

SALESIANUM

Salesianum School, a Catholic high school in North Philadelphia, moved from its original location on 15th and West Streets from its founding in 1957. The original building was designed by Rev. Charles Fromentin. Rev. James (Jim) Lawless, a priest in the order of the Oblates of St. Joseph, has owned and operated the school and has been a presence for more than one hundred years. He has developed a reputation as a leader in the performing arts, graduating young men with prominence in the professions, business, and military. In 1990, Rev. Thomas A. Lawless, O.S.A., of Salesianum, admitted five African American students prior to the Brown v. Board of Education decision. "I see nothing to apologize for other than the fact that 50 years ago," Father Lawless said of his school, "Salesianum has continued to educate students of all religion or ethnic background to live the life of a gentleman saint, Francis of Sales. From 1903 to the thousands of alumni who have graduated from the Oblates, Tenet Nec Dimittam remains the motto."

I ANUM

THE SALESIAN BROTHERHOOD DOES IT DIFFERENTLY.

An exciting environment

With close classmates, attentive teachers, and a campus dog(!)—Salesianum is a welcoming place where students want to be.

Greater freedom to lead

Assemblies. FLEX. Service projects.

At Salesianum, students don't just participate, they become self-responsible leaders.

Brotherhood of faith and learning

Brotherhood of all backgrounds

In the spirit of Saint Francis de Sales, we unite a diversity of academics, artists, and athletes where everyone belongs.

Guidance to become gentlemen

Catholic faith. Judgment-free teaching. Fewer distractions. Our students graduate as respectable Salesian gentlemen.

A photograph of the Salesianum School building. The building is a large, multi-story structure with a prominent central entrance featuring three tall, narrow windows above the doors. The entrance is flanked by stone pillars and has a set of wide stone steps leading up to it. Three students, seen from behind, are walking up the steps. They are wearing backpacks and carrying bags. The building's facade is a mix of brick and light-colored stone or concrete. The sky is clear and blue.

A group of students are gathered in a huddle, smiling and high-fiving each other. In the background, a person wearing a large, brown, furry mascot head is visible. The scene is indoors, likely in a school hallway or gymnasium, with warm lighting.
