Clive Barlow Master of Wine

Clive started his wine career when working at the vineyard in Hampshire's New Forest in the late 1980s. The work in the vineyard and winery inspired him to seek a career in the wine trade and learn more about the subject. He continued his progress in the wine retail sector for supermarkets and specialist chains while studying with the Wine and Spirits Education Trust and the Institute of Masters of Wine. He became a Master of Wine in 1999, one of 415 around the world, and currently runs a wine retail and consultancy business in Canterbury, Kent.

His belief is that wine is made to be shared and enjoyed, not to be pontificated over. Wine is a drink that people enjoy at home as well as in bars and restaurants all over the world. Now, more than ever, we need good wine to share and bring people together.

The Sheridan Coopers Team

Our expert wine team has over 100 years of experience within the wine trade and consists of exceptionally talented individuals, including our very own "Master of Wine" Clive Barlow. Our team are here to assist our sales team and advise you on how to make the most of your wine list. Of course, the team can offer your business the usual wine tasting and wine list services but what really does set us apart from other suppliers, is our experience, knowledge and passion to deliver great service. This enables us to create and maintain an extensive wine list that your customers will value and will give you the return on investment and peace of mind that a quality wine provides.

Symbol Keys

Organic

Organic wine is made from grapes grown in accordance with principles of organic farming, which typically excludes the use of artificial chemical fertilizers, pesticides, fungicides and herbicides.

Vegan

Vegan wines are free from animal products used in winemaking such as gelatin, albumin, casein and other fining agents. Vegan wines use alternative fining agents available for winemakers which include clay-based methods.

Biodynamic / Natural

Biodynamic wines are made on principles which concentrate on working with organic remedies applied in 'dynamised' homeopathic quantities and in line with an astrological calendar. Natural wines are made with minimal human intervention so as to be as Nature intended.

Vegetarian

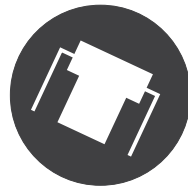

Vegetarian wines have had special attention paid to removing any animal-based fining materials from the wine. These methods include the use of casein derived from milk, and egg albumen which are both suitable for vegetarians, not vegans.

Champagne

Champagne is divided into four regions, each producing the traditional sparkling wine that varies in taste and aromas. From the northern realms of Montagne de Reims to the southern region of Aube, Champagne offers a fresh wine that is both balanced and vibrant.

There are three main grape varieties that go into Champagne: Chardonnay, Pinot Noir and Pinot Meunier. The wines are produced from hand-picked grapes and are gently pressed to preserve the unique identity of the region. Champagne is famed for blending; as many as one hundred individual wines from different varieties, vineyards and vintages can go into creating a single cuvée. Champagne is truly the most iconic celebration wine.

Sparkling

Sparkling wine is made with carbon dioxide to give it the light and fizzy style, producing the iconic and celebrated initial burst of effervescence that appears on contact with the glass.

When using the 'traditional' method, by means of a second fermentation in the bottle, wines are often softer with a creamier mouthfeel and a nutty flavour. There are four main levels of sweetness for the traditional method wines: Extra-Brut, Brut, Extra Dry and Demi-sec, each creating a style for all wine lovers. An alternative method is the 'Charmat' method where the bubbles are created through a second fermentation which takes place in a pressurised, steel tank. This process delivers a gentle mousse and more fruity styles of wines, such as Prosecco.

BELLA GIULIANA PROSECCO

DENOMINAZIONE DI ORIGINE CONTROLLATA

ITALIA

Versatile, affordable, and delicious- we are not sure if you need any more reason to choose Prosecco. Our Bella Giuliana Prosecco hails from north-eastern Italy, a winemaking area for millennia and is DOC in quality. According to EU law, Prosecco DOC (Denominazione di Origine Controllata) can come from just two regions of Italy: Veneto and Friuli-Venezia Giulia. The DOC covers over 35,000 acres and includes major territories like Venice, Verona, and Trieste. To obtain a DOC label, the wine must be made in adherence to strict rules in growing and production methods, as well as meet defined quality standards. It is this adherence to the strict DOC regulations and sourcing grapes from the best growers in Veneto that give Bella Giuliana those characteristic pear fruit flavours and refreshing high acidity, but it defines why Bella Giuliana is better than your average Prosecco.

Food Pairing

When it comes to food pairing, Prosecco is super versatile and pairs well with a vast range of dishes from different cuisines. There are not many wines which work well enough to be served before yet also work well with the main course, but Prosecco does that perfectly.

VALLFORMOSA

CLASSIC CAVA BRUT

Since 1865 the Domènech family has worked lands in Penedès with passion to obtain the best fruit of the vineyards. Francisco José Domènech (1839-1909) was the founder of the winemaking tradition in the family and the first to seek perfection of a well-done work.

