prevails, rendering the warrantless search unreasonable and invalid as to him." This decision was made in the context of a domestic dispute where the wife, after returning to the marital home, informed the police of her husband's cocaine use and consented to a search of their home, while the husband objected. The Court emphasized the importance of the refusal of a present co-occupant in determining the legality of a warrantless search. This ruling underscores the balance between law enforcement interests and the constitutional rights of individuals in shared living situations.¹³¹

¹²⁹*State v. Bradley*, 102 N.E.3d 618 (2017)

¹³⁰*Fernandez v. California*, 571 U.S. 292 (2014)

Non-binding Case Example

Consent Of Wife Was Valid After Non-consenting Husband Left The Residence:

"The consent of one who possesses common authority over premises or effects" generally "is valid as against the absent, non-consenting person with whom that authority is shared."¹³²

¹³¹ Georgia v. Randolph, 547 U.S. 103 (2006)

¹³² United States v. Cordero-Rosario, 786 F.3d 64 (1st Cir. P.R. 2015)

 CONSENSUAL ENCOUNTERS

Mistaken Authority to Consent

If you're a prudent officer you normally ask for consent to search, even if you have P.C.. Why? Because valid consent adds an extra layer of protection for your criminal case.

But sometimes you may think you're dealing with an occupant who has the authority to consent, but later find out you were wrong. For example, the consent was received from a guest, not homeowner. Here, courts will look to see if your mistake was reasonable.

For example, if an adult female answers the door and consents to a search and cops look around the apartment and it's fairly obvious that only a man lives there, then courts expect officers to stop searching and ask more questions about her connection to the apartment. In the end, she may be an overnight guest with no apparent authority over the defendant's property.

Legal Standard

If you mistakenly receive consent from a person who had "apparent authority," courts will employ a three-part analysis to determine if your mistake was reasonable:

- . Did you believe some untrue fact;
 - . Was it objectively reasonable for you to believe that the fact was true under the circumstances at the time; and
 - . If it was true, would the consent giver have had actual authority?
-

Ohio Case Examples

These cases represent binding authority from Ohio, the 6th Circuit, or U.S. Supreme Court. It's important to confirm that these cases are consistent with current state law and agency policy which may be more restrictive.

Ownership Alone Does Not Establish Apparent Authority:

In State v. French, the Ohio Court of Appeals held that property ownership alone does not justify apparent authority for a Fourth Amendment search. Police conducted a warrantless search of a drug suspect's home based on the consent of the suspect's father, the property owner. However, the officers knew the suspect resided in the house and failed to confirm whether the father lived there, had ever resided there, or maintained access. This lack of investigation undermined the reasonableness of the officers' reliance on the father's consent. The court concluded, "The only information that the police had was that appellee's father owned the residence, and that such information alone does not give the police a reasonable belief of common authority to justify the search of the home."¹³³

Police May Rely On Apparent Authority:

In Illinois v. Rodriguez, the Supreme Court of the United States addressed the validity of a warrantless entry based on the consent of a third party who the police reasonably believe possesses authority over the premises, but who in fact does not. The Court held that a warrantless entry does not violate the Fourth Amendment if the officers have obtained the consent of a third party who they reasonably believe to possess common authority over the premises. Justice Scalia, delivering the opinion of the Court, stated, "The Fourth Amendment generally prohibits the warrantless entry of a person's home, whether to make an arrest or to search for specific objects. The prohibition does not apply, however, to situations in which voluntary consent has been obtained, either from the individual whose property is searched, or from a third party who possesses common authority over the premises." This case involved the arrest of Edward Rodriguez in his apartment by law enforcement officers, who gained entry with the consent and assistance of Gail Fischer, who had lived there with Rodriguez for several months but did not have actual authority over the premises at the time of the search."¹³⁴

Non-binding Case Examples

These cases represent persuasive authority from other courts outside of Ohio and the 6th Circuit. Though not binding, they have been selected for inclusion here because if officers in Ohio find themselves in a similar situation, the outcome will likely be the same, at least in federal court.

