Our Canadian immigration services are one of the most respected in the country because we see each client as an individual, and treat them as such. We consider each client's case to be unique, and we recognize that a "one size fits all" approach does not work.

Mrs Ebi Obaro

President & Certified Canadian Immigration Consultant.

20 YEAR

OF CONSISTENCY, IMPACT & EXCELLENCE.

n the 23rd of December 2003, Ebi Obaro, one of Africa's most reputable and certified Canadian immigration consultants, founded Maple Education Canada Inc, in Fort St John, British Columbia Canada. The company is now the foremost consulting company for Nigerian students interested in studying in Canada.

Two years before then, One of Ebi's family members, had reached out to her on the phone, from Nigeria, with a simple request "Can you help find a good Canadian school for my child"? Her response and kind intervention birthed the idea of promoting Canadian Education in Nigeria. Since then, thousands of students have been assisted in gaining admission into Canadian high schools, colleges and universities.

The beauty of what makes Maple Education Canada's 20th anniversary, more than just another regular success narrative, is remarkable. The year-over-year growth, the quality feedback and strong referral network, and even the cordial relationships with strategic partner institutions and associations, all reinforce the fact that it has been a journey of consistency, impact and excellence.

In 2002, only about 800 Nigerian students were studying in private and public universities in Canada. Today, the numbers have gone up significantly. By April 2022, according to the IRCC data, the number of new study permits for Nigeria increased by 30.3 percent to 13,745 from 10,550 in 2020, making it the ninth most popular source country for international students.

How did Nigeria climb up the growth ladder so fast in the Canadian Education ecosystem?

In the year 2000, I had this idea of promoting Canadian education to Nigerians, three years after my family and I migrated to Canada. I needed to come back and build on that dream. So, I approached a Canadian bank with my business plan and got a loan to kickstart things. Ebi said.

"At that point, Canada was not a destination for international education in Nigeria. On arrival in Nigeria, I met with the then-Canadian Deputy High Commissioner in Lagos to discuss my intention of promoting Canadian education in Nigeria. Thankfully, I received the needed support and encouragement" Ebi added.

Shortly after opening the Maple Education Canada office in Fort St John, British Columbia Canada, the first set of prospective students already began admissions consultations at our small office in the Sura Shopping Complex Lagos. They had to choose from 4 partner Canadian institutions only, but today about 65 partner institutions count on Maple Education Canada for some of their recruitment numbers.

Referrals are the company's strongest asset, a testament to the quality of impressive service and follow-through that the company delivers for every client and partner on every brief. In 2022, British Airways awarded Maple Education Canada the partner with the highest group sales, owing to the consistently well-organized group travel flights arrangement that Maple introduced to help students and parents ease their travel to Canada. In 2010 and 2017, the company received the Best Partner Canada Award and North America Agent of the Year 2014/2015 by Navitas, a leading global education provider, amongst others. Other recognitions include the Excellence in Education Award 2017 for the most reliable International Education Support provider of the year by the Lagos Chamber of Commerce and Industry.

In response to the growing demand for young Nigerian students desirous of getting world-class quality study experience in Canada, Ebi Obaro founded Maple Canadian College (MCC) in 2019 after a careful evaluation of the experiences of Nigerian undergraduate students in Canada, who went straight into the university, without bridging the gap in the high school curriculum of both countries.

Maple Canadian College, in partnership with Rosedale Global High School, offers the Ontario Secondary School (OSSD) as a pathway to gaining admission into top universities globally. Students at Maple Canadian College have admission offers from top universities worldwide, including the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, the University of Toronto, and the London School of Economics, amongst others.

It is not by chance that I got involved in Canadian education; I didn't stumble into it. My family of seven migrated to Canada at a time when Nigerians were not paying attention to Canada. So, having our five children go through Canadian education; some from elementary school, and all of them through high school, and university, built in us the requisite experience and knowledge needed to play in the space

Ebi said, while recounting her earlier experiences.