Made from the traditional Cava grape varieties of Macabeo, Xarel-lo and Parellada.

Pale straw yellow with greenish hints. The bubbles released are small and lively. Its fruity aroma is a mixture of ripe green apple, pear and apricot, with fermentation notes of pastry and nuts. Full bodied and fresh in the mouth, with a light touch of acidity. Round and elegant. A long, classic finish with a fruity character.

Great as an aperitif, truffle crisps, canapés or tapas!

Argentina

The Mendoza Province is at the heart of the winemaking industry in Argentina with nearly two-thirds of the country's entire wine production coming from the eastern foothills of the Andes. Planted at high altitudes, the vines deliver ripe fruit with good levels of acidity, tannins and plentiful sugars. As a result, full-bodied, rich wines are produced under the towering gaze of Mount Aconcagua.

Deeply complex Malbecs are celebrated throughout the provincial capital of Mendoza with an exquisitely refined, yet bold taste. Chardonnay is also well-suited to the hot climates as the wine leans towards a flavour that is juicy and ample. The wines of Argentina offer classic structures with a pronounced fruit flavour that is significant to the New World style.

Australia

Australia, the world's fifth largest wine producer, is home to more than 60 designated wine regions, each with their own unique climate, soil, topography and geography. Each region delivers wines in their own variation and, whilst growing the major international varieties, looks to create individuality by planting fewer common grapes to reflect their unique terroir. Wines are often labelled with the name of their grape variety, which must form at least 85 percent of the wine.

South Australia is the country's well-known major wine region, located around the city of Adelaide. With the overall climate being hot and dry, wines are typically very fruit forward with a powerful concentration resulting in a deep colour and heady flavours. With the versatile terroir throughout the country, Australia produces world-class wines from a zesty Chardonnay to a full-bodied Shiraz.

Chile

Spanish conquistadors in the 16th century brought the Vitis Vinifera vines to Chile. The country's dry, warm climate with plentiful irrigation water has seen the continued growth of these vines over the centuries. Entering the 21st century, Chile is now the fifth largest exporter of wines in the world, adopting modern viticulture and vinification techniques.

Chilean climate is strongly influenced by the Pacific Ocean, with the cooling breeze of the Antarctic Humboldt Current in the west and the mountainous region of the Andes to the east. This results in three key regions: the cooler coastal regions, the warm interior Central Valley and the warm, high vineyards of the Andean foothills. The coastal region is developing a reputation for fine Sauvignon Blanc and Pinot Noir, the Andean foothills for full-bodied, high-quality Cabernets and Carmenères, and the Central Valley for simple to premium quality highly drinkable wines. All wines are created with pure fruit aromatics that are lifted and bright; from simple, easy drinking wines to fine wines with depth and complexity.

England

The revival of English viticulture began in the 1950s and after several waves of pioneering work, current producers are creating world-class sparkling wines to rival those of their neighbours across the channel in Champagne. England is now recognised as an enthusiastic new force in the wine world, producing award-winning wines. With the best regions for viticulture along the southern coast of England, from Cornwall to Kent, England grows an array of grapes in its relatively cool and damp climate.

The majority of the viticulture is centred in the Southeast which possesses a similar climate and soils as to be found in Champagne. Sparkling wines account for over 65 percent of wine production in the UK, commonly using the 'traditional method', producing an orchard-fruit elegance and a balanced acidity. However, still wines have had a significant growth in recent years with an ever-growing range of wines that have crisp fruitiness and aromatic charm.

Therefore, when enjoying a bottle of their delicious wine, consumers are not contributing to the plastic pollutants.

Italy

Italy has a long history of winemaking, dating back to the Roman period as they pioneered efficient methods of winemaking, large-scale production and storage techniques. Italy is now the largest producer of wine in the world, by volume, and is acknowledged as a country which offers excellent value, high-volume wines as well as creating some unique, age-worthy fine wines.

The country also has an amazing diversity of indigenous grape varieties, some of which are just starting to be seen on the world market, and an extensive latitudinal range in climate which allows many distinctive styles to be made. Vines are planted in the cool vineyards below the Alps to the hot plains of Sicily, all regions offering quality wines to partner a range of dishes.

CORTEFRESIA

Awarded DOC status

WHY IS CORTEFRESIA BETTER THAN YOUR AVERAGE PINOT GRIGIO & PINOT GRIGIO ROSÉ?

