WELCOME TO LIBRA DRINKS WINE PORTFOLIO

This iteration has been waiting in the wings for a few years now and so I'm incredibly proud to be finally bringing this to you. The hiatus was initially due to our common national blip, caused by the Covid UK lockdown and then a change at the helm in the Libra wine buyers' position. Like a change of manager at any football club, the players may fundamentally stay the same, but there is more often than not, a change in philosophy.

Having spent a quarter of century in the wine industry, I have come to terms with the fact that the wine industry can unintentionally or otherwise have elements of smoke and mirrors making it opaquer than it should; and even building a simple wine list can prove to be thoroughly misjudged. Both of these can be brushed aside by understanding what wine really is and how the general on-trade public buy wine. If you can build a list with the end consumer in the foreground; understand why they are buying wine at that time in that venue and then manage that risk of choice; you can sit a little easier knowing that they have every chance in drinking a wine that fits their taste palate for that occasion. It's a win-win from a commercial and customer experience standpoint - and for me that's how you enjoy the world of wine!

With this ideology at the core of my wine buying, I have listed approximately 100 new wines to refresh and re-energise the Libra Wine portfolio over the last year.

I am building from the ground up with a set of foundation wines which taste and look great. This really should be wine buyer's hardest job. It's the foot in the door for all parties but the area which is least rock'n'roll and toughest to get the nail the trinity of taste, label, and price. Let me highlight three which I think I am confident I have got close to getting that right. Have a look at the contemporary 'La Vivenda' Spanish trio which is a great everyday treat; the classic yet modern 'Ancien Temps' Southern French trio which shows great intensity and the more edgy and fruit forward South African 'Primordial Soup' duo.

The mid-tier can be the area where we find the most playful of labels and wines. Some of my personal favourites are all donning fabulous mustaches or beards. These include the creatively oaked Malbicio Malbec from Argentina; a mid-priced Margaret River River Semillon/Sauvignon and Cab/Merlot called the Busselton Boys and wine I have worked with for many years from Lodi County, California aptly named Caberet Frank using the daddy of the Cabernet family, Cabernet Franc with the grapes being sourced from 45 year old vines.

I am also a huge fan of Italian wines, and I am definitely over-indexing in this particular category. My current staples include a deep honey-coloured 'Miopasso Apassimento Grillo', a wine made by using a blend of dried and fresh white grapes and the full bodied and intense southern Italian 'Paolo Leo Salice Salentino Riserva' which is dark, jammy, spicy and leaves you with touch of sweetness on the palate...a real crowd pleaser.

Our backbone is still, however, wine sourced from the 29 strong member group called the Society of Vintners. As one of the larger and long-standing members, Libra and myself play an influential and active part in how we shape the taste and look of the wines we communally bring into the country from around the world. This adds to the uniqueness Libra can bring to your business and how we are so much more than just a local wine supplier. And being local is not a dirty word when choosing a wine supplier when your wine supplier can offer such depth, exclusivity, and agility to make a real difference to your business.

So let me sign off on this intro with a couple of Raj-ism, which if you've been to any of my training sessions, you'll know is my philosophy to the Vitis Vinifera: wine is not a complicated thing, it's just a grape going on holiday...it really is just liquid geography.

And everyone in the industry, to be fair should have good wine...but it's never just the ingredients but how you chef and present it that matters.

Ciao for now, and happy drinking!

Raj Solanki
(DipWSET / Chevalier Ordre des Coteaux de Champagne)

SPAIN

FAMILIA TORRES

We began producing wine in Penedès in 1870, although our winegrowing roots date back to the 16th century, and we've been fortunate enough that each generation has felt the same devotion to and love for the land. Ours has been, and is, a life lived among the vines, weaving an inseparable connection to the landscapes of wine.

The wines we make today under the name Familia Torres represent a mosaic of properties that are largely historical, with winegrowing associations that reach far into the past. We know that the same lands we work today were already being cultivated hundreds or even thousands of years ago. We feel lucky and, at the same time, responsible for ensuring that these vines and landscapes continue to speak through the wines that are made from them — honest and exuberant wines with an emphasis on elegance and a unique sense of place.

LA VIVIENDA

La Vivienda, literally translated as 'the living place', is a celebration of Spanish culture and tradition. It is a sense of belonging and a feeling of home; it exudes warmth and joy, colour, and vibrancy.

It is an expression of the uniquely Mediterranean atmosphere found walking through the cobbled streets of Andalusian villages; discovering a local bar in Murcia that serves a myriad of tapas with jugs of unidentified red wine; bright flowers in abundance climbing the walls of whitewashed buildings in Cádiz; succumbing to an afternoon siesta in a warm but comfortable villa (because, that's what everyone else does) and wishing this was a tradition that could be introduced at home.

La Vivienda represents living rather than just being; it is the 'living place' and a culmination of everything we embrace in Spanish culture that helps to create a mood and a way-of-life, rather than just a physical building.

So, whether you're enjoying time with family or catching up with friends, listening to music and dancing, or enjoying some delicious food, think of La Vivienda and embrace a feeling of unique joy and warmth, born from Spain.
