SYNOPSIS

Work occupies a significant portion of our lives, yet many people experience it merely as a source of income, pressure, or achievement. In this talk J Krishnamurti deals with "the whole field of man's endeavour to better himself, not only in the technological world but also psychologically." He discusses how our current way of working and striving for career progress is filled with conflict, urging listeners to look at how we earn a living without destroying our psychological well-being.