Ebi Obaro, Tukeni Obasi, Panebi Oboh and Mubo Olabode, all reputable and certified Canadian immigration consultants, have revolutionized the foreign study and immigration landscape with their exceptional leadership at Maple Education Canada. The next decade will usher in significant advancement and progress for the company, and we look forward to that.

OUR EXCITING JOURNEY

Interview Session
With Our Senior Management

Can you tell us about what inspired the establishment of Maple Education Canada?

My family of seven migrated to Canada. In 1997, long before Canada became a destination for Nigerian students. While we looked around for private schools, a lot of the friends that we met at church told us that the public schools in Canada are very good and we actually found them to be so. Astounded about the quality and the standard of Canadian education, even from elementary school, I developed an initial interest in the system and this interest grew with time.

How did you develop your interest in Canadian Education to become a full grown business?

Five years after we arrived in Canada, I started thinking about promoting Canadian Education in Nigeria. This is because I have gotten a few requests from close family members and friends to help their children get into Canadian schools.

Following the success of these engagements, I came to Nigeria to explore the opportunities of promoting Canadian education. The Canadian Deputy High Commission in Lagos, was my first destination. The Deputy High Commissioner was surprised about my idea, he had initially thought studying in Canada was not a product many would be interested in. Upon conviction however, I received all the necessary support from the Commission.

Were there specific individuals that provided support for you along the way?

My family was very supportive and I am immensely grateful to them. My brother, the Chairman of the company, strongly encouraged me to pursue my dream. He was also very instrumental when we got a bank loan. Two of my sisters alongside my daughter, all Certified Canadian Immigration Consultants have all provided invaluable support that has brought us this far. I am also immensely grateful to our entire members of Staff and loyal clients.

In terms of getting partner schools to work with, how was it for the company at the beginning?

We started with just one college, Northern Lights College in Fort Saint John, British Columbia. And as we kept on going, more and more institutions became our partners. It was really progressive but the growth has been amazing. Today, we have over 65 Canadian institutions as partners and we are still building more strategic collaborations.

What setbacks did you experience and how were you able to overcome them?

From initial apathy that some Nigerians expressed when we started, to financial challenges, we experienced a number of setbacks and at a point we almost gave up promoting Canadian education. Thankfully we remained undeterred and kept going. My determination was fueled from the fact that I had a strong passion for Canadian education and for the country.

You have grown the company to enviable heights and even established other companies along the way, can you talk about some of them?

From just recruiting students to Canadian institutions and providing immigration consultancy, we eventually set up our own school, a college here called Maple Canadian College. The college offers grades 10 to 12 curriculum of the Ontario Ministry of Education in partnership with Rosedale Global College in Toronto. The pathway that MCC provides helps students in gaining admission into top universities globally. We also set up Worldwide Integrated Network and Education (WINE) to cater to a broader spectrum of students who are seeking admissions into top Universities and colleges globally.

Our most recent establishment, Mobility Options Consulting is an investor advisory and consultancy firm, which specializes in residency and citizenship by investment solutions.

Tell us about your experience, helping to set-up Maple Education Limited in Nigeria?

In Nigeria, it all started with a phone call from our chairman, Dr Tari Aganaba. At that time, my family and I were living in Abuja when he reached out and said, "Tukeni, We want you to set up an office in Lagos." Without hesitation, I agreed and made the decision to relocate to Lagos.

In the last 2 decades our overall success can be greatly attributed to our dedicated team and clients who wholeheartedly believed in our vision. Everyone contributed and played their part, making sure that we collectively made it work.

How did the company leverage referrals and quality delivery to drive consistent growth?

