Welcome!

Your UCT degree is in demand.

The many employer adverts and listings in this publication proves it. UCT is first in Africa for graduate employability and 18th in the world for graduates in employment after one year of graduating.

Even with a world class qualification, you need to ensure you have the essential skills needed for a changing world of work. You need to develop skills to network, search for jobs, compile a targeted application and sail through assessments and interviews to get the job you want. It's your responsibility, but we can help.

FUTURE SKILLS

OWN
FUTURE

Dear Student, future-proof your career

YOU NEED THE RIGHT MINDSET TO SUCCEED
IN THE 4TH INDUSTRIAL REVOLUTION.
NAWAAL BOOLAY, ACTING DIRECTOR AT THE CAREERS SERVICE, SHARES ADVICE.

THE CAREERS SERVICE is your partner when you are considering your career options and when you are transitioning to the world of work. We want to help you navigate the ever-changing careers landscape, especially in the current era of the 4th Industrial Revolution (4IR).

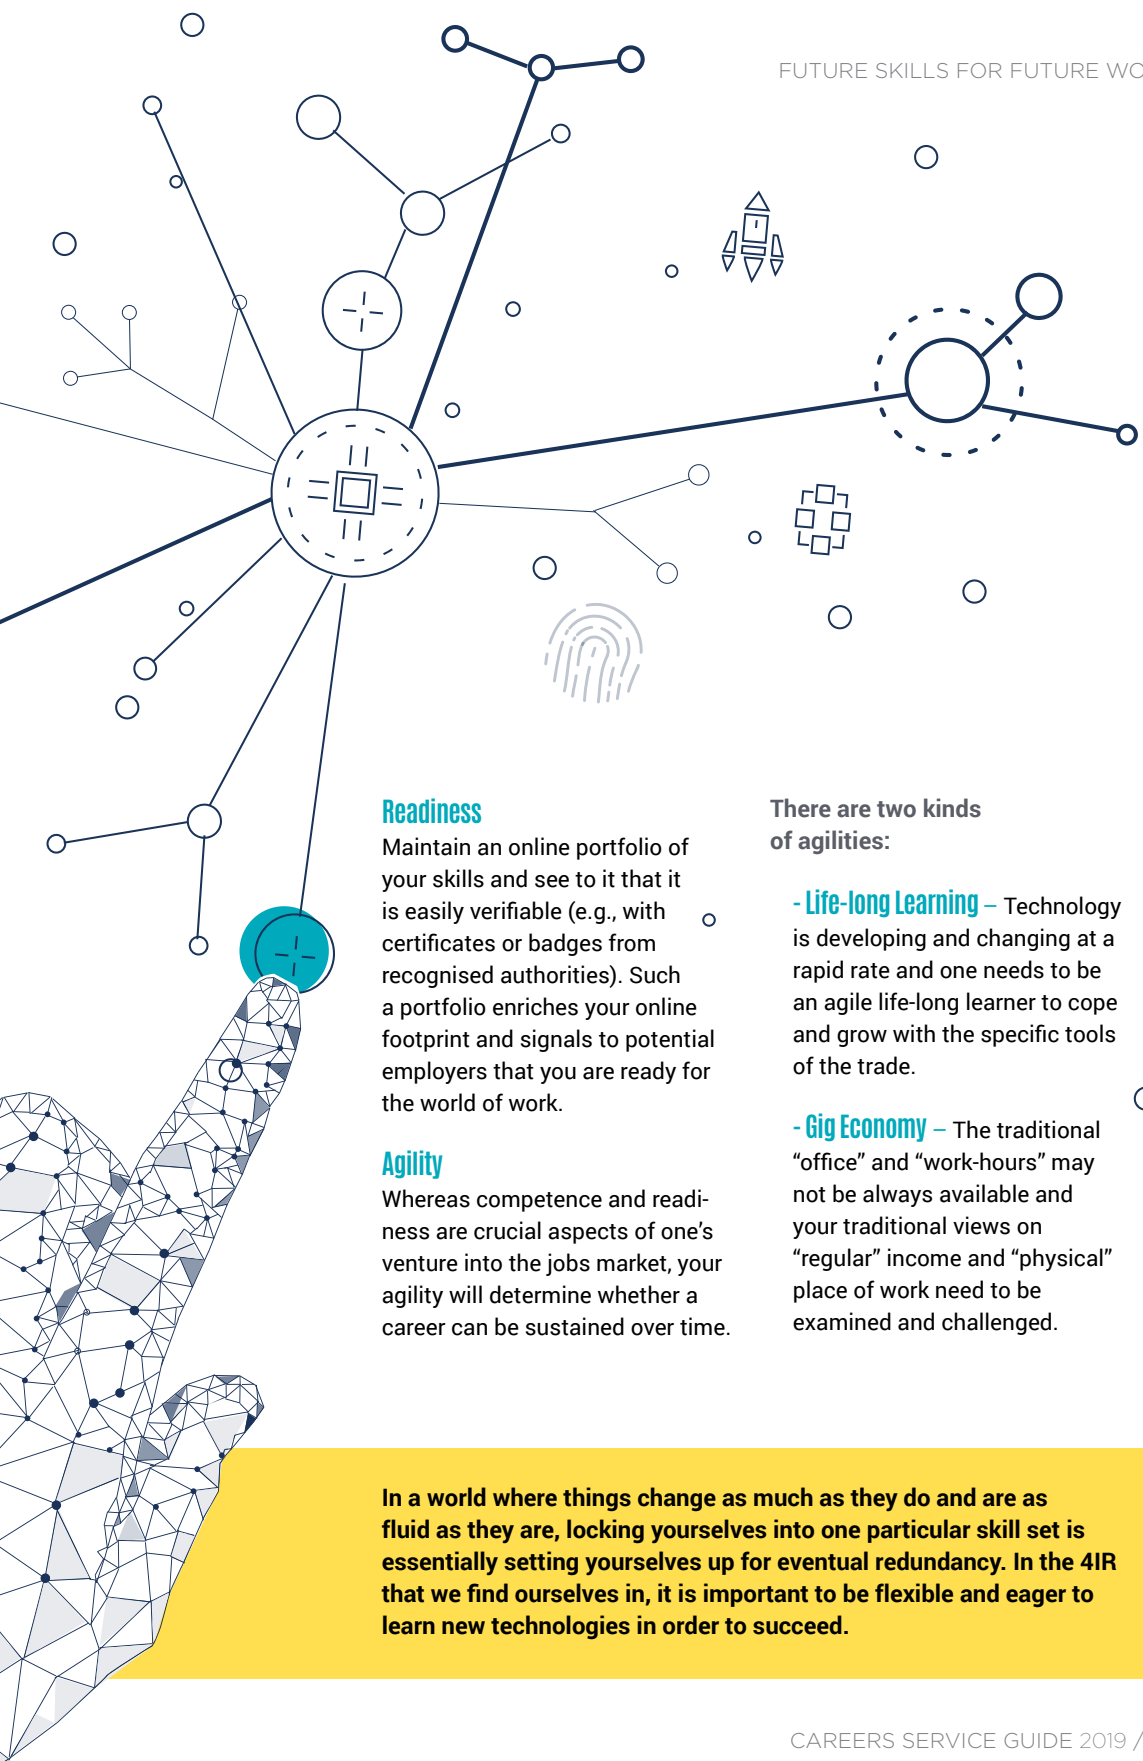

The 4IR requires employees to have a technological competence that is both demonstrable and flexible. Regardless of the degree you are pursuing or the course you are taking, you must keep in mind that you will stand a better chance of succeeding in the world of work if you are able to harness the powers of technology.

When it comes to technology: be competent, ready and agile.

Competence

Ensure that the suite of skills you leave the university with includes some aspects of data analysis, technological research or computer programming. Research projects in all disciplines include data analysis and most data analysis exercises can include some form of programming.

NAWAAL BOOLAY HAS 13 YEARS' EXPERIENCE IN THE GRADUATE RECRUITMENT MARKET. SHE HOLDS A BUSINESS QUALIFICATION FROM THE UNIVERSITY OF CAPE TOWN. NAWAAL IS CURRENTLY ACTING DIRECTOR AND RESPONSIBLE FOR STRATEGIC PLANNING, DEVELOPMENT, MANAGEMENT AND LEADERSHIP OF EMPLOYER-RELATED ACTIVITIES AND SERVICES TO THE UCT COMMUNITY, CORPORATES/SMMES AND CIVIL SOCIETY ORGANISATIONS.

Readiness

Maintain an online portfolio of your skills and see to it that it is easily verifiable (e.g., with certificates or badges from recognised authorities). Such a portfolio enriches your online footprint and signals to potential employers that you are ready for the world of work.

Agility

Whereas competence and readiness are crucial aspects of one's venture into the jobs market, your agility will determine whether a career can be sustained over time.

There are two kinds of agilities:

- Life-long Learning – Technology is developing and changing at a rapid rate and one needs to be an agile life-long learner to cope and grow with the specific tools of the trade.

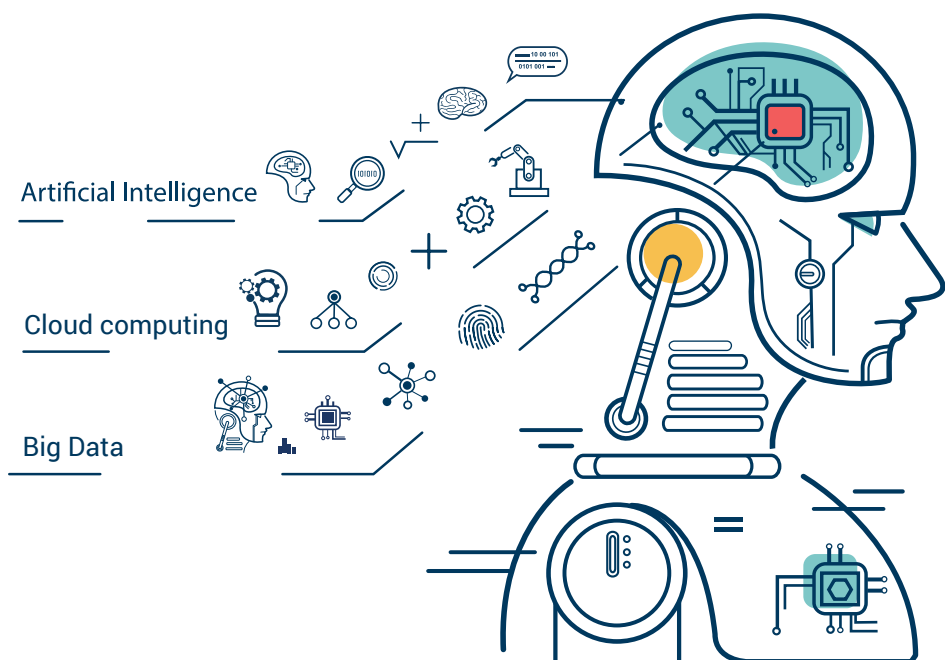

- Gig Economy – The traditional “office” and “work-hours” may not be always available and your traditional views on “regular” income and “physical” place of work need to be examined and challenged.

