A Rainy Day

Today will be a wet one. Heavy rain and thunder are expected through most of the day. You will need your raincoat and umbrella.

Blu, let's play a game of hide-and-seek. I'll close my eyes as I speak and slowly count to ten. And, once I get to the end, I'll search for you, my friend.

Okay Bonnie.

The last place she'll look for me is under her bed. I'm hiding out with the late-night monster crew and the dust bunnies, too.

Room by room
I'm coming
through looking for you. Counting
one, two.

I'm keeping
score. As I open
every door—three,
four.

I can't seem to find
you, Blu, and I'm feeling caught like a fly in glue. Could you be, by some weird design,
a kind of hide-and-seek,
Mastermind?

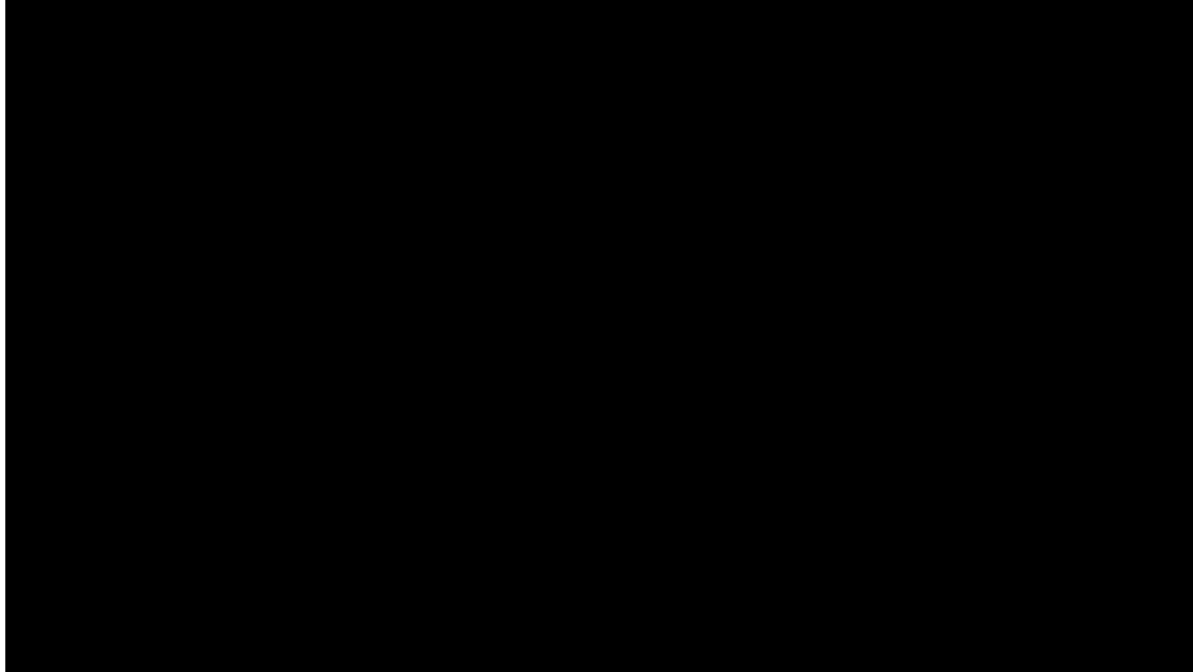

With all the boxes, bags, and brooms, he can't be here; there's no room. My goodness, I'm clueless!

Bathroom

Rub-a-dub-dub?
Blu won't hide in a tub.
He's a pet who hates to get
wet. Surely everyone can see:
He'll never be a water
flea.

Oh, Blu,
you were clever and
hard to find!
You left no clues or traces behind.

I looked in many small,
crowded spaces and searched
your favorite and secret
places. Wow, it took me
a long time to cover
all those bases.

Bonnie,
It's my turn
to find you.

One,
two, three,
four...

Now, I'll show Blu what I can do in this game. I'll hide so well that he'll exclaim that
"She's not a rookie! "
It'll take him so long to find me, I'll even have time to eat a delicious cookie.

Blu won't find my
new hideout; he'll wander
around and around, scratching his head in doubt.
He'll look everywhere
except here.

I'm on the right
track.

The facts are jam-packed.
I can hear a cookie crunching.

I can hear her munching.
Looking at the sum of the fallen cookie crumbs and the smell of
chocolate chips,
I'll soon catch Bonnie Blak still licking her lips.

Gotcha!

Blu, I tried to fool you. But you're a good detective too.

Despite the stormy gray clouds that brought us a rainy downpour and kept us indoors, we could still play.

I can honestly say, and this is true, that whether it's a rainy or sunny day, I always have fun with you.

Bonnie Blak and Blu

We look forward to seeing you again soon.