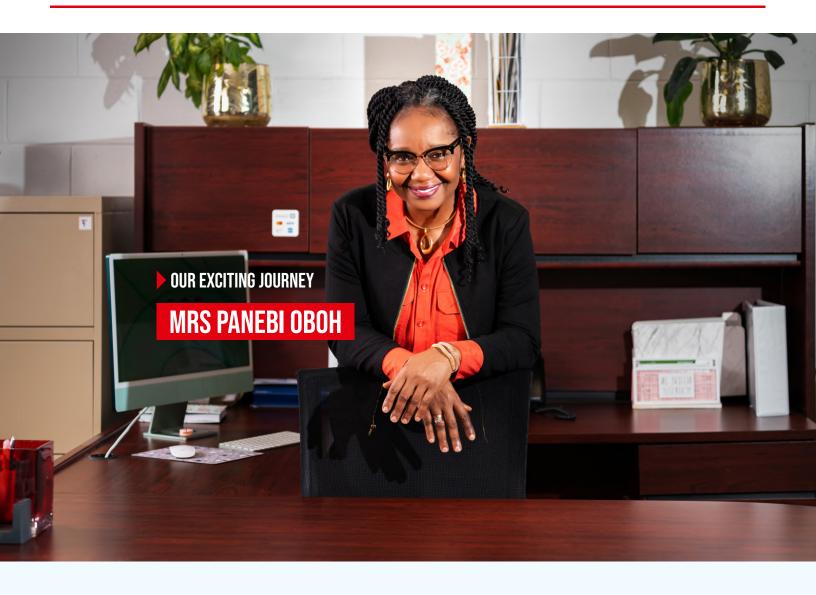

We are very big on referrals and quality service. People are quick to spread the word around our excellent services and that brings us more clients. I particularly recall attending education fairs where Canadian schools were curious about our location. When they asked, "Where are you based?" I proudly responded, "Fort St. John." Their surprised reaction followed, saying, "Oh! Fort St. John? We've heard about the significant number of Nigerian students studying there. We've been wondering how that came to be." I would pause for a moment before saying, "We played a role in bringing them there." This revelation sparked interest from other schools who then sought our assistance in promoting their own institutions.

What's your advice for the team, going into the next decade?

We have come a long way and we have achieved exceptional progress, I urge the team to operate at an even higher level of consistency and I always tell our staff that we are our own competition and need to keep doing more to achieve better results.

How would you describe the decision of Mrs Obaro to establish Maple Education Canada?

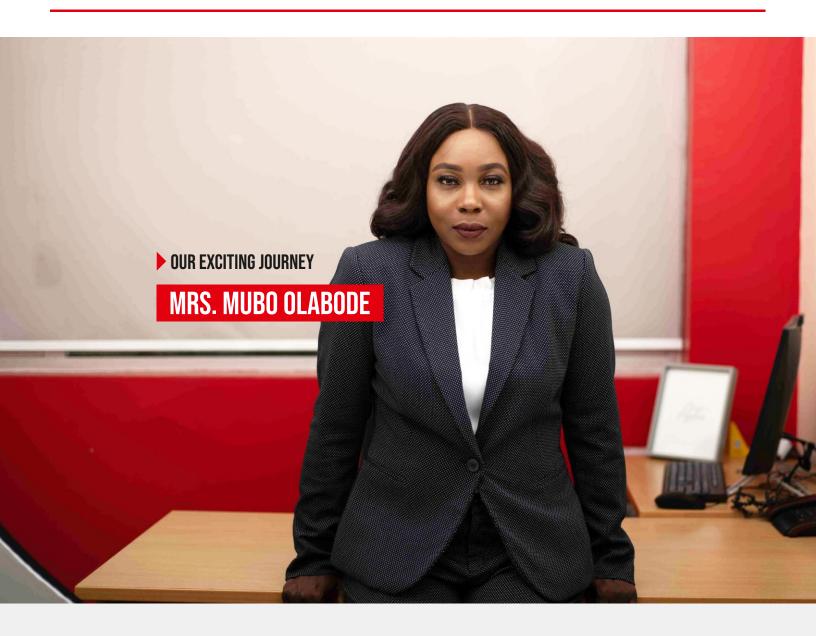

Mrs. Obaro dared to do what most people would not do. When she started Maple, most people never wanted to go to Canada because everybody thought Canada was too cold to live in. I give her kudos for taking such a bold step and as a team, we've worked together to bring the company to great heights.

