The 2023 Printed Bag and Notebook Guide is printed on Carbon Balanced Paper, helping World Land Trust to protect and restore threatened tropical habitat.

Full Colour Printing

Look out for this icon beside products which can be personalised with full colour logos. This means shades, tones or photographs can be reproduced. Please note this is not the default print technique, contact the sales office for pricing.

Green 4 Life

A number of products in the catalogue have great eco-friendly credentials; look out for the Green 4 Life logo beside qualifying products. For more information about the materials used please see the material guide on page 5 or contact the sales office.

Add a Name

Individual name personalisation is a key trend for corporate gifting this year, look for the 'add a name' logo to find these products.

Embroidery

Some products in the catalogue can be embroidered with stitching to create a long lasting durable finish. Look out for this logo to find these products. Please note this is not the default branding technique, contact the sales office for pricing.

Material Guide

Find out more about the materials used across our product range and the qualities which make them the ideal choice. For further information call our sales office.

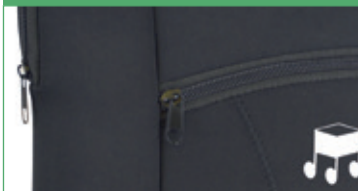

PU (Polyurethane)

Polyurethane, better known as PU, is durable, waterproof, easily wiped clean and achieves the leather look without the leather price. Within our range we use two types of PU: soft feel PU for our mole notebooks and padded PU for our conference folders and laptops bags.

Neoprene

Neoprene is from the synthetic rubber family and retains its shape even when it has been squeezed or compressed. Most importantly it is waterproof and padded, making it a perfect material for our laptop sleeves.

Non Woven pp (Polypropylene)

Non woven PP is a recyclable plastic fabric with density measured in gsm (grams per square metre). It is durable yet lightweight with good colour retention and is easily wiped clean – great for our shoppers. It is designed to be repeatedly used over many years and can then be recycled.

Cotton

Cotton is ideal for shoppers; strong, durable, versatile and has good colour retention. Our new organic and recycled cotton shoppers are a great eco-friendly option and are GRS and GOTS certified. Cotton quality is measured in ounces; the greater the weight, the better the quality.

Polyester

Polyester is a man made material, lightweight yet extremely strong and resistant to stretching and shirking. The quality is measured in deniers (D); the higher the denier, the stronger and more durable the bag. Many of our drawstring bags are made from 210D, sports bags 600D.

Canvas

Canvas is a natural fabric, high on green credentials. It is a tough, sturdy, heavy duty fabric, well capable of withstanding the wear and tear of everyday use. Canvas quality is measured in ounces; the greater the weight, the better the quality.

Jute

Jute is a natural material made from the fibre of the stems of the jute plant. It is 100% bio-degradable and recyclable, making it extremely eco-friendly. Jute is naturally very strong which makes it suitable for carrying weightier loads and therefore ideal for our shoppers.

Juco

A fine blend of jute and cotton, juco takes the best properties of both to give a smoother finish making it easier to print fine detail on it. With the tight weave of cotton and the hard-wearing durability of jute, it has a long lifespan, is environmentally friendly and sustainable.

RPET

RPET stands for recycled polyethylene terephthalate, or recycled PET. RPET is a strong, durable and recyclable material. It is light weight and easily wiped clean. A great material for our shoppers to be used over many years.

Personalisation Guide

Find out more about the personalisation techniques available, the processes involved and which items they are suitable for. For further information please call our sales office.

Screen Print

A stencil based technique in which a fine woven mesh is used to support a design etched into an impermeable emulsion based screen. The design is etched into the emulsion base using UV light, burning away the emulsion and leaving the design outline and the exposed mesh below. Ink is then forced into the mesh openings using a fill blade or squeegee, in a stroking motion. The pressure applied during the stroking motion causes the screen to rebound from the substrate, leaving the ink behind. One colour is printed at a time and several screens can be used to produce a multi-coloured design.

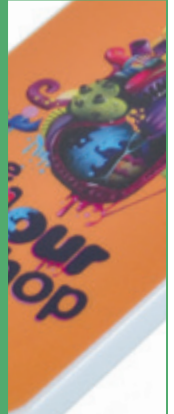

Suitable for notebooks, cooler bags, shoppers and conference folders.

Digital Printing

The latest technology in terms of personalising promotional items, with the most popular methods using laser or inkjet printers. These work by depositing a pigment onto the item surface. The pigment does not permeate the surface, as conventional ink does, but instead forms a thin layer on the surface. The printed layer can be additionally adhered to the item surface using a heat or UV process. As the digital based image is printed directly onto the item surface, there is no requirement for printing plates, one of the greatest benefits of digital printing.

Suitable for notebooks.

Transfer Printing

Artwork is transferred onto transfer paper and the outline is cut out, leaving a small border to aid durability. Using lasers, the cut out artwork is then accurately positioned on the item surface to ensure it is straight. The next step is the heat press – an iron-like machine that can evenly apply hundreds of pounds of pressure while accurately controlling the temperature. The heat acts to soften the transfer paper causing it to melt into the items surface, making it part of the item.

Suitable for cooler bags and shoppers.

Embroidery

Artwork must first be converted from an editable logo into digitised stitches that can be read by the embroidery machine. Before the actual embroidery process can begin, specific thread colours are manually loaded into the machine and set to a specific sequence and speed, dependant on the artwork and fabric used. The print area of the item is fixed to a device called a frame which then attaches to the machine. Once the item has been embroidered a process of cutting, tearing and trimming takes place to remove the backing material (used to stabilise the fabric during embroidery) and additional stitches are removed.

Suitable for rucksacks, satchels and holdalls.

Debossing

Debossing requires a simple combination of heat and high pressure, with no need for ink or dye. The artwork is used as a template from which a metal die and a corresponding metal counter-die are cut. One metal die features the raised sections of the artwork and the other metal die features the recessed version of the same artwork. The item is set between the 2 dies and pressure and heat are used to squeeze the die imprint into the material. The result is a recessed and exact copy of the artwork. The debossed area is extremely smooth as the heat and pressure act like an iron.

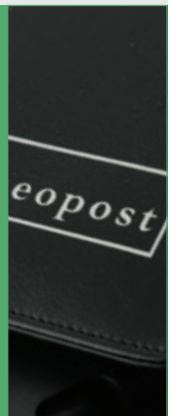

Suitable for conference folders and notebooks.

Foil Blocking

A process that applies metallic or 'foil' effects to a surface. This is done using a metal die onto which the design is chemically etched using the supplied artwork. The metal die is heated and foil film is positioned between the metal die and the items surface. This process transfers a thin layer of the foil film onto the intended surface. Pressure is then applied which causes the foil film to fuse to the surface and the heat activates the adhesive. Foil films are available in a variety of colours, with the most common being gold and silver.

Suitable for conference folders, and notebooks.