In a world where things change as much as they do and are as fluid as they are, locking yourselves into one particular skill set is essentially setting yourselves up for eventual redundancy. In the 4IR that we find ourselves in, it is important to be flexible and eager to learn new technologies in order to succeed.

4th Industrial Revolution

DISRUPTIVE CHANGES TO BUSINESS MODELS WILL HAVE A PROFOUND IMPACT ON THE EMPLOYMENT LANDSCAPE OVER THE COMING YEARS.

“For workers, there is an unquestionable need to take personal responsibility for one’s own lifelong learning and career development.”

Complex problem solving

THE ABILITY TO SOLVE COMPLEX PROBLEMS WILL BE THE MOST EMPLOYABLE SKILL IN 2020, ACCORDING TO THE WORLD ECONOMIC FORUM. IT IS NOT CLEAR HOW THIS WILL RELATE TO THE WORLD OF WORK. DAVID BUCKHAM, CEO AT MONOCLE SOLUTIONS BREAKS THE SOLUTIONS DOWN FOR YOU.

DAVID BUCKHAM

IS CHIEF EXECUTIVE OFFICER AT MONOCLE SOLUTIONS, A SPECIALIST CONSULTING FIRM FOCUSED ON FINANCE, TREASURY, RISK AND COMPLIANCE.

WWW.MONOCLE.CO.ZA

IN OUR WORKING lives, as well as in our personal lives, we sometimes come across complex problems. These problems cannot be solved in a single formulaic way. They are matryoshka nesting doll problems – problems within problems within problems.

Complex problem solving is the ability to see a path through a forest of problems. Usually this involves creating a methodology of analysis that enables one to break the puzzle up into smaller, manageable pieces and to divide up the work that needs to be done in an industrial manner. Much like a butcher who must carefully study the carcass of an animal before making clean, strategic cuts that will not ruin the meat, so problem solvers in all spheres need to decide on the best way to break down a complex challenge into workable parts.

The entire concept of artificial intelligence is based on this very idea of solving complex problems through iterative processes, which are in and of themselves quite simple, but are able to solve large, complex problems by working in an integrated manner.

However, complex problems can be found in all industries: in the untangling of complex legacy systems in IT, for example; or in unravelling years of complex debits and credits in the financial sector. They exist too in social networks, in which there are different kinds of relationships between different kinds of people which must be navigated successfully for different purposes.

Solve complex problems industry, Monocle regularly assists its clients in solving complex problems. One notable example that we encountered involved a bank that had undertaken significant work to integrate many of its systems and data from those systems into two distinct databases. Using a complex set of rules and approaches, each of these databases executed a different set of complicated calculations, which were required to comply with banking regulations.

Chop the problem down to size

The design of each database had taken recognition of the complexity involved in each process, however, the bank needed to create one process out of these two separate databases, without changing the way the bank treated the assets, and all the while respecting the intended methodologies that were embedded in the code.

It was almost like reading a text written in a language one doesn't understand and translating it into another language, which one also doesn't understand. The only way to conquer this problem – as with all complex problems – was to first analyse the problem as a whole and then to find a way to cut it into pieces we could work with.

Always remember that there is no such thing as a problem that is too complex to solve – all one needs to do is plan carefully and chop it down to size.

A Matryoshka doll (also known as a Russian nesting doll/stacking doll) is a set of wooden dolls of decreasing size placed one inside the other.

Critical Thinking

THINKING WILL BE THE SECOND

DANISH PHYSICIST Niels Bohr is often credited with the aphorism “prediction is very difficult, especially about the future”. The chaos and complexity arising from factors like globalisation, political populism, and the impact of automation (including the risks and rewards offered by Artificial Intelligence) make his point difficult to dispute.

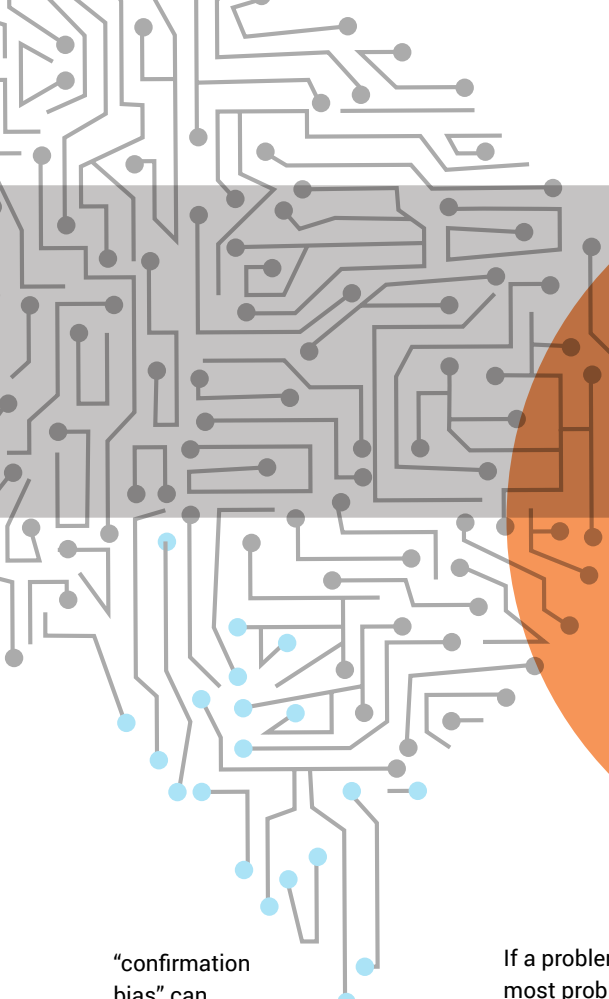

That is why creativity and critical thinking are such valuable skills in future workplaces. Since we cannot know exactly what “work” will look like, people who are able to understand and adapt to complex scenarios have a distinct advantage.

You don’t need to have studied philosophy to be a better critical thinker, even though it (usually!) helps. One important disposition we can all try to cultivate is that of scientific scepticism, which doesn’t simply mean distrust, but rather paying careful attention to the amount and quality of evidence available to us before reaching any conclusions.

Confirmation bias and how to avoid it

The pace of social media, as well as “computational propaganda” (which determines, for example, that the top items in your Facebook feed are there thanks to marketing spend or political interference, rather than being accurate, interesting, or relevant to your personal profile), means that most of us are subject to an unmanageable and often unhelpful amount of information.

In response, we could end up seeking out sources that reassure rather than challenge us, and then giving those sources more credit than they deserve. This

"If a problem is complex – as most problems are – the most intellectually virtuous response is often to say "I don't know", rather than pretending to be certain."

"confirmation bias" can cause us to underestimate the strength of opposing views, and the complexity of the problem we're faced with, resulting in poor strategic choices.

To help combat this, we must actively seek out viewpoints that differ fundamentally from ours, and do our best to think charitably about the arguments for those views, rather than thinking of them as false from the starting position.

Intellectual humility

We should remind ourselves that the fast pace and hyperbole typical of social media create an entirely false impression that we are obliged to have a firm opinion on any given topic.

If a problem is complex – as most problems are – the most intellectually virtuous response is often "I don't know", rather than pretending to be certain. And while workplaces don't always reward this sort of modesty, a variant is certainly possible. This would be to remind ourselves, and encourage others, to cultivate a measure of intellectual humility whereby we embrace and seek out the possibility of being wrong instead of only trying to prove that we are right.

An already complex and unpredictable world is only going to become more so, and because we have a bias towards what we consider normal or correct, being aware of this bias, and striving to resist it, gives us a better chance of dealing with whatever comes next.

Creativity

LIFE AND WORK IN THE 21ST CENTURY DEMANDS CREATIVITY. IT IS A COMPETENCY THAT EVERY STUDENT SHOULD ACQUIRE IN ORDER TO PREPARE THEM FOR THE WORLD OF WORK. DR KENEILWE MUNYAI FROM THE HASSO PLATTNER SCHOOL OF DESIGN THINKING MAKES SUGGESTIONS.

DR KENEILWE MUNYAI

IS A PROGRAMME MANAGER AT THE HASSO PLATTNER SCHOOL OF DESIGN THINKING AT UCT. SHE DEVELOPS THE IMPLEMENTATION OF HUMAN-CENTERED PROGRAMME OFFERINGS AT THE D-SCHOOL. SHE BELIEVES IN USING DESIGN AS A STRATEGIC TOOL FOR DEVELOPMENT IN AFRICA.

WWW.DSCHOOL.UCT.AC.ZA

Creativity is not linked only to aesthetics. As Sir Ken Robinson, an author and arts educationist, suggests, "being creative isn't about your hair style or your style of dress, it is an attitude and a disposition to the work that you're doing."

Creativity is not a single personal trait, but a set of traits. Those traits include intelligence, intensive interest, knowledge, creative instinct, non-conformity, courage, dealing with uncertainty, open-mindedness, curiosity, tolerance, emotional intelligence, social and contextual awareness, communication, divergence and convergence and persistence.

Creativity is about embracing challenges, and seeing their ambiguity and constraints as opportunities to consider them from different perspectives. It is about the ability of approaching your work from different viewpoints which helps you become more productive. Problem-finding is the act of defining a problem through understanding the context of the problem and the stakeholders involved. Identifying, generating and prioritising ideas for solutions and implementing them are all elements of creativity. Learning and practising these skills regularly will lead to creative confidence.

Generate new approaches

According to David Kelley, professor and founder of IDEO, creative confidence is a way of experiencing the world that generates new approaches and solutions to problems. Creative confidence is about the belief that you can come up with solutions to complex challenges and have the ability to act on them, without the fear of failure. Building creative confidence takes time. In order to have confidence, one needs abilities and skills. One needs to grow skills to grow confidence, so you need one to have the other. More skills result in more confidence; and confidence leads to growth.

