spray roses

Although very similar to the classic single-stemmed rose in many ways, spray roses are beautiful and versatile flowers that can be used in a wide variety of arrangements and bouquets. The main difference between the two types is the stems: while the traditional rose contains a single bloom, spray roses can have several heads along the laterals, giving them a “spray” effect.

garden roses

Although just as timeless and beautiful as the traditional rose, what sets a garden rose apart is its bloom shape, scent, and high petal count. Compared to the traditional rose, with its characteristic bloom shape, the cup of a garden rose is much wider and brimming with petals.

carnations

With a long and rich history dating all the way back to ancient Greece, the carnation is the flower of gods and kings. The reason for this is that its name is thought to come from the words for crown or coronation.

garden flowers

We call Garden flowers to our selection of the Chrysanthemum family.

The Chrysanthemum is a member of the Asteraceae (Compositae) family, related to dahlias, sunflowers, marigolds, zinnias, and cosmos. Each bloom is made of hundreds of tiny flowers called florets. The plant ranges in size from a common small cushion mum to the giant spider mums, and they bloom in almost every color of the rainbow: yellow, lavender, pink, purple, red, bronze, orange, and white.

They are beautiful, convenient, always on season and cost effective!
