When we work with love
we renew the spirit;
that renewal is an act of self-love,
it nurtures our growth.

A note from the Home Office. . .

---

Turning the calendar to a New Year always presents a good time to step back and reflect on how things have gone over the past year, and to look forward to what's to come in the year ahead. It's a time to reconnect with our purpose, to make sure the path we're on remains a good one. The modern world has a way of sweeping us along on its swift, busy day-to-day journey – where before you know it, days, weeks and months (even years?) can flash by in what seems like a heartbeat. The journey can be taken with the assurance of holding a trusty map, rather than finding yourself wandering aimlessly through the forest. So, let's take a moment to reflect.

How are we all doing? If I had to guess, and with everyone being perfectly honest, perhaps not the best! Let's consider that we are approaching two years living in the midst of a difficult pandemic, as well as living in an American society where government, politics, and media are as polarized, divisive, and driven by negativity as I can ever recall. There is plenty of stress and strife available for us all to consume and contend with each day. If you're feeling a bit worn down, you're certainly not alone. As much as I'd love to admit otherwise and claim some high ground of unaffected strength, I've felt this way too at times over this past year.

And so, I'll humbly suggest a collective resolution for this New Year. To not only continue doing our best to care for and be kind to others, but to also make sure we intentionally take the time to care for and be kind to ourselves. To make sure we stay closely connected with people and activities that give us joy. To make sure we are getting the good rest, good nutrition, and good daily movement needed to be at our best. To make sure we allow ourselves to breathe deep, feel appreciation for ourselves and for the good things in our lives. To establish – at least from time to time – a healthy bit of distance and space from the constant modern pull of loud negativity. It's not easy, but we all have the ability to turn these things off! Here's to a New Year where self-care makes a comeback – and in turn makes us all more capable of providing great care for others.

REJUVENATION

by Delinda Hess-Sump, Resident, Shorewood Senior Living

I find myself putting rejuvenation as the source for the relaxation & renewal to happen.

There are plenty of reasons to become disheartened with the bombardment on our psyche with negative information from news, TV, youtube, etc. This leaves us tense, and we can become addicted to the toxic chemicals the body produces from these negatives. Joy is the antidote to this!

Yes, it may seem simplistic, but by channeling our thoughts to focus on gratitude and what brings us joy, it prepares us to be lifted out of the darkness to a peaceful, renewed state of mind.

By meditating and filling our thoughts with kindness, peace, and goodness, we are rejuvenating our minds and bodies for a renewed sense of purpose. We become part of the solution to the negative energy broadcast to the world. As we relax into a peaceful state, we are in harmony with life instead of at war with it.

Thanks to the carefree, peaceful life I've found at Shorewood, I have the blessed opportunity to engage in contemplation of these things that bring me joy. This is at the top of my gratitude list. What's on your gratitude list?

WISDOM FROM OUR ELDERS

by Kathy Kuntz, Executive Director, The Iris Senior Living

If you're feeling a little bit weary as we leave 2021 and enter 2022, you are not alone. With so much going on, it is beneficial to examine how far we have come. Having a reflective spirit can help us to renew ourselves and recover our strength. As the Executive Director of The Iris Senior Living, I am blessed to be surrounded by over 50 residents who are part of the Greatest Generation. They are my mentors, teachers, and my daily encouragement. Here are some lessons I have learned from our inspiring elders to refresh our mind, body, and soul.

Take time for yourself. Being alone doesn't have to feel so lonely. Reflect on life and be thankful for all the gifts you have.

Meditate. When things are tough, our minds tend to focus on the things that we do not have. This is the perfect time to reflect inward in prayer and meditation to look at all the goodness around us and be thankful. Unfortunately, when we focus on filling our lives with meaningless busyness, we tend not to have the ability to look at the blessed moments and express gratitude.

Get active. Exercise doesn't mean that we must do strenuous workouts, but rather any movement helps relieve stress. Take a short walk, do some stretching, work on your balance, and do small activities daily to start feeling better. Even just getting outside for a walk around the block can help with so much.

Our Elders inspire us, motivate us, guide and direct us. As we work to create an empowering, caring culture for elders, we are creating our own future.

Remember to keep an optimistic spirit and calibrate your life to 'True North - guided by goodness, loyalty, faith, and fun.

Rest. Reflect.

ect. Renew.

At first glance, the concept of rest seems both natural and simple.

But if you're anything like me, true rest can be very hard to come by if you do not intentionally make space for it in your life. Unfortunately, our culture tends to communicate that the need for rest is self-indulgent or stems from some innate laziness. Rest, however, is absolutely essential to our health as human beings and its benefits should not be discounted.

So how do we find good, meaningful rest? True rest can be found in anything that fills your proverbial bucket. Of course, rest can look like a nap or indulging in a comforting movie, but it can also look like going for a walk, playing with your grandkids, or working on a creative project. Rest doesn't have to mean idleness. Instead, rest can simply mean taking a break from the demands that have been placed on you and choosing something you want to do instead of something you have to do.

