Catalogue of Ship's Photographs 1998

Harrison Line

The Harrison Line story began in Liverpool in 1830, with sailing ships trading to France with coal and returning with brandy and wines from the Charente region. Although the shareholders' shipowning interests were not formalised until 1884 with the formation of the Charente Steam-Ship Company, their management and operational activities were already being undertaken by Thomas and James Harrison, which commenced in 1853. This remains the structure of the Company today.

As sail gave way to steam, the Firm's trading interests were extended to various parts of the world which, more recently, have included South America, the West Indies, Mexico, Southern and East Africa – and these trades were developed into today's containerised services.

Harrison's diversified into worldwide bulk carrier operations in 1973 and the Group took an interest in LPG and Chemical tankers a decade later.

Charente and Harrisons remain privately owned and British, and our core business is still owning and operating ships. In the last one hundred and seventy years some 334 vessels have served the Firm and indeed, their country – in the two world wars 53 ships were lost and 536 Harrison Seafarers perished. Throughout the years the Firm has managed to collect pictures or photographs of many – although sadly, not all – of those ships and these are displayed and archived together with a wealth of documents, ephemera and memorabilia in a small museum that we maintain in our Head Office in Liverpool.

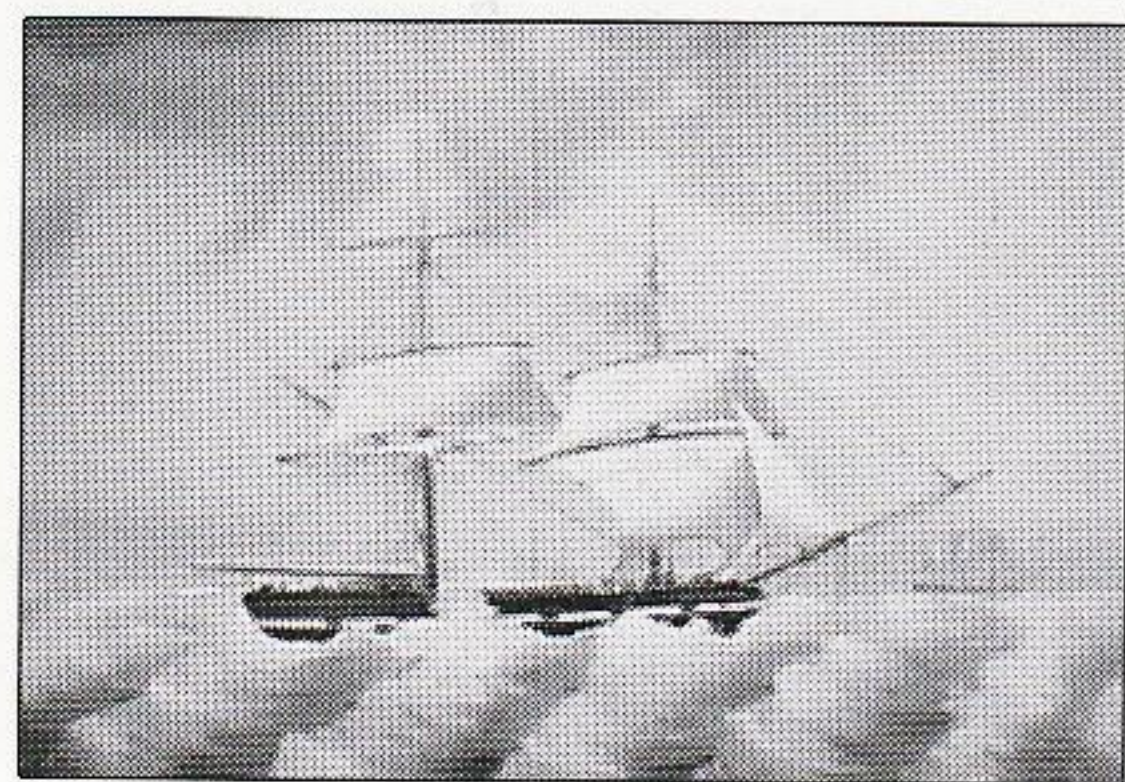

This catalogue illustrates those vessels for which black and white negatives are readily available, from which we are happy to provide prints on request. We do need to make a charge however – as indeed we do for this catalogue – to cover administrative and printing costs and to maintain our museum. These charges will inevitably be reviewed from time to time. Additionally, we may have other pictures or prints on record for which negatives are not available, but, where possible, copies can be supplied – although costs will vary.

If you wish to place an order, please complete the order form included with this catalogue.
