STONE
FOREST

Stone Forest was founded by Michael Zimmer in 1989. Michael's relationship with stone and water began in his early 20s when he worked as a climbing and river guide. Fascinated with the beauty of the rock cliffs he was scaling, he began sculpting blocks of stone in his spare time. After "living the life" as a guide for 10 years, his mother told him to get a real job. Mike figured she was probably right and started thinking about how he could take what he loved about being in the wilderness and somehow bring it into people's homes and gardens. Stone Forest was born.

Thirty-four years later, Stone Forest is a group of artisans and designers focused on bringing the elegant simplicity of natural materials into the bath and garden. We take our lead from nature's blueprint, emphasizing the quiet beauty of stone, bronze, copper, wood and iron.

Introducing FACET, the latest addition to the Elemental Collection, featuring forged brass fittings with architectural, jewel-like detailing. Facet fittings can be incorporated into any Elemental configuration. Designer Tod Babick of Studio Babick collaborated with Stone Forest to create FACET. The ancient Greek Doric architectural order served as Tod's initial inspiration for these sensuous fittings "My intention was to bring to the collection some of the richness of traditional ornament, which has always been based on nature."

Stone Forest designs are sculpted from single blocks of stone that were formed millions of years ago. A block of stone represents centuries of accumulated time and we like to think of them as “recorders of nature’s memory.”

Stone Forest’s reputation rests on combining the highest quality natural materials with exceptional designs and outstanding craftsmanship. It all begins with the relationships we’ve developed over the last 28 years with the most respected quarries in the world.

As we cut into a block, a mystery is revealed as the unique characteristics of the stone come to light. These include individual fingerprints of nature, such as anomalies in the form of areas of enhanced coloration and unusual veining and swirls of color in the stone. Much of the actual carving is done by hand with calculated blows from a hammer and chisel. We also use small diamond saws and hand-held polishing tools, but because the sinks are not machined each will be a little different, and truly exceptional. They will not be perfectly symmetrical and there will be small variations in size. Each block of stone also has its own personality expressed in slight differences in the makeup of its crystalline structure, depth of color and vein pattern.

We hope our clients will appreciate the wonders of natural stone and its unique characteristics. We never want to ask this incredible material to be something that it is not. — Michael Zimmer & Michael Cahill