When we grant ourselves the gift of rest, it inevitably leaves space for reflection. When we quiet the noise of our obligations and allow ourselves time to focus in on the things that bring us joy and fulfillment, we begin to take stock of our lives. We get to ask important questions like Am I happy? Where am I getting my value and meaning? Am I doing what I want to be doing? All of this and more can be discovered through a bit of reflection and it's easier than you think! You don't have to be a meditation expert or a licensed counselor to experience meaningful reflection. Simply take some time to ask yourself a few questions--check in with yourself and ask How am I really doing? This can be done through journaling, sharing your thoughts with a trusted friend, or sitting quietly with a cup of coffee and no distractions.

The time and space that you sacrifice for rest and reflection will be returned to you in dividends by the sense of renewal that you will feel. Not only does true rest give us renewed energy and zest for life, but it also grants us a renewed sense of purpose and perspective.

When you take time to rest and reflect, what you really get in return is longevity, purpose, and hope. And really, who doesn't want more of that?

I have always been a strong advocate for self-care. As someone who has spent years caring for others, it is paramount to dedicate time for myself at the end of every day. Now more than ever, my self-care relies heavily on reflecting on each day to prepare for the next. With new challenges and situations being thrown all around us, one must prepare to ease one's mind.

At the end of each day, I sit with my husband, and we just talk. I mean we talk for hours. This is my peace; this is my renewal. As we talk each night, we talk about life, our new challenges, and maybe even a new strength. Regardless, we spend the time reflecting on our day and how we will use our experiences to grow. Each night we sleep soundly knowing that we are renewed for the day ahead of us. There is no challenge we cannot handle when we have good friends and loved ones to talk with, to listen to, and to share our struggles and our joys.

MARTHA HALL

I met my husband at college where we were both studying to be teachers. We were married 4 years later while he was working on his master's degree. Just a couple of years later, we each felt led to become missionary teachers in Nigeria, where we served for 34 years. The first half of those years, I kept busy homeschooling our five children, two of whom were born in Nigeria. They each went off to boarding school at 10 years old and I began teaching English, music, and discipleship at our pastors' school. I also served on the committee to update the school to a seminary. During the school holiday, I started an annual music workshop open to music leaders from our churches all across northern Nigeria. While on furlough, I collected old hymn books to give the music students. One went on to teach music at our largest seminary.

Upon retirement, we taught ESL to Chinese restaurant employees and tutored at the in-state prison. There we were given appropriate nicknames - The Professor and The Verb Lady- as we helped inmates prepare to take the GED exams in science, math, and English. When Bob developed Alzheimer's, we had to leave that work and served in a local food bank.

In 2009 we moved to Meadow Ridge when I needed help with his care. Here I teach a Bible Study and play for a weekly worship service and continue with both these activities in my local church. I also keep a card shelf stocked with recycled greeting cards for residents' use and make personalized license tags for their walkers.

Blueberry Breakfast Smoothie

INGREDIENTS

1 cup fresh blueberries
½ cup Greek yogurt
¼ cup orange juice
1 T white sugar, or to taste
¼ t vanilla extract
1 pinch ground cinnamon, or to taste
3 ice cubes

PREPARATION

Blend blueberries, yogurt, orange juice, sugar, vanilla extract, and cinnamon together in a blender on low speed for 30 seconds; increase speed to high and blend until smooth, about 2 minutes. Add ice and blend on high until smooth, about 1 minute more.

Additional Notes:

If you want it less thick, add less ice. If you want it less cold, add less ice.

I do not recommend using regular yogurt, because it will make the smoothie super watery.

If you want it sweeter, try adding more orange juice first. If that doesn't do it, add another tablespoon of sugar or sweetener.

If you don't like vanilla, don't add it.

Grilled Fish Filet with Mango Salsa

INGREDIENTS

½ cup extra-virgin olive oil
1 clove garlic, minced
2 t dried basil
2 t ground black pepper
1 t salt
4 salmon or tilapia filets
⅔ cup chopped mango
2 T lime juice
2 T orange juice
4 t minced jalapeno pepper
4 t minced red onion
2 t minced red bell pepper
2 t minced green bell pepper
1 t dried parsley
1 t ground black pepper

PREPARATION

1. Stir the olive oil, garlic, basil, black pepper, and salt together in a bowl. Put the fish filets in a resealable plastic bag; pour the olive oil mixture over the filets and seal the bag. Marinate in refrigerator for 1 hour.
2. Make the salsa by stirring the mango, lime juice, orange juice, jalapeno pepper, red onion, red bell pepper, green bell pepper, parsley, and black pepper together in a bowl. Refrigerate for 1 hour to allow the flavors to blend.
3. Preheat an outdoor grill for medium-high heat, and lightly oil the grate.
4. Remove the filets from the marinade, shaking off any excess oil, and wrap each filet in a piece of aluminum foil.
5. Cook the filets on the preheated grill until the flesh easily flakes with a fork, 3 to 4 minutes per side. Spoon the salsa over the tilapia to serve.
