DORUKHAN AYHAN

I am a third-year Interior Architecture student at Eastern Mediterranean University. Throughout my studies, I have taken on numerous professional roles during the summer months, primarily in international projects. I am highly proficient with technology, quick to adapt to innovations, and eager to learn. I believe I have proven myself in both academic and professional settings when it comes to communication and team leadership. I have a deep passion for architecture and design.

LOUNGE

LOUNGE

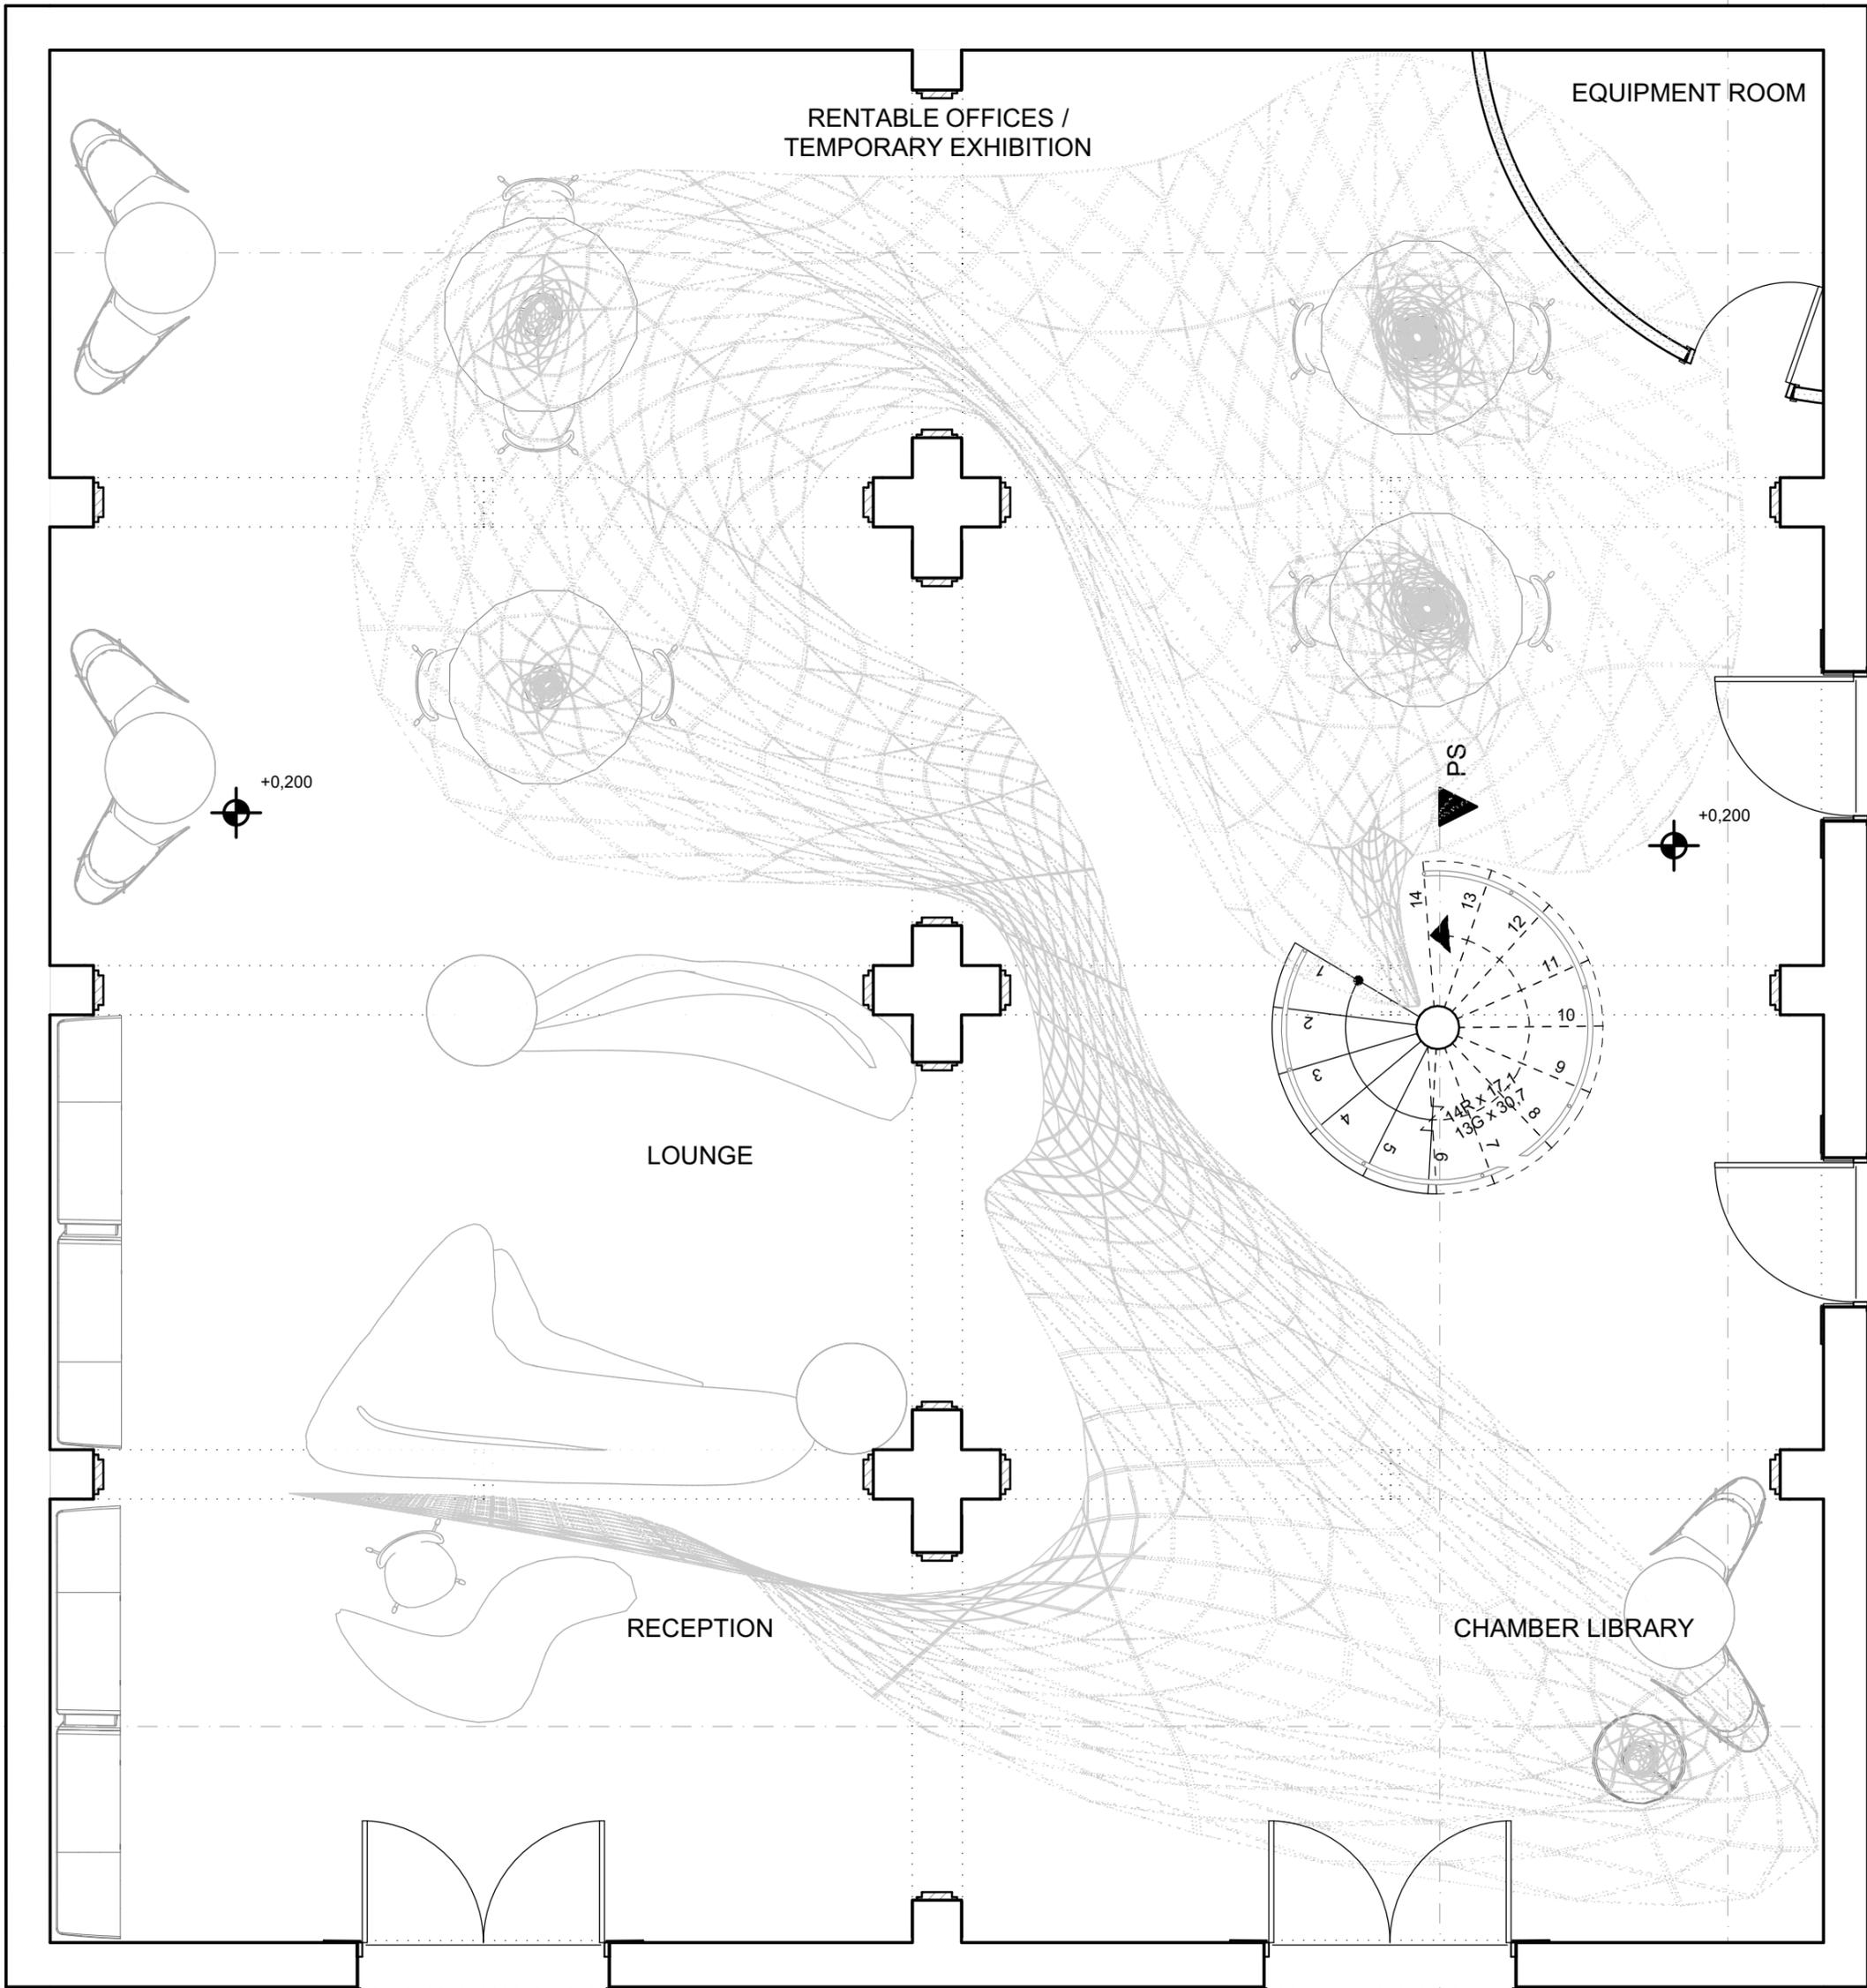

In this design, space emerges from the 3D vectors, invisible forces that shape structures—tension, compression, torsion, shear, and bending. A parametric mesh reacts to these forces, evolving into an organic form that defines the interior. The result is a space sculpted by structural logic, blending building's historic original texture with contemporary elements creating a symbiosis, where movement and pressure generate fluidity and function.