Creativity is a set of traits:

Creative confidence can be strengthened with practice and can result in confidence in other aspects of your life. It can inspire whatever work you do as it gives you more tools that help you enhance your problem-solving practices.

A solution-oriented mindset

Today, industry and society face rapid changes, while new technologies are continually being developed. This often results in knowledge obsolescence and therefore require open-mindedness and curiosity as traits which enable creativity. These traits facilitate lateral thinking, which is a solution-oriented set of techniques that re-frames problems by identifying new associations and relationships that may not be clear when a problem is approached through vertical problem solving. It is a way of solving problems using indirect and creative approaches through reasoning that is not immediately obvious.

The d-school (Hasso Plattner School of Design Thinking at UCT) is one place where students can learn to build their creative confidence, while also learning competencies such as critical thinking and social and cross-cultural skills. Learning these competencies empowers students with skills that are required by industry and society.

5 tips to collaborate effectively with others

Communicate

Start by participating in public speaking platforms and speaking up as a leader within societies and organisations. In addition, share your perspective and thoughts when having conversations with others. This will help you to start feeling more comfortable with sharing your thoughts.

Good communication is an umbrella tool. It is critical for things like the transmission of information and interaction between parties. It allows for individuals to express themselves in whichever way they feel comfortable with.

Peer awareness

Team building is an important aspect as it allows collaborators to be vulnerable and to get to know each other well. In most cases team members have many differences between them. Everyone has their own way of thinking or acting. Team building will enable you to assign tasks according to the strengths of each member, reinforcing their motivation and supporting their specialisation in a direct and positive way.

Set a common goal

It becomes easier to coordinate with others when you are all on the same page. It's very important to establish common grounds. Collaboration has no point if the individuals do not agree on what needs to be achieved. If possible, set up strategic planning sessions with your team members prior to assuming roles.

GOOD COMMUNICATION IS AN UMBRELLA TOOL.

IT IS CRITICAL FOR THINGS LIKE THE TRANSMISSION OF INFORMATION AND INTERACTION BETWEEN PARTIES.

Some handy collaboration tools:

Communication

Slack
Skype
Hipchat

Project management

Trello
Vula Project Site
Easynote

File sharing

Dropbox
OneDrive
WeTransfer
Dropsend
Hightail
Google Drive

Documentation

Google Docs
Office online
Dropbox Paper

Idea management

Viimo
Milanote
Innovation Cloud

How do I choose a collaboration tool?

- 1) Choose multiple features
- 2) Must be user friendly
- 3) Cloud-based
- 4) Check for integrations

Define roles and responsibilities

Know your strengths and weaknesses. This will direct you as to where your skills fit best and enables you to take on the best suitable role in an organisation. When a team member knows their exact responsibilities, they will feel accountable for what needs to be done and contribute efficiently to the team.

Plan ahead

As the foundation of a project, the plan serves as a guideline for collaborators. Once the team is formed and the role of each team member is defined, a plan should be outlined that includes all the tasks to perform and the estimated time frame. This helps collaborators not to deviate from goals and to know all the steps of the project in advance.

The social skill of collaborating with others is mainly based on interaction – it gets better with exposure and experience. Join an organisation where you can step up to own a specific portfolio. This will give you motivation to improve your collaboration skills.

Don't be afraid to put yourself out there and have your voice heard. "You can try and fail, but don't fail to try."

People management

THE WORKING WORLD IS CHANGING FROM HIERARCHICAL 'COMMAND AND CONTROL' CULTURE TO A MODEL WHERE FUTURE LEADERS WILL BE ABLE TO COACH AND EMPOWER OTHERS. HOW DOES THIS TRANSLATE TO YOU AS A STUDENT AND JOB SEEKER TODAY? PAOLO GIURICICH, FOUNDER OF SMART EQ, EXPLAINS.

PAOLO GIURICICH CA(SA) IS AN OD CONSULTANT AND FOUNDER OF SMART EQ, AND WORKS WITH INDIVIDUALS AND ORGANISATIONS TO OPTIMISE EFFECTIVENESS IN THE WORK CONTEXT. PAOLO HAS WORKED GLOBALLY IN OVER 30 COUNTRIES.

Personal Branding

The globalisation of the working world and the proliferation of the 'gig economy' will have a major impact on the talent resources available around the world. When applying for a role, you will be competing with the best individuals from all over the world in a huge talent pool. Your ability to brand yourself and establish your credibility of skills in any upfront interaction and online, will be hugely important. Your leadership attributes must also be defined and show through authentically.

“YOUR ABILITY TO BRAND YOURSELF AND ESTABLISH YOUR CREDIBILITY OF SKILLS IN ANY UPFRONT INTERACTION AND ONLINE, WILL BE HUGEY IMPORTANT.”

Collaborative Innovation

Your ability to foster collaborative innovation between people is one of the next key skills needed to survive. Innovation is what is driving business and competitiveness for the future.

“BUILD MEANINGFUL (IN PERSON) RELATIONSHIPS WITH COLLEAGUES AT WORK AND WITH PEOPLE AT HOME”

Relationships Matter

Whilst our world has become super connected thanks to technology, the state of our relationships at a face-to-face level with people is lacking. So whilst everything happens at lightning speed, and we can connect with anyone anywhere, our ability to build meaningful (in person) relationships with colleagues at work and with people at home will become the most important skill to relearn. Unless we are able to connect at a deep level, we will not be able to be future leaders or have the ability to coach and develop others.

Open Mind

Whilst all the above tips will certainly set you up for success in the future, one must always bear in mind that workspaces are still multi-generational, and sometimes these skills will be valued and sometimes not. The key skill will be for you to be alert and understand the context of the environment and place of work and be flexible in how you show up!

Take Charge

Future work expectations will be that you take ownership of your learning, growth and career goals. This means that you need to demonstrate your ability to take charge of yourself, your learning and your future career goals and aspirations. The key skill to doing this, is to become a lifelong learner, and that means, if you don't know something, go out and seek it through whatever means possible. Nobody will send you on a 'course' anymore.

Emotional Intelligence

Working with Emotional Intelligence by Daniel Goleman
Includes case studies from more than 500 global organisations that Goleman has worked with.

Author of the international bestseller EMOTIONAL INTELLIGENCE
DANIEL GOLEMAN

Working with Emotional Intelligence

“Anyone interested in leadership should get a copy of this book.”
—The New York Times

In 1990 two scientists Peter Salovey and John D. Mayer coined the term “emotional intelligence”. They defined it as “a form of social intelligence that involves the ability to monitor one’s own and others’ feelings and emotions, to discriminate among them, and to use this information to guide one’s thinking and action.” Daniel Goleman spent many years of his life researching emotional intelligence (EQ) in the workplace. He suggests that you can improve your EQ through focusing on your self awareness, self management, social awareness and relationship management. People who are emotionally intelligent want success for themselves and their co-workers.

Judgement and Decision making

Mark Zuckerberg has a legitimate reason for wearing the same grey T-shirt everyday. He believes that by eliminating wardrobe decisions each morning he reserves his energy for more important decisions at work. Workplace decisions can range from simple choices to complex and high stakes situations with large budgets and people’s livelihoods on the line.

Judgement plays a role in decision making by providing you with the capacity or thought processes to make your decision. Essentially your decision comes from exercising your judgement. Effective decisions require that a person be able to forecast the outcome of each option and also determine which option will be the best for the situation. With the rise of data analytics, we are now able to condense vast amounts of information to help inform our decisions.

Service orientation

Employers look for candidates who know the importance of offering value and good service to clients. In its broadest sense employees or entrepreneurs with a service orientation are helpful, considerate, cooperative and organised. They are also good communicators and problem solvers. Customer engagement has become a speciality in its own right with interactions now occurring face-to-face, telephonically, through emails, websites on customer relationship management platforms, via mobile applications and social media. Artificial intelligence has also dramatically changed the customer service landscape. In recent studies in the United States, 69% of consumers say that they interact with an intelligent assistant or chatbot at least once a month. To excel in service delivery in the Fourth Industrial Revolution means you also need to be able to look at the full customer experience, considering all interactions and platforms. Look for free courses online in User Experience, Customer Experience or Service Design.

9.

Negotiation

Good negotiators can get hostages out of life threatening situations.

Fortunately it's unlikely that you would need a bulletproof vest when trying to establish a win-win for yourself and other individuals or businesses. It is no surprise that negotiation skills are sought after in the workplace today and in the future.

Once you enter the world of work you will find yourself in many different scenarios where negotiating a good outcome will serve you well: Want a raise or extended deadline from your employer? Need to find a compromise with a difficult co-worker? Have to barter a better price with a supplier? All these situations require negotiation skills.

Make sure you are prepared before you go into a negotiation and be clear on your goal. Come up with more than one alternative to offer, but don't sell yourself short. Commit time to the process. Good communication and listening skills will get you far.

Cognitive Flexibility

Rigidity is the opposite of cognitive flexibility. People who are rigid in their thinking are upset with any kind of change. This kind of thinking stifles collaboration, creativity and innovation. To have cognitive flexibility means you can adapt and change. You are also able to take advantage of opportunities, even if it changes the initial plan. Being employable in a changing world of work will require you to transfer knowledge beyond the original situation. Keep your thinking flexible by doing creative activities, changing your routine and meeting new, different people. Most importantly think about your values and morals. Put yourself in a constructive situation where you can be challenged on your viewpoints and give those opinions that differ to yours respectful consideration. You don't need to change who you are or what you believe, you just need to be open to different perspectives.

The Future World of Work

AUTOMISATION IS RAPIDLY TAKING OVER THE WORK LANDSCAPE. IN ORDER TO STAY EMPLOYABLE, WE NEED TO ADAPT, WRITES LUAN MCARTHUR, RECRUITING MANAGER AT MICROSOFT.

We are living in an era of unprecedented and fundamental transformations in the way we work. Artificial Intelligence (AI) is replacing human tasks, subsequently changing the skills that organisations are looking for in people. However, when I think of the rise of the Fourth Industrial Revolution and its impact on the job market, two words spring to mind: Empathy and Adaptability.

Why do I say this?

Because for all the job losses that AI may exacerbate in the future, as robots replace humans beings at all levels of productivity,

I believe these two human characteristics can never fully be substituted with an algorithm.

I am employed by the largest software company in the world however – as its been quoted several times before – software is being infused in every part of a business, making every company a software company. Thus, there are certain skills that will keep you marketable regardless of the profession you choose – programming being one of them – Emotional Intelligence (EQ) and agility being others. In order to increase your employability at the graduate level and beyond, the key is to remain fluid in your skills development. In other words, never stop learning.

