

Designed Around Your Journey

At the International School for Development Justice, we believe that advancing sustainable development and development justice requires both rigorous scholarship and the flexibility to learn on your terms. Our programmes — from Postgraduate Certificate through to Masters — are structured in focused 8-week blocks, allowing you to build knowledge progressively while balancing your professional and personal commitments.

Each level is a complete qualification in its own right. Upon successful completion, you may choose to graduate with your Postgraduate Certificate or Diploma and enter the workforce with a recognised credential — or scale up and continue to the next level, with your prior studies counting toward the cost and credits of the next programme. Whether you study full-time or part-time, your pathway is yours to define.

Grounded in the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals, every step of your journey at ISDJ moves you closer to becoming a more effective leader for sustainable development and development justice.
