Staying Visible Between Print Editions

By Anesa K. Chastain Jones - Advertising Insights with Anesa
Oklahoma's Choice Weekly

We are very excited about our next printed edition coming out April 30th, and we truly appreciate the businesses that support local print advertising. Print is still one of the best ways to build name recognition and credibility in a community, and we are proud to be bringing the printed edition back each month.

But we also want to talk about something that is becoming more and more important for businesses, staying visible between print editions.

Advertising Is About Being Seen Consistently

One of the most important things to understand about advertising is that it usually doesn't work from just one ad or one appearance. Advertising works from consistency and repetition.

People are busy. They see hundreds of business names every week. The businesses they remember are the ones they see over and over again, not just once in a while.

That's where digital advertising comes in.

Digital helps businesses stay in front of customers between printed editions so their name is still being seen throughout the month.

Different People See Advertising in Different Ways

Some people prefer reading the printed paper.
Some people read the digital edition.
Some people see things on social media.
Some people search online when they need a phone number or service.

Most customers don't just use one of these, they use a combination of all of them. That means the more places your business appears, the more likely people are to remember you when they need your product or service.

Print and Digital Work Together

Print and digital are not competitors. They are tools that work best together.

Print gives your business a strong local presence and credibility.
Digital keeps your business visible between print editions and helps reinforce your message.

ADVERTISING INSIGHTS with Anesa

Anesa K. Chastain Jones is the General Manager of Oklahoma's Choice Weekly. The creative force behind the paper's bold print and digital direction. With decades of experience in marketing, advertising, and design, she knows how to turn attention into action. In Advertising Insights with Anesa, she shares the truth about what works, what doesn't, and how to make your advertising actually move people.

Because around here, good ads don't just run, they perform.

Anesa K. Chastain Jones
Oklahoma's Choice Weekly
General Manager

oklahomaschoiceweekly.blogspot.com

When customers see your business name in multiple places, it builds familiarity, and familiarity builds trust.

Staying in Front of Customers Matters

Between now and the April 30th printed edition, people in our communities will still be:

Eating at restaurants

Hiring contractors

Buying vehicles

Opening bank accounts

Shopping locally

Calling service companies

Planning events

Making everyday buying decisions

Advertising helps make sure that when those decisions are made, your business is one of the names people remember.

Final Thought

There is no single "right way" to advertise, but one thing has always been true:

The businesses that stay visible are the businesses people remember.
And the businesses people remember are the businesses they call.

That is why print and digital advertising together can be such a powerful combination for local businesses.

HAPPY Easter

Easter egg coloring tips

Many families will soon be partaking in a springtime tradition that has spanned generations: coloring Easter eggs.

While eggs once symbolized fertility and rebirth in Pagan celebrations, they have since come to be associated with Christianity. History.com says eggs historically were not allowed to be eaten during the 40 days of Lent. Subsequently, they were painted and decorated to mark the end of penance and enjoyed as a treat on Easter Sunday. Britannica also notes that the egg has come to represent the tomb Christ escaped, much like a chick breaks out of its shell.

Although it may seem like coloring Easter eggs already is a relatively simple project, there are steps that can simplify the process and make eggs more unique.

- Remove eggs from the refrigerator. Prior to dyeing eggs, bring them to room temperature by removing them from the fridge about 20 minutes before it's time to start boiling. This minimizes the chances that the egg shells will crack.
- Use a pin. Poking a tiny hole into the large ends of the eggs before boiling can release the air pressure inside and prevent the eggs from bursting during boiling.
- Keep vinegar on hand. Vinegar is the key to vibrant eggs because it acts as a mordant, which helps the dye bond to the shell. Without vinegar, the egg colors will be pale.
- Use a whisk. Instead of potentially breaking eggs when dropping them into dye with fingers or spoons, place the egg inside the wires of a kitchen whisk.
- Use protective gear. Children tend to get messy when coloring eggs. Make sure they are dressed in clothes that can get splattered. Also, wearing kitchen dishwashing gloves or latex gloves will keep hands from being stained by dye. Cover tables or counters with a water-resistant sheet or tablecloth to further prevent staining.

Experiment with different dyeing methods. Wrap rubber bands or string around the eggs before dipping to create geometric shapes and white lines. For a soft, marbled look, mix dye in a tray with shaving cream and roll the egg through. For a speckled appearance, place eggs in a container with dry rice and drops of dye and then shake.

- Create a drying station. Letting eggs dry on a paper towel or newspaper can contribute to smears and white spots. Instead, poke flat-head pins into a foam board. Rest the eggs on the pins while they dry.
- Create some sheen. When the eggs are completely dry, rubbing them with a drop of vegetable oil on a cloth will shine them up nicely.

Eggs are a traditional component of Easter festivities and decor. A few easy tweaks can make the process go more smoothly and result in vivid and creative eggs.

Hop on these tips for a great Easter egg hunt

Egg hunts are a traditional component of many people's Easter celebrations. Children often delight in searching for eggs around the house or in the backyard. Egg hunts are so popular that they have become a component of many town-sponsored festivities. In fact, the White House hosts its annual Easter Egg Roll each year.

There are many ways to make Easter egg hunts more enjoyable and productive for participants of all ages. Try these "eggcellent" ideas.

- Designate a clear hunting area. Young children can grow frustrated searching for eggs in large areas. Set parameters for the search area that are manageable depending on the ages of the children participating. If you'll be in a large yard or field, tape off the search area perimeter.
- Vary the prizes. Candy, candy and more candy seems to be the name of the game on Easter. But too many sweets can lead to stomach aches for young Easter celebrants. Instead, mix and match the prizes contained in the eggs. Candy can be in some, money in others, and perhaps small toys in a few eggs. Another clever idea is to mix the egg hunt with charades. Put charade prompts in some eggs so that kids have to act out what they read inside for added fun.

- Special privilege egg. Hide one egg that gives the finder the opportunity for a special honor. It may include getting the first slice of the holiday ham or being able to choose a movie that the entire family watches together after dinner.
- Label eggs for equity. When there are children across a wide range of ages, label the eggs with the children's names or utilize a color-coded system to ensure that everyone has an equal shot at finding eggs.

- Keep a master list. It can be hard to remember where each egg is hidden, so keep a running list of where they are or take photos with a phone of the hiding spots. This way you're not left to discover a chocolate-filled egg teeming with ants come summertime.
- Make custom baskets. Children will need something to carry their eggs. Prior to the egg hunt, let them decorate bags or baskets with Easter trinkets for custom creations.

Easter egg hunts are a time-honored tradition. The opportunities for fun are endless when families plan accordingly.