The Fourth Industrial Revolution is currently impacting us in three very specific realms: the Physical, the Biological and the Digital.

When thinking about the physical realm, think autonomous vehicles,

LUAN MCARTHUR – UNIVERSITY RECRUITING MANAGER: AFRICA AT MICROSOFT, AKA #DREAMMAKER

LUAN IS A SEASONED HR PROFESSIONAL WITH MORE THAN 15 YEARS' EXPERIENCE SPANNING THE TECHNOLOGY FINANCIAL SERVICES AND MANAGEMENT CONSULTING INDUSTRIES RESPECTIVELY. SHE HOLDS A MASTERS DEGREE IN STRATEGIC HR MANAGEMENT AND IS CURRENTLY WORKING TOWARDS HER PHD IN THIS FIELD.

robotics and 3D printing. Genomic diagnostic treatment is a typical example of the biological sphere. IoT, data and analytics, and e-commerce all speak to the growing digital arena. But what is AI really? In a nutshell, it's about computers mimicking human behaviour.

The question remains: how do we harness the good while embracing the bad?

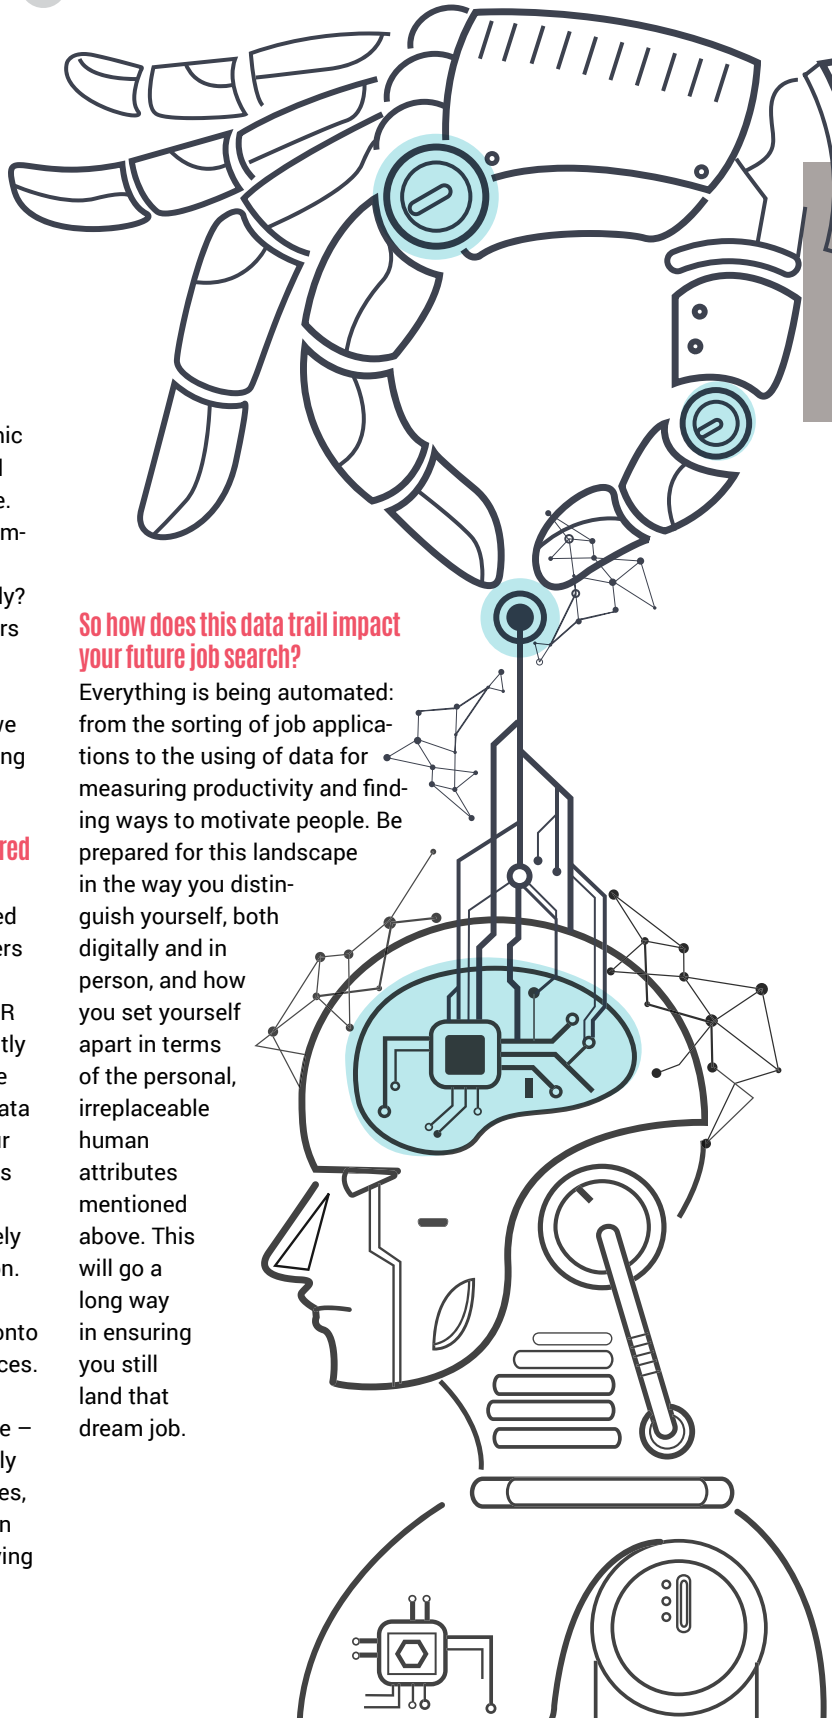

How would you feel about being hired by an algorithm?

This growing phenomenon, called 'Management-by-algorithm', refers to more and more data from various sources being used in HR processes. You need to constantly be mindful of the fact that you're leaving behind a 'breadcrumb' data trail at any given time. From your social media profiles, to GP visits and using navigators and even ATM withdrawals, we are all freely giving away personal information. We even give names and email addresses when we simply log onto free Wi-Fi hotspots in public places.

The thing is, nothing is really free – what we have been doing is really willingly giving away our activities, locations, habits and opinions. In other words, we are actually paying with data.

So how does this data trail impact your future job search?

Everything is being automated: from the sorting of job applications to the using of data for measuring productivity and finding ways to motivate people. Be prepared for this landscape in the way you distinguish yourself, both digitally and in person, and how you set yourself apart in terms of the personal, irreplaceable human attributes mentioned above. This will go a long way in ensuring you still land that dream job.

1.

Fit for the Future

INGRID VAN DER MERWE, HEAD: CAREERS
ADVISORY SERVICE, GIVES ADVICE ON GETTING
YOU AND YOUR DEGREE FIT FOR THE FUTURE.

Realise that a degree alone is not enough

Many important skills are developed through extra-curricular activities. Put yourself in situations you won't experience in your academics. Whether it's leadership positions in res or sport, faculty and community work, get involved!

Don't be literal-minded about your subjects

Your subjects won't necessarily dictate what you end up doing. You develop useful skills THROUGH subjects, like critical thinking or analytical skills. Skills are transferable into different contexts which broaden your career options.

Develop an entrepreneurial mindset

Not everyone has to own a business. An entrepreneurial mindset means being innovative, flexible, aware of opportunities and client needs. These are useful whether you work for yourself or within an organisation.

Think globally

Living in a comfortable, local bubble won't help. Stay in touch with what is happening globally. What are the challenges and how are they affecting us? Find opportunities to be exposed to diverse cultures.

Form networks

Networking isn't just for people who attended private schools or whose parents are CEOs. It's about making connections. Join professional networks as a student member and follow groups that interest you on LinkedIn. Careers Service events also provide many networking opportunities.

Embrace technology

No matter what you are studying, stay in tune with what is happening in your field and how technology is affecting advancement.

Work on your interpersonal skills

Artificial intelligence is affecting all sectors. But people remain people. Managing conflict, working in team and communicating effectively are some interpersonal skills highly rated by employers. Developing these most often happen outside your academics, but they are essential for your future.

Careers Service events provide many networking opportunities.

Getting a job

WANTING TO START APPLYING FOR JOBS,
BUT UNSURE OF WHERE TO START? INGRID
VAN DER MERWE, HEAD OF CAREERS
ADVISORY, GIVES SOME POINTERS.

Start with yourself

Think of your values and what is important to you. Consider all you have done and the skills you have gained from these activities. For more on skills, go to our website: www.careers.uct.ac.za/students/identifying skills.

2.

Get ideas from what others have done

You're not limited to the obvious outcomes of your degree.

- Go to "Students" and then "Options with my degree", and to "Options linked to your subject".
- Look at the "Graduate Gallery", which features grads and the jobs they are now in.
- Search on LinkedIn for people with your degree to see what they do.

3.

Network

Speak to as many people as you can to get ideas and do reality checking. See the Networking section on the next page.

Target your applications

When you do apply, remember that your CV and cover letter must be customised and targeted to what is required, else you may not be short-listed.

Do your homework

In applications and interviews, make sure to thoroughly research the company and the role you are applying for. If you don't, you will most probably end up on the "no" pile.

3.

Network

Job Expos

To prepare

- Find out who is exhibiting
- Identify companies you want to engage with

Online job search

SOCIAL MEDIA AND ONLINE PLATFORMS ARE INVALUABLE TO YOUR JOB SEARCH. CAREERS ADVISOR, BRONWYN APRIL, ADVISES ON SETTING UP YOUR ONLINE PRESENCE AND JOB ALERTS TO HELP YOU GET THE JOB YOU WANT.