¹³³*State v. French*, 2020-Ohio-3653 (2020)

¹³⁴*Ill. v. Rodriguez*, 497 U.S. 177 (1990)

Police May Assume That The Adult Who Answered The Door Had Authority:

Police were trying to locate a robbery suspect and knocked on his door. A visitor answered and consented to their request to enter. "Police may assume, without further inquiry, that [an adult] person who answers the door in response to their knock has the authority to let them enter."¹³⁵

¹³⁵People v. Ledesma, 39 Cal. 4th 641 (Cal. 2006)

Index

AIRPORT & OTHER ADMINISTRATIVE CHECKPOINTS, 333

ARRESTS

"Contempt of Cop" Arrests, 140
Collective Knowledge Doctrine, 126
Drugs, attempt to swallow, 151
DUI blood tests, 154
DUI breath tests, 152
Lawful, 116
Line-Ups, 131
Meaning of "Committed in the Officer's Presence?" 129
Protective sweeps, 134
Public protests, arrests at, 143
Search, "temporary" arrest, 149
Search, incident to, 145
Search, prior to formal arrest, 147
Vehicle search, incident to, 156
Warrant, entry with, 121
Warrantless entry, 124
When to "Un-arrest" a Suspect, 137

ARSON INVESTIGATIONS, 331

BORDER SEARCHES, 336

BUSINESSES & SCHOOLS

Customer business records, 272
Fire, health, and safety inspections, 276
Government workplace searches, 278
Heavily regulated businesses, 274
School searches, 279
SROs, security guards, and administrators, 284
Student drug testing, 283
Use of force against students, 287
Warrantless arrest inside business, 270

C.R.E.W., 21

CAUSE-OF-INJURY SEARCHES, 324

CHECKPOINTS

Airport & other administrative, 333
DUI, 170

COLLECTIVE KNOWLEDGE DOCTRINE, 38, 126

CONFIDENTIAL INFORMANTS, 347

CONSENSUAL ENCOUNTERS

Asking for Identification, 60
Consensual Encounters, 47
Consent to search, 68
Investigative activities during Consensual Encounter, 56
Knock and Talks, 52
Mistaken authority to consent, 76
Removing hands from pockets, 63
Third-party consent, 73
Transporting to Police Station, 66

DECISION SEQUENCING, 20

DISCARDED DNA, 329

DUI

blood tests, 154
breath tests, 152
checkpoints, 170

FINGERNAIL SCRAPES, 330

FOURTH AMENDMENT

Fourth Amendment, 14
Reasonableness, 23
Search, 41
Seizure, 43

HOMES

Child's room, parental consent to search, 232
Co-occupants, consent to search, 229
Curtilage, 221
Detaining a home in anticipation of a warrant, 265
Fresh pursuit, 239

Hot pursuit, 239
Hotel rooms, 212
Knock and talks, 216
Mistaken authority to consent,
234
Open fields, 219
Overview and standing, 209

Plain view seizure, 224
Protective sweeps, 236
RVs, 212
“Ruse” or lie, convincing suspect to exit, 263
Surround and call-out, 267
Tents, 212
Trash searches, 227
Warrantless arrest at doorway,
243
Warrantless entry based on “ruse” or lie, 260
Warrantless entry for an emergency, 248
Warrantless entry for officer safety, 250
Warrantless entry to investigate
child abuse, 253
Warrantless entry to investigate
homicide crime, 257
Warrantless entry to make arrest, 246
Warrantless entry to prevent destruction of evidence, 258
Warrantless entry to protect property, 255

HUNCHES, 30

INVESTIGATIVE ACTIVITIES, 56

INVESTIGATIVE DETENTIONS

Anonymous tip, 93
Detaining a suspect, 82
During stop, 88
Factors to consider, 79
Field identifications, 90
Flight, upon seeing officer, 91
Handcuffing, 97
Involuntary Transportation, 109
Length of detention, 86
Officer safety detentions, 84
Patdown, 101, 105

Plain Feel Doctrine, 107
Recording of Officer, 112
Use of force, 97
Victims, detaining, 99
Witnesses, detaining, 99

KNOCK AND ANNOUNCE, 350

KNOCK AND TALKS,

Consensual Encounters, 47

Homes, 216

LAW ENFORCEMENT LIABILITY

Attenuation, 374
Behavior that “shocks the conscience”, 386
Deliberate indifference, 388
Duty to intervene, 381
Duty to protect, 379
Exclusionary rule, 366
Exclusionary rule, exceptions, 368
Fruit of the poisonous tree, 369
Good faith exception, 372
Inevitable or independent discovery,
376
Non-essential personnel, bringing into the home, 393
Qualified immunity, 394
Section 1983 civil rights violations,
391
Section 242 criminal charges, 392
Social media, sharing crime scene photos on, 390
Standing to object, 370
Supervisor liability, 383
Unequal enforcement of the law,
385

LEFT ALONE, RIGHT TO BE, 19

MEDICAL PROCEDURES, 326

MISCELLANEOUS SEARCHES & SEIZURES

Airport & other administrative checkpoints, 333
Arson investigations, 331
Border searches, 336

