KENTSHIRE

Kentshire's latest catalogue is a study in form—the juxtaposition of ancient bodies rendered in stone and metal, in conversation with our collection of timeless jewelry. Each piece is a sculpture on an intimate scale, crafted with the same reverence for proportion and detail, tracing the curves of the body and completing its silhouette. Together, they suggest that beauty is never ephemeral but continuous, a quiet thread running from antiquity to the present day.

Established in 1940 and spanning three generations of family ownership, Kentshire Galleries is one of the foremost dealers of fine period and estate jewelry. From their freestanding boutique in New York's premier luxury store, Bergdorf Goodman, Matthew and Carrie Imberman have continued to refine the gallery's founding vision: buying and selling exceptional jewelry and objects of enduring design and elegance. The gallery exhibits at many of the finest art fairs and features capsule collections at Ulla Johnson in New York and Los Angeles, as well as on Moda Operandi.