Facebook

When you start your job search:

- Remove inappropriate photos from your albums
- Delete inappropriate comments and posts
- Employers are often there, too, scoping out new recruits
- Join career-related groups for news, events and opportunities
- Follow pages of companies you are interested in
- Search for relevant keywords

Instagram

Creative industries are more likely to recruit on Instagram. You can:

- Showcase your creative work
- Photo quality and styling is important
- Remove inappropriate images and comments
- Search for relevant content, hashtags and people
- Get insight into corporate company life (social or sport events)

Twitter

This platform is less formal, so show a bit of your personality

- Username/Handle: a real name is more effective for a job search
- Your bio should fit the type of work you seek
- Real-time opportunities come and go fast – Sign in often
- Interact: read, retweet and comment
- Avoid negative, offensive or too personal comments
- Use an upbeat and professional tone
- Post topics aligned to your field
- Search: for posts and individuals aligned to your industry

How to set job alerts

- Set daily alerts. It may be irritating, but could deliver results sooner
- Use quotation marks for a specific position, company or location
- Tweak your preferences if they are not delivering the results you want

MyCareer

1. Log onto www.careers.uct.ac.za
2. Go to MyCareer
3. Click on your name
4. Select Preferences
5. Specify the type of work you are interested in, e.g. full-time, internship
6. Choose faculty you are searching in, e.g. Humanities, Commerce (3 maximum)
7. SAVE

LinkedIn

1. Search for a job
2. Click Set a job alert
(On the right side of job search results page)
3. Select how often you'd like to receive an email alert that fit those specific search parameters.
 - a. Daily or weekly
 - b. Check boxes next to email, mobile and desktop (you will be notified of new jobs via LinkedIn.com and the LinkedIn Job Search app)
4. SAVE

Google

1. Go to google.com/alerts in your browser
2. Enter a search term for the topic you want to track
3. Choose "Show Options" to narrow the alert to a specific source, language, and/or region
4. Select "Create Alert"

LinkedIn

HAVING A GOOD LINKEDIN PROFILE IS ESSENTIAL. IF YOU HAVE THE RIGHT KEY WORDS, THIS WILL ENSURE THAT YOU ARE FOUND BY RECRUITERS SEARCHING FOR SOMEONE WITH YOUR BACKGROUND.

GREAT RESOURCE:
<https://university.linkedin.com/linkedin-for-students> has fantastic articles and videos for students. E.g. Using LinkedIn to find a job or internship, How to network on LinkedIn and How to tailor your profile to your goals.

Photo

Forget the pouty mouth. Keep it light, yet professional. It is perfectly fine to smile – it makes you appear friendlier and worth getting to know.

Headlines

No job title yet? Add your career vision.

Summary

A LinkedIn summary is a mash-up between an elevator pitch and your career objective. It highlights, in 50 words or less, your current status and key achievements. For job seekers, it communicates the types of roles you are looking for. With more and more employers hunting through LinkedIn, your summary may be the only cover letter you get to write – so it needs to pack a punch.

Publish and Share

Who needs a personal blog, when you can publish on LinkedIn? You aren't only limited to creating unique content, you can also curate other people's content that speak to your passions and interests within your industry.

Digital Portfolio

Your LinkedIn profile should not just be a digital version of your CV. Enhance your profile by incorporating certificates, presentation slides, writing samples, images or design work, music or video clips and any other work-based evidence. As a result, your profile will expand to an engaging portfolio.

Skills

Include specific skills on your LinkedIn profile to showcase your abilities. Once you've added a skill to your profile, your skills can be endorsed by 1st-degree connections to reinforce their weighting. Skill endorsements increase the likelihood that you'll be discovered for opportunities related to your skills. LinkedIn messaging allows you to stay in contact with colleagues, associates, and new opportunities. Use LinkedIn InMail to grow your network and connect with possible contacts.

Recommendations

Recommendations are penned by colleagues, clients or managers. Marketing and sales experts highly rate referrals for building brand trust. This is where recommendations come in. Ask people you have worked with (in formal employment, extra-curricular activities or community projects) to write you recommendations.

Search

The Search bar at the top allows you to search for people, jobs, companies, posts, and more. You can click any of the search suggestions that appear in the dropdown list as you type, or submit your search to see the full results.

Your CV

Date of birth, marital and health status and nationality not necessary under equity legislation. But you may choose to put nationality if there are visa/work permit implications

Assessments & Tests

AS PART OF A JOB APPLICATION, EMPLOYERS USE CERTAIN METHODS TO MEASURE THE KNOWLEDGE, SKILLS AND COMPETENCIES REQUIRED FOR A SPECIFIC ROLE.

Employers may use one or a combination of the following assessments:

Presentations

Topics can be provided in advance or on the day. Participants are assessed on their content and how they present it. The topic could be a challenge facing the relevant sector, or providing approaches or solutions to work-related problems.

Written assessments

This tests your ability to handle pressure, solve problems, and to communicate your ideas effectively. This time-pressured assessment is based on provided materials that focus on work-related situations.

Personality Tests

These tests analyse how you would handle various situations. It gives employers the assurance that you are a good fit and able to thrive in a certain position. This is normally supplementary to other elements in a job application.

Dos and don'ts for tests

- ✓ Get a good night's sleep the night before the assessment
- ✓ Before starting to write, familiarise yourself with how much you need to achieve in the allotted time
- ✓ Read questions carefully and don't answer until you are sure you understand them
- ✓ Balance speed with accuracy. Make sure to answer all the questions (even if some are incorrect). This is better than answering only a few of the questions correctly.

- x Don't waste time if you get stuck. Rather come back to the question at the end
- x Don't over-think the questions, and be honest.
- x Don't give the answer that you think the assessor is looking for.
- x Don't compare yourself with other candidates. Go at your own pace.

Psychometric assessments

'Psychometric' literally means 'measurement of the mind'

This assessment measures attributes like intelligence, aptitude, abilities and personality. It provides an employer with insight into how well you work with others, handles stress, and whether you would be able to cope with the intellectual demands of a specific job. The results form part of a bigger picture (including interviews, written applications and other background information).

The test could be online or in person.

Aptitude Tests

These determine your current ability and potential. Employers test whether you are capable of learning the required skills and what your natural strengths are.

Tests could for example focus on verbal and non-verbal communication, numerical skills or problem-solving abilities.

These are typically timed and in a multiple-choice format.

They could be online or in person.

Interviews

AN INVITATION TO AN INTERVIEW USUALLY MEANS THAT YOU MEET THE MAIN REQUIREMENTS FOR THE POSITION. THIS IS YOUR OPPORTUNITY TO STAND OUT FROM THE CROWD.

Preparation

You

Practise a short summary about yourself out loud. Try to include your skills, experience and why you are interested in the position. Articulate what you can offer and why you are a good candidate.

The job

Study the job description and prepare examples for the required competencies. Prepare to answer honestly if you do not have a specific skill that they require. Employers would rather have someone who is honest about their abilities than someone who claims to be able to do everything but can't follow through.

The employer

Know about the people you will meet with and research what the organisation does. Record any questions you would like to ask about things that are not clear.

The industry

Know about any trends or technological advances in the industry which may affect how work is currently done at the organisation. Formulate opinions and questions to demonstrate your interest in the sector. You can prepare further by working through practise interview questions.

The more you know about the organisation, the job, the interview process and what you have to offer, the more confident you will come across during the interview.

Ask this:

- What training or induction process is run for new recruits?
- How big is the team I would join?
- How is performance measured and how often?
- Something you noticed on their website that interested you but wasn't covered in the interview
- What are the next steps in the hiring process?

Use
the STAR
TECHNIQUE
to structure
your answers:

Situation – where, when, and with whom

Task – the task or project that you were working on

Action – the actions you performed in response to, or to complete the task

Result – the outcome you achieved, what you learned, what you would do differently

For example:

Q Tell me about a time when you resolved a conflict between people

Situation- In my residence there are two TVs and there are always tensions between those who watch sport and those who watch other programmes.

Task- I conducted a survey with everyone in the res to find out what they watched and at what times of the week.

Action- I collated the results and drew up a schedule for each of the TVs, trying to take into consideration big sporting fixtures.

Result- Although we didn't satisfy everyone, we did resolve the biggest tensions by planning ahead and students felt their concerns had been heard.

An interview gives you an opportunity to explain your CV and to see if you have the necessary attributes that will bring value to the organisation - your “soft skills”...

The interview

Q Tell me about yourself

Narrow it down by asking the interviewer if there is anything they want you to focus on. Be concise with your answer. Remember: they are not interested in you as a friend, but as a potential colleague.

Q Describe your strengths and areas of development

Provide real examples where you grappled with specific situations. Don't be tempted to give clichés like being a perfectionist and never giving up. Also, do not say that you are not good at something – rather describe how you can improve the skill.

Q Why did you apply for this position?

Relate your answer to your knowledge about the organisation and what the employer is looking for, based on your research. Try to convey an impression of informed interest and excitement about the work.

Q Be open, rather than defensive, if asked about gaps in your CV, setbacks or failures

Be prepared to account for gaps in your CV or failures in your academic record, because they may come up. It is more important to convey how you overcame them than to justify why they happened.

Q Brain-teasers

They are designed to test your ability to formulate a logical answer under pressure. Engage with the question and explain your thinking.

Virtual Interviews

Organisations often use virtual interviews for first-round interviews. Ask the Careers Service about booking the virtual interview room at their offices, which is free for UCT students. Your preparation should be the same as a face-to-face interview, but there are some specific considerations when it is virtual.

1. Username and profile picture

Make sure these are appropriate and professional.

2. Check your technology

Before your interview, check you have the right software, and test your internet connection, microphone and camera.

3. Dress for success

You still need to look professional. Dress the way you would for a face to face interview.

4. Prepare your environment

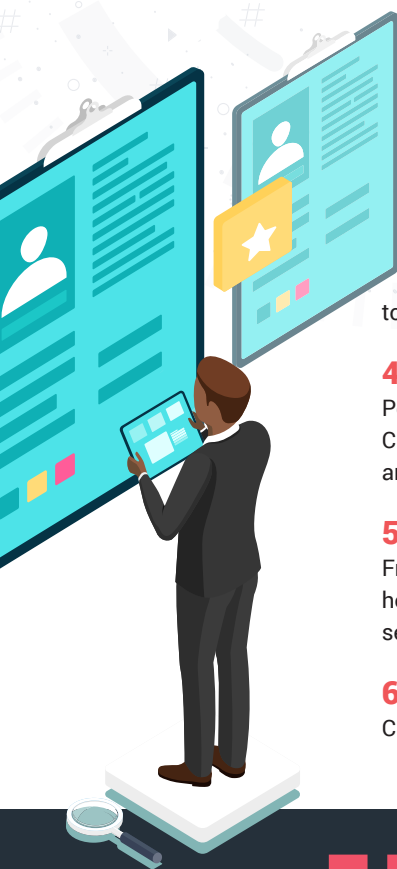

Position your computer and webcam so that a blank wall is behind you. Check that the lighting is good. Minimise distractions like TV, radio, pets and noisy housemates.

5. Eye contact

Frame the camera to include your upper body (not just the top of your head). Try to look at the camera and not at the screen. That way it will seem as though you are making real eye contact.