Cause-of-injury searches, 324
Discarded DNA, 329
Fingernail scrapes, 330
Medical procedures, 326
Probationer & parolee searches, 338

Recording of police, 112
School search, 279, 284
Stops, 166
Unrelated questioning, 202
Vehicles, 166, 170

OHIO CONSTITUTION, 16

PATDOWNS

Based on anonymous tip, 105
For weapons, 101

PERSONAL PROPERTY,

Abandoned or Lost Property, 293

Searching containers, 290
Mail or Packages, 296
Single Purpose Container Doctrine, 291

PLAIN FEEL DOCTRINE, 107

PRIVATE SEARCHES, 26

PROBABLE CAUSE, 35

PROBATIONER & PAROLEE SEARCHES, 338

PROTECTIVE SWEEPS

Arrests, 134
Homes, 236

REASONABLE SUSPICION

Border search, 336
Community caretaking, 164
Confidential informants, 347
Consensual encounters, 47
Defined, 33
Detaining a suspect, 82
Drug testing, students, 283
Handcuffing, 97
Hands in pockets, removing, 63
Hot pursuit, 239
Hunches, 30
Identification, asking for, 60
K9, 185
Knock and talks, 52, 216
Length of detention, 86
Passengers, 176, 183, 200, 204
Protective sweep, 134, 236

REASONABLENESS, 23

RIGHT 'TO BE LEFT ALONE', 19

SEARCH WARRANTS

Anticipatory search warrant, 345
Confidential informants, 347

Detaining occupants inside and in immediate vicinity, 354
Frisking occupants, 357
Handcuffing occupants, 359
Knock and announce, 351
Overview, 342
Particularity requirement, 344
Receipt, return, and inventory, 364
Sealing affidavits, 349
Serving arrest warrant at residence, 361
Wrong address liability, 363

SEARCH

Arrest, incident to, 145
Border searches, 336
Cause of injury searches, 324
Child's room, parental consent to search, 232
Consent to search a vehicle, 178
Co-occupants, consent to search by, 229
Defined, 41
Government workplace searches, 278
Prior to formal arrest, 147
Private Searches, 26
Probationer & parolee searches, 338
School searches, 279
Searching vehicle incident to arrest, 189
Searching vehicle with probable cause, 192
Technology searches, 299-321
"Temporary" arrest, 149
Trash searches, 227
Vehicle search, incident to arrest, 189

SEIZURE (See also MISCELLANEOUS SEARCHES & SEIZURES)

Defined, 43

Temporary registration, verification of, 168
Unrelated questioning, 202

WRONG ADDRESS LIABILITY, 363

TECHNOLOGY SEARCHES

Aerial surveillance, 310
Automatic license plate readers,
318
Binoculars, 302
Cell phones, laptops and tablets,
307
Cell phone location records, 308
Drones, 312
Flashlights, 300

GPS devices, 320
Night vision goggles, 304
Obtaining passwords, 321
Pole cameras, 315
Sensory enhancements, 299
Thermal imaging, 305

VEHICLES

Checkpoints, DUI, 170
Checkpoints, information gathering,
173
Checkpoints, legal considerations,
175
Community caretaking, 164
Consent to search a vehicle, 178
Constructive possession, 204
Dangerous items left in vehicle, 195
Frisking people who ride in police vehicle, 181
General rule, 160
Inventories, 196
K9 sniff around vehicle, 185
Ordering passengers to stay in, or exit vehicle, 176
Passengers, identifying, 200
Reasonable suspicion, 166
Scope of stop similar to an investigative detention, 162
Searching vehicle and occupants for weapons, 183
Searching vehicle incident to arrest,
189
Searching vehicle with probable cause, 192

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Anthony Bandiero, JD, ALM

Anthony is an attorney and retired law enforcement officer with experience as both a municipal police officer and sergeant with a state police agency. Anthony has studied constitutional law for over twenty years and has trained countless police officers around the nation in search and seizure.

View his bio at BlueToGold.com/about

OHIO
Search & Seizure
Survival Guide

Your job as an officer is almost completely controlled by the Fourth and Fifth Amendments. Therefore, you need a reference that can break down these important constitutional doctrines into easy-to-apply checklists. That's what this book does. If you need guidance in the field, pick up this book. When you get back to the station and need help articulating the legal standards for your report, pick up this book.

There are other legal references out there and I highly recommend you read them. But this book has one serious competitive advantage: it was written by a retired police officer-turned-attorney who has been in your shoes, and knows what you need to know.

Blue to Gold

Visit: Bluetogold.com

Training | Legal Updates | Free Webinars