The answer to this is sourcing and provenance. Pinot grigio, as a grape variety, can be produced anywhere in Italy, or the world in fact, but the Veneto region in the Northeast of Italy is its true spiritual home. It is important here at Drink Warehouse UK to offer our customers not only the best quality wines but also wines that are a true expression of their region and varietal. This is why both Cortefresia Pinot Grigio and Pinot Grigio Rosé are sourced from grapes and growers within the DOC area of Venezia, the home of pinot grigio. Through meticulous tasting and selection, Cortefresia Pinot Grigio and Pinot Grigio Rosé are crafted to represent both quality and provenance, delivering to your customer expectations in terms of a top-quality pinot grigio.

MEET THE WINES

PINOT GRIGIO, DOC DELLE VENEZIE, ITALY

Famed for its bright citrus flavours, zippy acidity & refreshing minerality, it is easy to see why Pinot Grigio is so in demand. Far from the warmth of the Mediterranean, it is the Alpine climate of the Friuli Venezia Giulia region that gives Cortefresia Pinot Grigio the freshness that we all love.

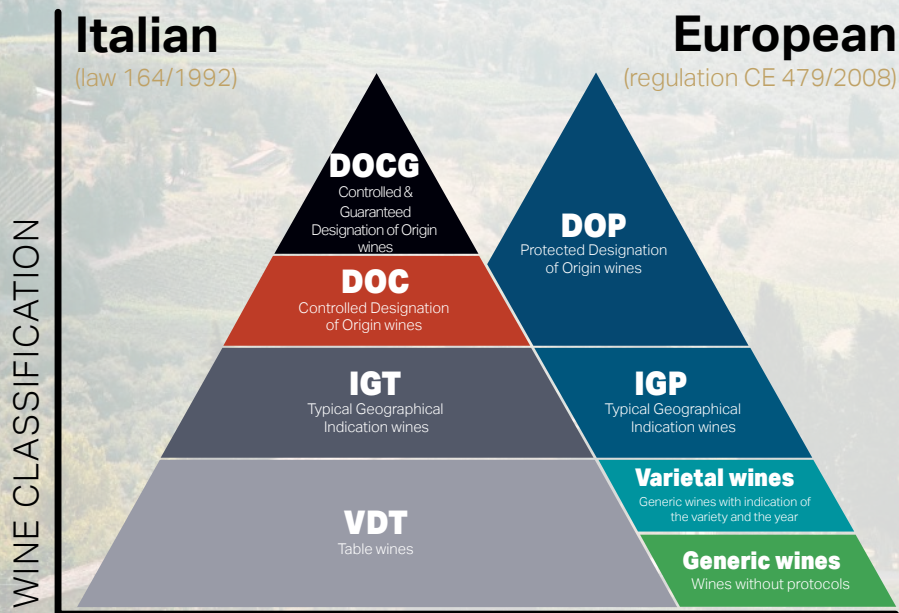

PINOT GRIGIO ROSÉ, DOC DELLE VENEZIE, ITALY

Wonderfully refreshing and vibrant, full of rich summer fruit with balanced acidity and a delicate floral nose, Cortefresia Pinot Grigio Rosé is a real crowd pleaser. By combining everything we love from Pinot Grigio with the fruity and flavoursome characteristics of a rosé.

DOC STATUS

WHY IS THE AREA, QUALITY LEVEL AND DOC STATUS IMPORTANT?

The Northeast of Italy is the home of pinot grigio and therefore only wines from this area, made under the strict DOC rules, can be classified as DOC delle Venezie. There are a number of different quality classifications in Italian wine, but it is only wines with the DOC quality accreditation or above that can claim to not only be true to what pinot grigio should be in terms of wine style, but also the best quality.

TORRE DEI VESCOVI

"Torre dei Vescovi" is a collection coming from the best selected grapes in order to satisfy the most demanding and fine palates. These wines are the result of utmost care and skill in the cellar and offer a wide range that can fulfil the diverse requirements of fine restaurants and wine shops.

In 1955, 33 keen vine-growers coming from Montecchio Maggiore and the neighbouring towns founded the "Cantina Sociale dei Colli Vicentini", in the heart of Veneto renowned for its ancient qualified vine-growing tradition. Since then the cellar has made great progress, constantly engaged in the improvement of the quality of its products by adapting the most up to date technologies and by conforming to the different market demands.

The commitment undertaken by Colli Vicentini is to concentrate on the quality of the wines by safeguarding the characteristics of vines and by maintaining local traditions. Thanks to the work of its oenologists and agronomists, the cellar guarantees the entire process "from vineyard to sales" through the continual monitoring of the production, the diversified manufacturing of the grapes, and the control of the vineyards in order to produce quality wines. Veneto, where viticulture has been flourishing and improving for centuries, is the Italian region which produces the greatest quantity of DOC wines. The particular soil structure of these areas, which are beaten by cold winds coming from the north but also protected by high mountain ranges, together with its favourable setting in the sun create the optimal climate for vine-growing. The co-operative produces the excellent Colli Vicentini range together with the premium "Torre dei Vescovi" range, a collection coming from the best-selected grapes in order to satisfy the most demanding and fine palates. Romeo Prosecco and Juliet Rose spumante have proved to be a great addition to the wineries labels.