6. Do a practice run

Check that everything is working by doing a practice run with a friend.

77 Put a light behind your computer so your face is illuminated and avoid casting shadows on your face."

9.

Contracts & offer letters

THEY OFFERED YOU A JOB!

NOW WHAT?

When you have been offered a job, your new employer will present you with a contract and letter of offer. Some organisations have a letter of offer and a separate contract, whereas others incorporate these two into the same document.

Know your benefits

Benefits like medical aid and pension funds differ from company to company. It is vital that you ask your prospective employer about the details of your benefits. An example would be to ask whether the cost of medical aid would be deducted from your salary or to ask which medical aid the company prefers. Some employers allow their employees to choose the medical aid while others prescribe one.

Checklist for the newly employed:

- ✓ Has the contract also been signed by someone in the organisation?
- ✓ Do you have copies of the signed documents?
- ✓ Do you understand exactly what is required of you in the position?

This needs to be in your contract:

- ✓ Start date and duration of employment (contract position)
- ✓ A detailed role description and reporting lines
- ✓ Location and work hours
- ✓ Salary structure and when it will be paid
- ✓ Company benefits and eligibility rules
- ✓ Leave provisions
- ✓ Duties after work/overtime
- ✓ Notice period information
- ✓ Confidentiality agreement (where applicable)
- ✓ Clauses pertaining to breaches of contract
- ✓ In some cases, the relocation package
- ✓ It needs to comply to what is set out in the Basic Conditions of Employment Act (BCEA)

Entrepreneurship is a constantly expanding market within the African continent. In South Africa more than 50% of those who run their own businesses are young people. In a country where the unemployment rate keeps increasing, it is important to create your own opportunities beyond the corporate vision and domain.

Challenges

Even with the greatly expanding market and advancement in entrepreneurship in Africa, there are unprecedented issues. This includes the gap between male and female entrepreneurs and a need to open the market for present and upcoming female entrepreneurs. Many resources are scarce, like the financial help and knowledge that is only accessible to the advantaged. This is why initiatives that foster and promote growth within the entrepreneurial domain are so important.

Value of a degree

A degree gives you the knowledge that you will need to advance yourself. It is important to make the most of the skills and lessons you learn, as they might be applicable not only in your domain of study but also in other spheres of your life. Simple skills like time management, organisation and planning, to more intricate problem solving skills, can be applied in an entrepreneurial role. Entrepreneurship is not just about making money from passion, it is a risk embedded job in a complex industry.

The bottom line

Entrepreneurship is not static and fixed, but most companies have similar objectives. Whether it is a small business, a scalable start-up or a large entrepreneurial company, all these businesses have a life cycle that needs to be nurtured and groomed to prosper.

Why did you become an entrepreneur?

From a young age, I have always been running businesses – from selling baked goods to washing cars in my neighbourhood. I wasn't aware that I was going to take entrepreneurship seriously until I got to university. What changed for me, was that I identified a problem that I thought deserved a good and affordable solution. The problem propelled me into action.

Tell us about Jonga.

JONGA is a Cape Town based security technology company that develops and provides innovative and affordable community-based security systems to townships and other low-income communities. We exist to restore a sense of safety and security in communities by combating home burglaries with our technology. The JONGA product is a simple IoT premises-monitoring solution that gives you and the caring community control of your home security.

What are the key elements for starting and running a successful business?

To start a successful company, first identify a real-world problem. Understand the ins and outs of the problem by speaking to the deeply affected people. From there, build a solution around their needs. Too many people build cool solutions before looking at the problems that match them – which is the wrong approach. To run a successful business, surround yourself with people who are good at the things that you struggle with and have more experience than you have. A good team makes or breaks a business. A good board of advisors can also help that you don't get sidetracked by every opportunity that comes your way.

What advice would you give other entrepreneurs who are starting out?

Understand the ins and outs of the problem you're trying to solve and be obsessed with customers. There is no such thing as a product, there's only a product for a market. So understand the market. Secondly, find the right people for your team. The likelihood of success is very slim, and without an A team your chances are near to none. Lastly, always get different perspectives before making decisions and then, once a decision is made, don't look back.

You were part of Team Flex who won FLUX 2017?

It was my 2nd time participating, and I enjoyed it as much as the first time. The experience is valuable because the time constraint puts pressure on you to work quickly, make decisions as a team and then execute. I also enjoyed the assistance we received from the mentors who helped us polish our pitch. On top of that, it was great to hear all the ideas that other teams came up with.

What is the highlight of your journey so far?

Highlights have included meeting and learning from great business people in corporates (Santam, Deloitte, EdgeGrowth), government and other entrepreneurs working on solutions to big problems. I plan to start more businesses later on in my life, and these connections will be valuable in accelerating those ventures.

Dr Cherise Dunn South Africa Makes Africa Makes #3D4D

DEGREES:

PhD Medical Biochemistry
MSc Biochemistry
BSc Honours Biochemistry
BSc Microbiology and

Why and how did you become an entrepreneur?

I always used to wonder how I could better prepare young people – young women in particular – for a rapidly changing world. When I was concluding my doctoral degree at the Faculty of Health Sciences, 3D printing was becoming more apparent as a technology trend to me and my co-founder. As postgraduate students at UCT, we had been exposed to a world of possibilities and resources that many South Africans are not exposed to. We wanted to bridge the gap – to make fourth industrial revolution (4IR) technology more accessible to communities. In this way, we could assist them in embracing this technology and in creating jobs and potential sources of income and opportunity for themselves.

Tell us about The Africa Makes #3D4D Initiative and South Africa Makes.

It's a one-of-a-kind social hybrid enterprise that uses 3D printing for socio-economic and educational development (#3D4D). We encourage African youth to resourcefully solve their own community-specific challenges using human-centric 3D-printed solutions. The Africa Makes #3D4D Initiative is comprised of The Africa Makes Foundation, a non-profit company that empowers African youth with educational programmes to leverage the 4IR, such as CAD, 3D printing and human-centric entrepreneurship skills. South Africa Makes is the national for-profit organisation that offers corporate clients rapid prototyping and bespoke 3D-printing and additive manufacturing services.

What value do your qualifications add to your business or you as an entrepreneur?

Doctoral degrees equip students with three of the critical skills that the World Economic Forum reports are critical for success in the 4IR. Skills that are essential to support these abilities include relevant technological skills and higher cognitive and emotional intelligence skills when dealing with a challenge.

While working towards a doctoral degree, a candidate is presented with a problem and it is up to them to research and select the best technique to help solve that problem. Similarly, today's entrepreneurs face a variety of challenges but it is becoming more critical to make use of technology as well as the other cognitive skills to holistically solve the challenge at hand.

You used the Solution Space at GSB when starting out. How did it benefit you?

As research academics, my co-founder and I were often daunted by the gaps in our knowledge at running a technology-focused social impact enterprise. The Solution Space provided an environment where we could initiate conversations which then helped us think up the creative methods we now use to empower youth (in entrepreneurship and additive manufacturing skills).

What advice would you give to other entrepreneurs who are starting out?

Just start. You will never be as ready or as prepared as you would like to be but it is important to start your journey in order to learn from your failures. What is even better is to get used to 'failing' and to fail and fail fast. Learn from your mistakes along the way as those big ideas that change the world are never perfect from the outset.

Why did you become an entrepreneur?

My career as an entrepreneur began back in primary school when I sold sweets and used my mom's camera to take pictures of other pupils and teachers (which I then sold to them). When I was in high school, I developed two T-shirt clothing lines and sold cell phone accessories. Now, Snezar Timepiece is a new addition to my business ventures.

Snezar Timepiece credits you with 86400 seconds every day, which can be invested into pursuing your passion, realising your dreams and breaking boundaries to create a transformed and economically equitable society.

You participated in student Entrepreneurship Week 2018. What were the benefits?

I was able to showcase my watches to the large community of UCT. I got to engage with different students about my watches and it was good to connect with other student entrepreneurs who were also showcasing their products or services. It was also good for sales.

You studied Social Work. How does your degree contribute to your business or philosophy?

In the future I would like to be a great businessman. I would like to be able to mix social work and my passion for business in a way that would create positive societal change – especially in youth entrepreneurship development and poverty alleviation. I see myself using my social work degree and entrepreneurship to bring change in the lives of people and communities.

What advice would you give other entrepreneurs who are starting out?

Start where you are, with the resources you have. Use the time you have wisely and build your empire. Yes, you will have challenges and fail at some point, but do not allow that to kill your entrepreneurial spirit. Let failure be the motivation to push even harder – remember that failure is the price tag for success. Own your time and own your future.

What are your strengths?

I have always been very disciplined. I started my business with only pocket money and worked during school holidays. I draw a lot of strength and inspiration from my background. Although I don't come from a well-financed family, I am a dreamer and a believer. I continue to chase my dreams through the challenges and obstacles I face in my personal life and business. I know that success is on the other side of fear.

Why did you become an entrepreneur?

I have the heart of an adventurer and the mind of a businessman. As an entrepreneur I can combine these passions and design my own career path. It gets extremely tough and takes perseverance, but most days I don't even feel like I'm working. I create experiences for individuals around the world and to me THAT is worth it all. I love what I do so much that I am willing to work long hours for a reward which I may only reap in years to come.

Go.Explore is an online platform that sells purposeful travel experiences. We are redefining why and how young people are travelling. Our tech savvy offering makes it easy for youth to find, book and pay for experiences that help them gain skills, give back and seek self-discovery. The focus of Go.Explore is on six segments of purpose: skills acquisition, personal well-being, natural rehabilitation, social development, entrepreneurship and cultural consciousness.

We currently list 77 travel experiences in 26 countries. This makes us one of the biggest aggregators of purposeful travel packages in the world. Our focus is to expand brand awareness in the UK before moving into various markets in Europe.

You completed the PG Diploma in Entrepreneurship. What value did it add to you and/or your business?

The course taught me how to network, work in a group and manage people. It taught me how to strategise and what hard work and long hours truly are. It is the most true-to-life course imaginable and I consider it to have been a life lesson and eye-opener – more than just a diploma that I studied towards.

CONTINUOUSLY
STEP BACK AND

WHAT THE MOST IMPORTANT NEXT
STEP IS TO GET YOUR COMPANY
TO WHERE IT NEEDS TO BE.

What would you say are the key elements for starting and running a successful business?

The key element for starting a business is identifying a real problem and to be truly passionate about solving this problem. Being an entrepreneur is hard work, and in order to stay committed you have to know that you are working towards something real.

