Starting from the ancient Phoenician port city of Cádiz, the oldest city in Western Europe. We will spend our first four days exploring the mountain roads of south-eastern Spain, tracing upwards from this majestic peninsula on the Andalusian Atlantic coast along the Gulf of Cádiz via the Doñana National Park, toward Seville. There will be an overnight stop in the old town of Huelva before we head south to Gibraltar via the rugged mountain peaks and cork oak forests of the Parque Natural Los Alcomocales.

DAY 5

TUESDAY 10TH NOVEMBER | GIBRALTAR TO MALAGA

Day five begins in the British overseas territory of Gibraltar, as we climb north through the narrow prehistoric valleys and charming whitewashed villages of the Sierra de Grazalema towards our lunch halt in Ronda. This ancient town which sits astride the 150-metre-deep Tajo del Ronda gorge, is one of Spain's oldest and most culturally significant settlements, having been inhabited by Celts, Phoenicians, Romans and Arabs.