Colle Vicentini dal 1955

New Zealand

New Zealand has several distinct winegrowing regions, most heavily influenced from the South Pacific Ocean. The maritime climate moderates the weather throughout most of the wine growing regions allowing the production of high-quality clean and ripe fruit with a vibrant, fresh acidity.

New Zealand is well-known for Marlborough Sauvignon Blanc which is produced between the Richmond Ranges to the north and the Wither Hills to the south, protecting the region from extreme weather. The usually sunny valley benefits from a cool night-time breeze and a long hang time allowing the temperature variations to produce an esteemed, characterful wine. More recently, Marlborough has also produced predominantly dense and concentrated Pinot Noir.

Portugal, like neighbouring Spain, has been revolutionising viticulture over the last twenty years. With a reluctance to follow trends and plant international grapes, Portugal is now cultivating a new breed of full-blooded, fruit-filled wines that are more than able to compete on the New World wine stage.

The vast quantities for indigenous grape varieties (more than 250) allows distinctive personalities, many fruit-forward with variations in crisp, citrus scented whites and berry flavoured reds. The ideal Portuguese climate harmonising with the range of indigenous grape varieties allows the wine to offer unique flavour and expression which are ideal for those looking for an alternative to the more prevalent international varieties.

South Africa

South Africa's vineyards are predominantly situated in the Western Cape where they can benefit from the moderating influence of the South Atlantic or great Southern Ocean. It is, without doubt, one of the most awe-inspiring wine regions in the world, producing deeply coloured, well-balanced reds and clean, refreshing whites.

The viticulture of South Africa has deeply mirrored the social and political changes within the country. South Africa is encouraging wine farmers to adopt sustainable farming techniques and keep the country's exceptional biodiversity. Home to many organic producers, South African viticulture is discovering the treasure of old vines in regions such as Swartland, as well as developing new vineyards in cool regions like Elgin.

Spain

Located on the Iberian Peninsula, Spain has over 2.9 million acres of planted vineyards, making it the most widely planted wine-producing nation in the world. The vast variety of soil types provides a rich context for Spanish wines as well as the elevation of vineyards, now atop of hills and in the foothills of mountains more than ever before, creating a fresher, elegant wine. The altitude is highly influential, bringing a natural acidity and a developed aromatic flavour due to sunlight intensity.

Viticulture has developed and adapted to the varied and extreme climate, with grapes being picked during the night and early morning to avoid prolonged exposure to the sun. Spain has an abundance of native grapes, with over 400 varieties planted throughout the country, especially in major wine regions, including Rioja and Ribera del Duero.

Our Partner: Manzanos Wines

The history of Manzanos Wines is the story of a family, their effort, their perseverance and their know-how.

The Fernández de Manzanos family have been cultivating vineyards and producing wines for more than a century. It was exactly in 1890 when the first generation of the Fernández de Manzanos family established a small winery in Azagra with a capacity of 50,000 litres of wine.

They believe that since immemorial time, the four elements of nature (earth, fire, water and air), are used to explain the universe and one is able to obtain an answer to the composition of every single element on earth. The combination of the four natural elements results in a single element, the 5th element that forms a whole, the wine.

Manzanos selects, creates and ages its wines, mainly from vineyards protected by the DOCa Rioja to offer excellent wines with a high aromatic load, soft palate and moderate body to those who enjoy and appreciate good wine.

California has over 427,000 acres of vineyards, mostly found in the stretch of land covering over 700 miles from Mendocino County to the southwestern tip of Riverside County. California accounts for nearly 90 percent of American wine production and is a vital element to New World wine.

With great geographical and climatic diversity, the state can produce a wide range of styles and quality. California's warm weather pairs with the cooling influence from the Pacific Ocean, which balances the intense heat and sun. This is compared to the Central Valley which has a Mediterranean climate with a thick fog that settles along the valley's length during the late autumnal months until early spring, supplying variation from deliciously creamy Chardonnays to ripe, fruit-forward Zinfandels.

Dessert

In the broadest sense, the UK observes dessert wine to be any wine that is enjoyed during or after dessert. It is usually sweet with a distinct flavour. The lush, natural sweetness found in these delicious wines is created when the cultivators over-ripen the fruit, harvesting late or waiting for noble rot to occur. These wines are simply the best partner for a dessert or a range of cheeses.

Although a majority of dessert wines are on the sweeter side, there is a fair amount of variety within the category including the use of both white or red grapes to produce sparkling or still dessert wines.
