ZSOLT NAGY

ARTIST STATEMENT

After retiring, I was finally able to dedicate time to pursuing my artistic aspirations, which had been present since my youth. This marked the beginning of my exploration into sculptural techniques and the utilization of materials such as concrete and timber. After visiting Chihuly's exhibition in Kew Gardens and Tremenheere Gardens in Cornwall I became interested in how sculptures can interact with the exterior environment.

My early fascination with the simplification of forms observed in tribal and ancient art motivated me to create my own interpretations of masks and totems using materials like concrete, bamboo, and wood, with the intention of placing them in outdoor settings.

The stark reduction of form seen in Brutalist metropolitan architecture near my home, in contrast with the natural surroundings, inspired me to combine forms, textures, and patterns in my artwork. My sculptural pieces engage in a play with the viewer's perception of positive and negative space, and their interaction with light and darkness, as well as soft and sharp elements. A minimalistic color palette is utilized to allow each shape to convey its unique presence. Presently, my preferred medium is timber, including both softwood and plywood. My sculptures and reliefs are treated with chalk paint and protected with a soft wax or varnish finish.

ABSTRACT SCULPTURES

My preferred material to currently work with is timber and my favorite color is black. The sculptures are treated with chalk paint and protected with a soft wax (indoor) or varnish (outdoor) finish.

WALL OBJECTS

Creating wall sculptures seems like the natural progression from freestanding pieces. Just like at my sculptures I experiment with organic and geometric shapes here. The reliefs are treated with chalk paint and protected with a soft wax finish.

TOTEMS

My early fascination for tribal artworks has led me to create my personal collection of totems. After studying a range of tribal totems and wooden statues my sculptural totems showcase a variety of stylistic characteristics within my own designs.

DRIFTWOOD

Driftwood preserves the natural beauty of a deceased tree. Weathering and water often give the wood a unique patina and smooth surfaces. Driftwood provides a means to capture the transience of nature in art while also appreciating the wood's natural beauty..

AFRICAN MASKS

My fascination for African tribal artforms, especially intricate mask designs, started when I was quite young. My sculptures have been inspired by studying hundreds of tribal masks over the years and showcase a variety of cultural stylistic characteristics. My masks are created by kneading concrete, decorated with pastels and sealed for outdoor suitability. The masks shown below are not reproductions of original designs and not carved out of wood, they are artistic representations and purely intended for decorative use.

ABOUT

Zsolt Nagy was born in Budapest in 1951. He demonstrated his artistic inclinations from an early age and even achieved recognition during his childhood, winning a linocut prize at the age of 14. He graduated from TU Budapest, earning a Master of Science degree in 1975. Following the completion of his diploma, he embarked on a nearly 40-year-long career as an IT expert for various international companies. During this period, he relocated to Vienna.

After retiring in 2013, he was finally able to dedicate time to pursuing his artistic aspirations, which had been present since his youth. This marked the beginning of his exploration into sculptural techniques and the utilization of materials such as concrete and timber. He introduced his collection for the first time in 2022, and since then, he has actively participated in various exhibitions, showcasing his growing body of work. He is member of the Professional Association of Visual Artists of Austria.
