EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

34 N. ASH STREET

Blackfoot, ID 83221

34 N Ash Street offers a flexible commercial opportunity in the heart of Blackfoot, Idaho. This single-story, 8,800-square-foot flex building sits on 0.38 acres and includes additional mezzanine space, making it suitable for a range of potential users. Originally constructed in 1935, the property has recent capital improvements, including a full roof and decking replacement in 2022. The building features C-2 zoning, a 12' overhead door for shipping and receiving, and 8 on-site surface parking stalls. It also offers adequate power infrastructure and potential for conversion to retail or other commercial uses. With its central location in Blackfoot's commercial corridor, the property benefits from proximity to key roadways and services, making it accessible for both employees and customers. Blackfoot is known as the "Potato Capital of the World" and serves as a regional hub within Bingham County. The area's diversified economy, affordable real estate, and strategic location between Idaho Falls and Pocatello contribute to its steady growth and business appeal. This offering presents an opportunity to acquire a well-located, functional property suited to a wide variety of end users or investors looking to reposition a centrally located commercial asset.

MARKET OVERVIEW

Blackfoot, ID

Blackfoot, Idaho, known as the "Potato Capital of the World," is a small but industrious city nestled in the southeastern part of the state. Located along the Snake River and just off Interstate 15, Blackfoot serves as a strategic hub between the larger cities of Idaho Falls to the north and Pocatello to the south. Its location provides access to key transportation routes and a strong agricultural corridor, making it a vital player in the region's economy. Agriculture is at the heart of Blackfoot's industry, with potato farming as its most prominent feature. The city is home to the Idaho Potato Museum, celebrating the crop that drives much of the local economy. In addition to potatoes, the surrounding region supports the cultivation of wheat, barley, and sugar beets, along with livestock production. Agri-businesses, food processing, and storage facilities are major employers, and the city continues to see growth in light manufacturing and renewable energy sectors. Culturally, Blackfoot retains a deep connection to its agricultural roots while embracing a strong sense of community. The Eastern Idaho State Fair, held annually in Blackfoot, draws visitors from across the region with its blend of entertainment, livestock exhibitions, and local cuisine. The city also values education, outdoor recreation, and historical preservation, offering residents and visitors a balanced lifestyle rooted in tradition and natural beauty.

LOCATION OVERVIEW

HIGHWAY ACCESS

Interstate 15 (I-15): Blackfoot is directly served by I-15, a major north-south corridor in eastern Idaho. The city is accessible via two interchanges:

- Exit 89 (South Blackfoot Interchange): This interchange connects I-15 with U.S. Highway 91.
- Exit 93: Located at Bridge Street, this interchange provides access to downtown Blackfoot and connects with U.S. Highway 26

U.S. Highway 91 (US-91): Running parallel to I-15, US-91 passes through Blackfoot and serves as a business route, providing access to local streets and businesses. It is often used as an alternative route during I-15 construction or congestion.

U.S. Highway 26 (US-26): This east-west highway intersects with I-15 at Exit 93, extending westward from Blackfoot and providing regional connectivity.

State Highway 39 (SH-39): Serving the western part of Blackfoot, SH-39 connects the city to surrounding rural areas and is a key route for agricultural transport. The city is working on transportation improvement projects along this highway to enhance safety and accommodate growth.

AIRPORT PROXIMITY

McCarley Field Airport (U02): Located within the city, this airport primarily serves general aviation and does not offer scheduled commercial flights.

Idaho Falls Regional Airport (IDA): Situated approximately 29 miles (47 kilometers) north of Blackfoot, this airport provides commercial flights to various domestic destinations.

Pocatello Regional Airport (PIH): Located approximately 30 miles (48 kilometers) south of Blackfoot, this airport also offers commercial flight options.
