Meet the Instructor

Name: Macey Miller

Hometown: Burlington, Vermont

How long have you been in the industry?

I've been teaching yoga seven years and practicing yoga for 13 years.

Do you have any yoga "hot takes?"

1. There is no such thing as being "good" at yoga.
2. The slower the class the harder.
3. True strength is taking rest.

Do you have a playlist for class?

Yes! The playlist is a variety of music but it mimics the flow of class. It starts more meditative, then becomes upbeat as the class progresses and we build heat. As we cool down, the music calms as well. My personal favorites genres to throw in are hip-hop, R&B and deep house.

When you're not instructing, what can people find you doing?

Taking a yoga class, of course. Also, bringing my dog, Squirt, to the dog park, traveling and bopping around North Hills, because I also teach at Midtown Yoga Raleigh.

How has yoga impacted your life on and off the mat?

Yoga has always been an important part of my life. My mother practiced yoga, so I grew up surrounded by its sayings and mantras. I didn't begin practicing myself until college, when I turned to yoga to help manage my anxiety. Yoga offers a space for self-reflection and connection, while also providing practical tools for handling stress and anxiety. Techniques like breathwork are especially valuable—I often use them off the mat to stay calm and centered throughout the day.
