Taylor, Texas

Countryside of Taylor

Nestled in the heart of Central Texas and on the periphery of the Texas Hill Country, Taylor embodies a profound sense of serenity. This tranquility is woven into the fabric of the town, resonating through its picturesque lakes, undulating hills, and a remarkably exquisite municipal golf course. The course is enveloped by the embrace of hills and the natural world, adding to the overall allure of Taylor.

A BRIEF HISTORY OF TAYLOR

1876: The Texas Land Company conducted a lot auction in preparation for the impending arrival of the International-Great Northern Railroad. Taylorville was named after railroad official, Edward Moses Taylor.

1878: Taylorville had approximately 1,000 residents and 32 businesses.

1879: Fire destroyed 29 of the 32 businesses leading to a rapid recovery with more substantially constructed buildings.

1882: Taylor, Bastrop, and Houston Railway reached the community of Taylorville. The town was incorporated with a mayor-council government.

1883: Public school system replaced many of the private schools.

1892: Taylorville was renamed to "Taylor"

1890: Two banks and the first savings and loan institution in Texas. Electric company, cotton compress, and several newspapers were among the growth.

1900: A water line from the San Gabriel River, volunteer fire department, entertainment, and a yearly fair.

1980s - current: Revitalization of downtown with participation in historic preservation.
