Across from the Fire Department once stood the oldest house left on Jericho Turnpike. Like many of the homes built in the early 1700's there is little information, if any, on just when it was first constructed, and by whom. But what is known about this house is that it served as the first Commack Post Office, and was home to the earliest piano on Long Island while Mr. & Mrs. Charles A. Cutting lived here. Other families included Frank and Drieka Otten, and the Hubbs. Site is now a dental office.

Mr. Cheapo's Amazing Musical Time Machine

Everyone over the age of 25 remembers when going to a record store to buy music was a semi-regular ritual. Now, that's a quaint notion as purchasable recordings aren't much more than anonymous sound files. And while brick and mortar behemoths like Tower Records and Record World have fallen by the wayside, Mr. Cheapo continues to persevere and flourish going into its third decade. It has become a mainstay of Commack & Mineola. Record albums, rows of CD's, videos & DVD's, and Rock posters line the shelves

-

And while founder/owner Stu Goldberg is grateful for the continued success of this retail anomaly, the fact that he continues to serve a hungry customer base in this day & age mystifies even him.

Fifteen years ago, I was thinking about getting rid of records. We were actually tightening up the store and pushing records back & back. Now, all of a sudden, it's the opposite and it's pushing back up again. It's amazing. I just can't understand it. Now, our success as a brick-and-mortar store comes down to the fact that there is no competition you've got the internet. The first Mr. Cheapo was opened in Flushing in 1982, then we moved to Commack. Over time, Goldberg has seen plenty, the internet exploded and in the process decimated independent and major music retailers in the past decade. While LP's making up a surprising 40 percent of his revenue between his stores and what gets sold on eBay, rounded out by 50 percent CD sales, and the remainder a mix of DVD's, posters, video games,
