Ethical Sourcing

We understand the social concern of using animal skins and pelts. The Mood team and its business owner does not raise sheep for their skins alone, nor purchases raw skins directly from farmers. We strictly require our manufacturers to source sheepskin materials from abattoirs and packers as by-product of lamb meat, which is critically different from wild animal fur. All suppliers are also required to purchase raw materials from registered farms that comply with animal welfare policies, which require these farmers to use humane animal treatment in order to prevent animal abuse and animal cruelty.

Green Production

When it comes to fur products, The Mood also understands that traditional leather tanning has been criticized for its environmental pollution and human health hazards. The Mood takes them all seriously sustainable development, from raw materials to finished products to ensure compliance with essential regulations and meet with industry-leading standards. Therefore, we only partner with qualified manufacturers that meet the ecological tanning standards, mainly toxic-free operating environment and harmless treatment of materials.
