FEC testing available in-store!

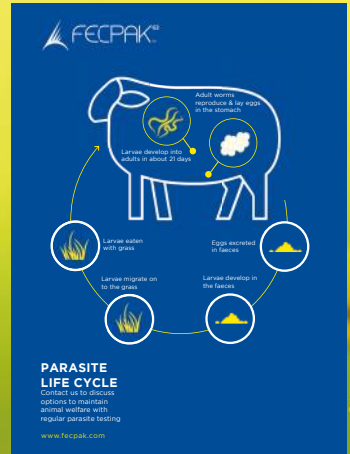

Animals face risks all year round from worms, therefore integrating regular FEC testing using our in-house FECPAKG2 service, will enable you to take control of managing worms in your animals throughout the year.

Testing regularly and knowing your worm status can save you time and money, increase animal weight gain as well as reducing the risk of worm resistance developing.

During Spring, many of you will have lambs on the ground and you may well be thinking about Nematodirus, the first worm that lambs encounter. This can be a particularly damaging parasite resulting in high number of deaths and performance loss.

Although FEC testing can be limiting for Nematodirus, as disease can occur before any eggs appear, it's definitely still worth testing during this time of year as you may find other worms which could affect your choice of wormer.

If you want to take charge of managing worms in your animals, visit us in-store to pick up a test pack with everything you need to collect your samples. Return to store and the results can be in your email inbox the same day!