You need to understand and test your assumptions whilst adapting to your customers' wants and needs. Engage with your customers consistently and listen to them. Above all else, work hard and smart.

What advice would you give other entrepreneurs who are starting out?

It's easy to get caught up in the excitement of starting a business and to waste your time on less important things. Continuously step back and ask yourself what the most important next step is to get your company to where it needs to be, and prioritise accordingly.

What are the two most important lessons you've learnt while becoming an entrepreneur?

1. Networking is crucial.

I've made valuable connections through individuals that opened up their network after a follow up email or coffee meeting.

2. Be open to every opportunity, then figure out whether or not it's worth it your time.

New Job, New Work Life

TETLANYO LEKALAKE IS A MARKETING GRADUATE AND CURRENTLY THE MARKETING LEAD FOR THE MIDDLE EAST, AFRICA AND TURKEY AT FACEBOOK IN DUBLIN. SHE SHARES ADVICE ON HOW TO TRANSITION TO YOUR NEW JOB AND WORKING LIFE.

When I left UCT just over five years ago, I was relieved and excited to leave behind the late night studying, the hunts for past papers and, of course, the dreaded exams! What I didn't expect was that the corporate world would be as much of a jungle as it is.

Once an Ikey, always a tiger. That was what they'd say... back in my day. So from tiger to tiger, here are two pieces of advice of how to transition into your first job out of university.

Firstly, find your why

Simon Sinek has thrown a lot of shade at millennials, but he was right on the money with this one. After I got my Bachelor in Business Sciences, I moved abroad to Dublin to work on the Jameson brand at Irish Distillers Pernod Ricard – my first job out of university. As the Irish would say, “The craic was 90” (translation: It was great fun). I was doing what I loved, working on an iconic brand and getting free Jameson all the time. Who could complain? Me, apparently.

After about a year into the job, I realised I wanted something different. In particular, I wanted a company whose mission and culture I could connect to deeply. So, after about a year, I moved to work for Facebook and I have worked there for nearly four years. After moving to Facebook, I co-founded a non-profit organisation called the African Professional Network of Ireland (APNI). I also co-founded and currently lead the the Dublin chapter of an employee resource group called Black@

DUBLIN

Facebook. This work is done on top of my day job. But, rather than draining me, I find that it actually fuels me. Get clarity on your passions and purpose. It may take time, but it will be worth it.

Secondly, stay humble

Resist the urge to try and prove how smart you are. When you enter your first job, happily accept supervision and take your time as you master routine tasks. Observe what matters to the organisation's leadership and how your immediate team operates. And, as you focus on increasing your technical expertise and ability, don't forget to make a conscious effort to build a strong internal network of relationships.

I recently heard Facebook's Vice President for Global Marketing Solutions, Carolyn Everson, say to an audience: "Passion is when you find yourself, purpose is when you lose yourself". And that's my advice in a nutshell.

Discover what you're here on this earth to do, and focus on being of service to others. It's never too soon to begin.

CAPE TOWN

Preparing for the transition to work while still a student

INGRID VAN DER MERWE, HEAD, CAREERS ADVISORY AT THE UCT CAREERS SERVICE, GIVES 4 TIPS TO GIVE YOU THE EDGE IN THE STUDENT/WORK TRANSITION.

1. Research organisations

Knowing as much as you can about an organisation will help you to make the adjustment, as well as enhance any job applications you make.

2. Do vac work at organisations you are keen on

Some have formal internships you apply for, but approach them with a cover letter explaining your availability and your keenness to work for them and add your CV. This is how many students secure vac work. This experience gives you an idea of what an organisation is like first hand.

3. Ask employers about the first year of work

Many employers visit campus to give presentations or for expos. Ask them what sort of mistakes new recruits make in their first few months. Forewarned is forearmed!

4. Conduct informational interviewing

Seek out recent graduates on LinkedIn that work for organisations you are eyeing. Ask if you can take them to coffee, or ask some questions electronically, and find out what it is like to work at the organisation and what their challenges are. You'll learn a lot more about a company this way than on a website. Find helpful tips about informational interviewing here: www.careers.uct.ac.za/cs/getting-started

ADVERTORIAL

ARTICLES AT COX YEATS ATTORNEYS

Cox Yeats is a medium sized law firm based in Durban. Non-Durbanites have a misperception that Durban is a slow-paced, easy going holiday town. This is certainly not true for the legal profession there, especially at Cox Yeats.

Make your first application to Cox Yeats Attorneys. I came across Cox Yeats in my first year of studying law and decided to apply for its vacation work programme. I spent a week at the firm, rotating each day between the specialist teams and gaining insight into the life of being a professional at the firm.

After that week, I was hooked. Not only was I certain that I wanted to pursue a career as an attorney, but if I had my way, I was certain that I wanted that career to begin at Cox Yeats.

Working at the firm

As a lawyer at Cox Yeats, you would be just as busy and stimulated as your peers at firms in Johannesburg or Cape Town (plus you will get to work in a building with one of the best sea views in town).

No matter in which team you serve articles, you are sure to learn and grow under the very best attorneys over the two years. You certainly won't spend two years upskilling at the photocopier machine.

Rewards and recognition

Cox Yeats is a firm where you are rewarded and recognised for your hard work, even as a candidate attorney. You are not just a small fish in a large pond of candidate attorneys - you are an individual who is valued by the firm, and who the firm wants to see succeed in the legal profession. Personally, I find it incredibly motivating to work at a firm that is willing to put in the time to help you grow into the very best attorney you can be.

With one full year of articles under my belt, I can proudly say that I have learnt a huge amount and that I have been involved in an array of exciting matters. If you are keen to join us for your articles, submit your application online as soon as possible! If all goes well, I will see you on the other side.

TIPS FROM CAREERS
ADVISOR AZOLA RALO.

Your first 90 days

Understand your role and responsibilities

Meet your line manager and all other key players to get a better understanding of what your role in the organisation is. Get their detailed input on what they expect from you. Understand how your work fits into the organisation's vision and annual goals.

Meet key roleplayers

Ask for performance expectations

This is so that you can match your pace with the rest of the office. Begin the performance discussion with your line manager early, and continue it on an ongoing basis. Set tasks or milestones for your first 90 days. Ensure they are SMART (Specific, Measurable, Attainable, Realistic, Time bound) goals. Get your supervisor's feedback and buy-in on your 90-day plan to ensure alignment. Also use this time to identify and reflect on your areas of development. At the end of your 90 days, you should have a lot of valuable information that can help develop your annual performance goals.

Check in with your supervisor and ask about your performance

Solicit Feedback and Coaching

Try to have frequent check-ins with your supervisor in the first 90 days. During these check-ins, directly solicit feedback on your performance and ask questions. If one does not already exist at your workplace, create a check-in template to maximise your check-in time.

Set SMART tasks and milestones

Professional Development

As a new employee it is important to assess your new role by identifying your areas of strength and areas of development. Identifying your areas of development allows you to explore which resources you will need for professional development. Use your first 90 days to develop a plan on how you will leverage your strengths and mediate your areas of development to successfully fulfil your obligations in the role.

Leverage your strengths

DATA SCIENCE

In what way does your qualifications relate to your work?

Nowadays, it's becoming more and more common to not end up in a field directly related to what you studied. But, there is always a connection, an evolution. Your career does not start with your first job – it starts with what you decide to study. For me, it was Molecular Biology. I completed a Master's degree in Science. I then pursued my interest and passion for Maths and Science education and was able to use my content knowledge and skills in an applied field in developing education technology.

My strong background in research and the scientific method has influenced every part of my work life and career trajectory so far: from how I approach day-to-day tasks, to being continually exploratory in understanding and growing in the field of data science.

What are the key skills that have contributed to your success so far?

I see myself as being scientifically creative and creatively scientific. As a Data Scientist, I find that you not only need to embrace the scientist aspects of problem solving (analytical and technical skills), but need to be creative in your critical thinking and innovative in your approach to really add value. Learning how to communicate effectively to a wide range of audiences has also been instrumental in my career so far.

How best should students use their time at university to give themselves a competitive edge in your field?

Learn how to learn. Learn how to find resources. This may sound simple, but it's not about what you learn at university but how you learn it. Challenge yourself to think and figure out how you best learn as an individual. As a data scientist in a field that is rapidly evolving, you'll have to be a life-long learner. Embracing this from as early on as possible will set you in good stead. And lastly, be interested in what you are doing.

LEARNING HOW TO COMMUNICATE
EFFECTIVELY TO A WIDE RANGE OF AUDIENCES HAS BEEN INSTRUMENTAL IN MY CAREER SO FAR.

DATA SCIENCE

How did you get your current job?

I got my current job through the accumulation of experience from my previous jobs and the knowledge and skills that I have picked up during tertiary education. When applying for a job, you need to identify these skills and, wherever possible, give an example of how you have implemented it practically in the past. These skills and practical implementations should continuously be added to your resume, giving a true reflection of the value you can add to a business.

What are your day-to-day activities?

My day-to-day activities consist of a quick stand up session within an agile team of data scientists each morning, summarising the progress or pitfalls encountered during the previous day's work. This helps us to keep track of the state of projects and learn from one another. There is also a part of my day that I dedicate to research within the framework of the current project.

One needs to be up to date with the latest methods and technologies when implementing solutions, since these will be questioned and analysed after implementation. There are many ways to solve a problem, but you need to be able to justify why a particular approach is best suited for the problem at hand. Fortunately, I also receive training at work with regards to cloud infrastructure and how to best use these facilities in order to build prediction models.

Do you have any advice for a new graduate entering the world of work?

Do extensive research and, if possible, some internship work at a particular job of interest – even if it requires you to beg a company to let you work for free for a few weeks. This will show you which skills you would need to acquire at university. Speaking to leaders in an industry and maintaining a relationship in order to learn from them is also extremely advantageous.

With regards to data science: build your own repository and explore different models using various datasets. At university you have the time to explore and access to vast resources (lecturers, books, datasets, etc.) – make full use of them. This repository that you have built during university will have practical uses afterwards, and it will help if you do not have any working experience. It could certainly be the centre of discussion during any interview process.

DESIGN

How did you obtain your current position?

Each step has led to the next. I began in a marketing position at an art gallery. I took on the layout design of marketing collateral at a later stage and chose to pursue graphic design as a result. I moved into a full-time graphic design position at a company that develops customer experience strategies in 2017. I was introduced to UX while working in this position. I've had a lot of support navigating my way into UX, and I have recently started a position as a UX Designer, so my journey into UXD has only just begun.