Since inception we have helped thousands of Nigerian students to study in Canada and we are excited to see them mature, start their own family, and achieve success in their endeavors.

Where do you see the company in years to come and what message would you like to convey to all our valued clients?

I see Maple doing above and beyond what we have done so far and we want to use this opportunity to say a big thank you to all our clients and the entire team for being there with us through the years.

Can you share how your experience of moving to Canada from Nigeria was valuable for growing the company?

I moved to Canada when I was 16. What we did was to take our personal experience moving to Canada from Nigeria and merge all of the insights with our personal realities to advance Canadian education in Nigeria. This gave us a lot of credibility because we were able to sell our services as both Nigerians and Canadians.

What do you envision in the next decade for the company?

For the next decade, we are definitely looking at branching out, making use of technology much more in our business, strong marketing and having a solid team of committed individuals who share the same passion as we do.

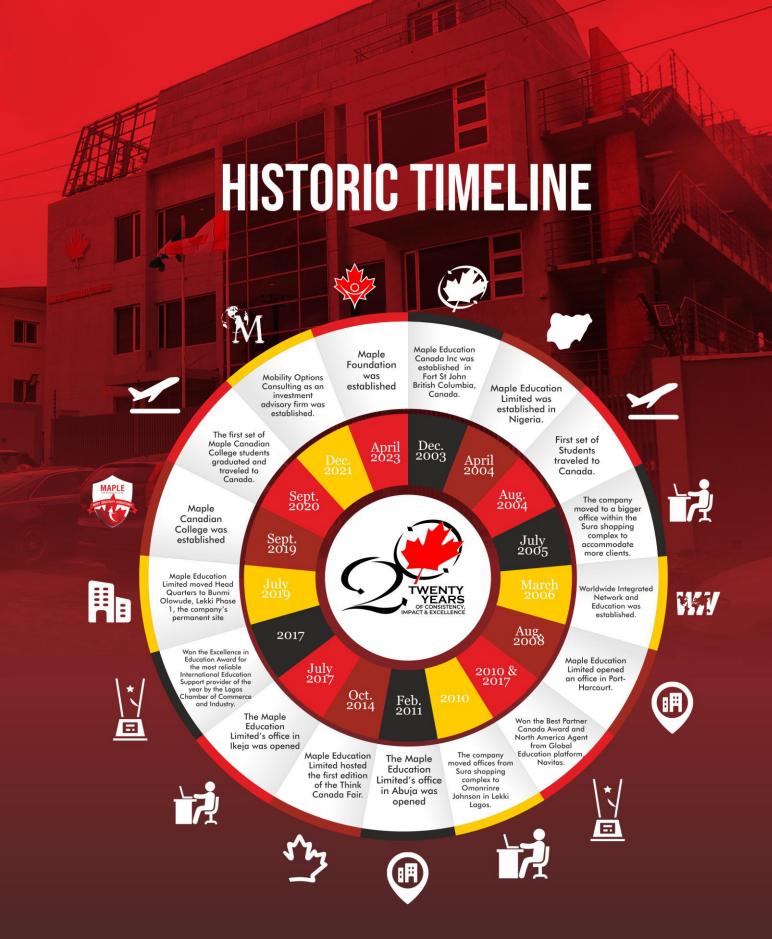

As the Country Manager, tell us about the experience with the team, during the early days?

It has always been a passion driven project for us and the few team members in the early days radiated joy everyday on the job. We knew we were making a great impact in the lives of people and that for us, kept the team excited and inspired every time.

Because we were a pretty small team, we had to put in extra efforts to achieve outstanding results and I am glad that all the dedication and commitment paid off.

The company is big on referrals, has that always been the case?

Yes, we started with a culture of delivering quality and exceptional service. As the Country Manager, I am passionate about building a long-lasting relationship with our clients no matter how old they have been with us and I always encourage the team to do the same.
