Front View showing stainless steel saw

Front View with water

Front View with water - spraying under pressure

The sawfish as cast in pre-pigmented coloured gel-coat over a very heavy duty iso-thallic fibreglass laminate. It will nest into a bed of sand which is flat/level. This will incorporate fixing lugs.

The bill was fabricated in very heavy-duty stainless steel with fountain outlets spraying out and upwards

The stainless bill armature extends 1 metre into the body of the sawfish forming a pressurised reservoir with 32mm NB water outlet to which the site installer will connect a flexible hose. Again, the sawfish was bedded on a protective sand base for its entire perimeter with the bill supported in a similar manner with an underlying stainless vertical beam housed within the sand/resin base.

"NUDIBRANCH"
(SEA SLUGS)

Nudibranches are found all over the world, but they're most prolific in warm, shallow sea water. Their coloration varies widely, from the muted colours of some easy-to-overlook types to the neon, clown-like appearance of others. Likewise, their physical forms are extremely varied. One consistent characteristic is the "tentacles" on the heads which allow Nudibranches to feel, smell and taste.

SEA CREATURES & NAUTICAL THEMING

The installation of unique sea creatures in abstract sculptural forms makes this seaside playground in Yeppoon a 'kraken' good time.

In 2015, Yeppoon City Council commissioned Natureworks to sculpt a series of sea creatures incorporating interactive water play, for the central art feature of a new 'sprayground' to be constructed on the Yeppoon foreshore.

Working closely with landscape architectural firm, Natureworks developed an abstract interpretation of Kraken tentacles (giant octopus), a stingray, a starfish, turtles and a giant crab for the new wet playspace. Utilising a range of surface finishes, Natureworks created larger-than-life artforms with precise mosaic patterns and a unique 3D bronze appliqué that hugs the free-flowing sculptural forms. The 3D micro-bronze patterned inlay utilised tells the story of the sea creatures fringing the coral reef off Yeppoon - the mid-QLD coastline devastated by Cyclone Marcia in February 2015. The challenge of the Yeppoon project was to produce large wet-play sculptural icons of local significance that would meet Australian Playground Standards. The brief called for a concrete substrate with no soft fall, requiring the tall sculptures to be designed as unclimbable, but still inspirational and with great visual impact. Natureworks is renowned for its exacting replication, to museum standard, of all forms of animal art; however for the Yeppoon project Natureworks branched out beyond its traditional realm of realism and ventured into the world of abstract contemporary art.

Each sculpture created for the sprayground was designed with a 75-year life span. They incorporate stainless steel armatures, reinforcing heavy-duty polymer-modified 75mpa concrete, to withstand strong weather conditions. The solid forms were then overlaid with a bronze Sea life appliqué and colourful mosaics to provide a spectacular surface finish. The hero piece of the Yeppoon series is the 'Keppel Kraken'. At a height of 4m, this central sculpture towers over the other elements, periodically dumping an avalanche of water over the unsuspecting children below. An additional series of intermittent spray and jumping jets of water add more surprises and a ton of fun to this magical sea-creature inspired sprayground.

BROADWATER PARK
LANDS - "ROCKPOOLS"
- GOLD COAST QLD

Spraygrounds

Natureworks recently installed a series of vibrant "local" sea creatures water play features that dot the landscape of the shallow rapids rock pools at Broadwater Parklands. Collectively they provide a functional and sturdy attraction for tourist and local residences.

The oversized mud crab stands centre stage for older aged children to climb upon and play with the streaming water-jets spraying upwards to the sky. The high detailed paint finish of the loggerhead turtle is a popular sit upon feature with a 6 metre spray jet extending from its mouth. The cute finely dressed fur seal pup whose whiskers have become whisker-jets is popular with the timid participants and adds a touch of fun and warmth to the site. The elegantly painted low lying eagle ray showcases its detailed and unique skin pattern and is large enough to seat child and carer.

The brightly coloured octopus is layed low and reveals its true to live underside suction cups, adding texture and depth to this fine detail sculpture. The large nature flecked flathead can be found nestled in the shade near the edge of the pool.

Natureworks has developed a large "Library" of these highly detailed animal replicas which have been specifically "tooled up" so as to meet the Australian Playground Standards. The pieces have been anti-slipped and integrally coloured in polyester gel-coats, so as to ensure longevity of the finishes