In what way does your qualification relate to your work, whether directly or indirectly?

I have completed short courses in UX Design with GetSmarter and the Interaction Design Foundation, among others. I definitely use these qualifications more directly than my Fine Art qualification. That being said, studying Fine Art began to enable me to think conceptually and articulate concepts, and those have proven to be valuable skills throughout my development.

In retrospect, what advice can you give to students about how to approach their own career development journeys?

Some people have a clear idea of their career paths (which is great), but for those who don't, the uncertainty can be challenging. Focus on identifying the next step and continuously develop skills. Invest in education to create opportunities and build a support network, which can be particularly valuable in a multidisciplinary environment.

INVEST IN EDUCATION TO CREATE OPPORTUNITIES AND BUILD A SUPPORT NETWORK, WHICH CAN BE PARTICULARLY VALUABLE IN A MULTIDISCIPLINARY ENVIRONMENT.

DESIGN

In what way does your qualification relate to your work, whether directly or indirectly?

I studied International Relations, so directly, it doesn't. But the skills in research and writing provided a solid foundation for me to learn the new skills that I need at work. I also do a fair amount of research on the job as projects are not always related to a field in which I have extensive pre-existing knowledge, so the research and writing sometimes reminds me of studying.

What are your day-to-day activities?

This varies depending on the stage of the project. Many aspects of my work are collaborative, so my days include a mixture of meetings with members of my departmental and project teams and can include research and writing (which is quite similar to my student days). It also involves building the structure of short courses, designing the content components, and developing the content of the short courses that we offer in collaboration with our university partners.

Do you have any advice for a new graduate entering the world of work?

Do your research, but don't be afraid to ask questions when you genuinely don't know something. There will always be someone who has been around longer than you and those people are usually good sources of information when you are confused.

I DO A FAIR AMOUNT OF RESEARCH ON THE JOB AS PROJECTS ARE NOT ALWAYS RELATED TO A FIELD IN WHICH I HAVE EXTENSIVE PRE-EXISTING KNOWLEDGE, SO THE RESEARCH AND WRITING SOMETIMES REMINDS ME OF STUDYING.

TECHNOLOGY

How did you get your current job?

As part of the BCom Information Systems programme, we have a Software Development (SD) project in which we work closely with industry sponsors. My team's industry sponsor liked my work ethic and took me on as a Junior Software Developer after the end of this project. After building some skills, I decided to join a local start-up. I am currently working for a Fortune 500 enterprise.

What are your day-to-day activities?

I start my mornings by sending progress updates and responding to emails and customer queries. I then check in with the engineering leads to find out how we are tracking and uncover any blockers. In the afternoons I plan the future of our product in terms of people, purpose and process. In the evenings I communicate via video call with the broader parts of the organisation (not based in Cape Town).

Do you have any advice for a new graduate entering the world of work?

There are a few things you can easily practice in varsity that can propel your skills development.

- Being on time makes you a person that can be counted on. Try be on time for everything you do for at least 30 days.
- Prepare for meetings or work groups. This will make you cover ground quicker and, in many cases, you will be ahead of schedule.
- If you don't know, ask. If you can get comfortable with asking questions now, you will excel in the future.
- Listen more than you speak. Listening to different points of view is one of the good ways to becoming knowledgeable about something.

BEING ON TIME MAKES YOU A PERSON THAT CAN BE COUNTED ON. TRY BE ON TIME FOR EVERYTHING YOU DO FOR AT LEAST 30 DAYS.

TECHNOLOGY

What does a Scrum Master do?

What I do has nothing to do with rugby. As a Scrum Master I use Agile methodology to support technology product owners, lead developers and project managers in visualising progress, creating a transparent product backlog and maximising the project output.

In what way does your qualification(s) relate to your work, whether directly or indirectly?

A Social Science degree sets the foundation for any role you might play, both professionally and personally. Humanities opens doors to theoretical learning and self-exploration in relation to coursework. Professionally, it contributes to how I interact with those around me and gives me insight into how my interaction with my teams encourages high performance.

What are the key skills that has contributed to your success so far?

Soft skills are essential for a progressive, forward-thinking workplace. Because of my degree in Social Science, I find that skills like adaptability, analytical thinking, collaboration and leadership (based on a passion for understanding people) has become second nature for me.

With the rise of AI, businesses require a human touch, empathic communication, creativity and critical thinking as they cannot be easily replaced. It's important to undertake a degree in a faculty that caters to professions which have not even been created yet.

How best should students use their time at university to give themselves a competitive edge in your field?

Be consistent, persistent, bold and brave. As a Social Science major, you have personal skills that are indispensable. Neville Isdel – previous CEO and one of the most influential leaders of Coca-Cola – is a former Social Work graduate who claims to owe much of his success to the personal and interactive skills learnt through his degree.

Use your time to network. Never fear venturing beyond what you think you are capable of. Going from being a Public Servant for the Western Cape Government to recently settling in a Scrum Master role, I'm evidence that anything is possible.

SOCIAL IMPACT

How did you obtain your current position?

I built up my CV during my postgraduate studies through part time consulting work as a data analyst. I found clients by networking, emailing relevant companies and phoning key competitors in the field to get advice – I was really putting myself out there.

What are your day-to-day activities?

I answer environmental research questions for clients in government, industry and the private sector. Day-to-day activities mostly involve fun with data: collecting it, gathering it, cleaning it, analysing it, visualising it, and communicating it through various medias. I also take part in collaborations and discussions about creative ways to solve research problems.

How best should students use their time at university to give themselves a competitive edge in your field?

Become a jack of all trades instead of mastering one. Spend less time trying to become an expert by gathering loads of information on one specific field and spend more time learning a variety of skills that will allow you to synthesise information from any field and apply it to solving a problem. Develop your portfolio (not just your CV). Start a blog, compete in data science competitions, make data art and post it to Instagram – do anything to develop your brand.

Do you have any advice for a new graduate entering the world of work?

Be ambitious and radical in your job search. Don't apply to job listings with a generic copy-paste email body and the same CV. Spend time tailoring your CV and cover letter to the specific job. Phone CEOs, arrange meetings and walk into the offices of companies you want to work at – network!

SPEND LESS TIME TRYING TO BECOME AN EXPERT BY GATHERING LOADS OF INFORMATION ON ONE SPECIFIC FIELD AND SPEND MORE TIME LEARNING A VARIETY OF SKILLS...

SOCIAL IMPACT

How did you secure your internship?

The opportunity for my internship arose when I joined UNASA UCT and volunteered as a tutor for the South African Schools Model United Nations (SASMUN). I was incredibly involved with the conference on the day, and as a result the secretary general of the UNASA national office approached me and asked whether I would want to work for them at a national level.

I proceeded to go through an interview process and submitted my CV and Cover Letter, after which I was accepted.

What were your day-to-day activities?

My day-to-day activities include contacting schools and asking them whether they would be interested in being part of the Model United Nations South Africa.

I also go to various schools in Cape Town and tell them about the benefits of being part of SASMUN.

What advice do you have for students on how to maximise their time at university to prepare for the world of work?

I definitely think it is necessary for students to build up their speaking skills before they enter the working world. The working world requires you to interact with a number of people who all approach situations differently. If you have worked on your confidence and speaking skills, you will be better equipped to interact with each situation in a mature manner and navigate the working world more comfortably.

WHEN YOU WORK ON YOUR CONFIDENCE AND YOUR SPEAKING SKILLS IT ALLOWS YOU TO INTERACT WITH EACH SITUATION IN A MATURE MANNER AND NAVIGATE THE WORKING WORLD MORE EASILY.

ESTATE PLANNING TRUSTS WILLS ESTATES BENEFICIARY FUNDS

THE FIDUCIARY INSTITUTE OF SOUTHERN AFRICA

PEOPLE | PLANET | PROFITS

Are you a law or accounting graduate?
Do you have a highly developed sense of ethics?
Do you want to help others while making money?

A range of interesting careers in fiduciary practice awaits you.

“Fiduciary” implies a sense of duty and care – which is what you will have as a fiduciary practitioner whether you are in trusts, wills, estate planning or administration, or tax advice.

What must I do?

- Become a candidate member of the Fiduciary Institute of Southern Africa (FISA)
- Then consider doing the Advanced Diploma in Estate & Trust Administration through the University of Free State (distance learning)
- Following which you can apply to FISA for the ultimate designation of Fiduciary Practitioner of SA® (FPSA®)

Find out more at www.fisa.net.za or contact secretariat@fisa.net.za

RBB Economics offers career opportunities for entry level economists

Who are we?

RBB Economics is an independent economics consultancy specialising in competition policy. We are one of the largest competition economics practices in the world, with offices in London, Brussels, The Hague, Johannesburg, Melbourne, Madrid, Stockholm, Paris and Düsseldorf. Our work concerns the behaviour of firms with market power, and covers issues such as mergers, vertical agreements, joint ventures, price setting and the abuse of dominant positions.

We work in dedicated, multi-national teams which combine the experience and expertise relevant to each case. This enables us to respond to our clients' needs in a focused and flexible manner. We offer a hands-on service, supporting and working in partnership with our clients and their legal advisers.

Our working environment

The work at RBB is stimulating, challenging, demanding and rewarding. We give our staff the opportunities they need to flourish professionally, including early responsibility for our work product and to engage directly with clients and their legal advisors as well as with competition authorities.

However, we always offer our staff support, guidance and career progression advice from more experienced team members.

RBB is meritocratic, not hierarchical and offers a supportive and highly sociable working environment that adds greatly to the enjoyment of working here.

Our clients

RBB have built up strong relationships with clients from all areas of industry and commerce as well as with all of the major law firms specialising in competition law. Over the years we have been involved in hundreds of the most high-profile competition cases around the world.

Our expertise is wide ranging, from industries such as energy, mining and steel, to the manufacturing of sophisticated medical equipment, financial services and sports rights.

Our requirements

We're looking for exceptional, highly motivated economists to join our multi-national team. If you have outstanding academic credentials and flourish in the face of complex, intellectually challenging issues then we would love to hear from you.

Qualifications are usually to postgraduate level, preferably with an interest in industrial organisation. We are looking for consultants with a range of quantitative and analytical skills, and the ability to communicate complex economic concepts in a clear concise style.

To apply, please send your CV with a covering letter explaining why you would like to join RBB Economics and your transcripts to vacancies@rbbecon.com
