COLIN FAGNAN

Executive Director, Fort Saskatchewan & Lamont County Regional Chamber of Commerce

Looking back on 2025, it has been a year of many changes — proof that when vision meets action, remarkable things can happen.

This past year has indeed been a transformational one, to say the least, for the Fort Saskatchewan & Lamont County Regional Chamber of Commerce. What began as a period of renewal has grown into a story of momentum and confidence — a Chamber that has not only adapted to change but embraced it.

With a new name that reflects our expanded region, a new Board of Directors, new executive director and new staff, a new modern office, a reworked logo, fresh member perks, and an entirely new website, our Chamber is evolving in every sense. Each of these changes represents something bigger: a renewed focus on serving our members and strengthening the business community across Fort Saskatchewan, Lamont County, and beyond.

Behind the scenes, we've modernized our operations, diversified revenue streams, and introduced new partnerships that bring real, practical value to members — from the ChamberPerks App to expanded HR and leadership support programs. We've built a more efficient, responsive organization, grounded in sound financial management and a clear sense of purpose.

And we're seeing the results: membership is growing again, among many other positive developments. Events are vibrant and well-attended. Our partnerships with municipalities, regional stakeholders, and fellow chambers have never been stronger. Whether it's through advocacy, networking, training, or collaboration, our Chamber has reaffirmed its role as a vital connector and advocate for local business.

But beyond the numbers, what stands out most is the renewed sense of optimism in our community. There's an energy you can feel, and a belief that, together, we can build something stronger. In a time of global uncertainty, from shifting markets to new trade realities, that optimism matters. Businesses need dependable partners, and our Chamber is proud to be exactly that: a steady, proactive, and solutions-driven voice for our region.

To our members and partners, thank you for your trust and your involvement. Every success we've seen this year is the product of collective effort.

As we look ahead to 2026, the path forward is exciting. We are entering this next chapter with a solid foundation, a clear vision, and a renewed commitment to helping our members and communities thrive.

Together, we're proving that transformation isn't just about change — it's about progress. And the best part? We're just getting started! ●

WADE ROBICHAUD

President, Fort Saskatchewan & Lamont County
Regional Chamber of Commerce

As we begin this new chapter for our Chamber, I'm reminded of how much strength exists in a community that chooses to grow together. This past year has brought meaningful change; from a renewed identity to new leadership and new momentum, and I'm grateful for the opportunity to contribute to that journey.

Our region has always been built on collaboration. Throughout my career in traffic safety, technology, and public-sector partnerships, I've seen firsthand how progress happens when people unite around a shared purpose. Whether serving on industry committees such as the American Traffic Safety Services Association (ATSSA) Safety & Public Awareness Committee or working with businesses across Western Canada, the lesson is the same: strong communities don't happen by accident; they happen through connection, communication, and commitment.

That same spirit guides our Chamber today. With a new Board, updated programs, and modernized operations, we're focused on creating an environment where businesses feel supported, heard, and equipped to succeed. We are building on the legacy of those who came before us, while ensuring our Chamber continues to grow and adapt to the needs of a changing regional economy.

One of the most rewarding parts of Chamber life is seeing how deeply local business owners care about this region. From long-standing family businesses to new entrepreneurs taking their first steps, there's a shared sense of pride that defines Fort Saskatchewan and Lamont County. It's present at every event, in every conversation, and in every partnership we build.

As we look ahead, our focus remains simple and steady:

- Strengthen relationships across our business community.
- Expand opportunities for connection, learning, and advocacy.
- Support growth that benefits the entire region – from industry to small business to the local visitor experience.

We know businesses continue to navigate an evolving landscape; economic shifts, supply-chain challenges, workforce pressures, and new technologies. Our Chamber is here to be a reliable partner through it all: a connector, a listener, and a champion for the people who drive our local economy.

Thank you to our members for your trust and continued engagement. Your involvement is what gives the Chamber purpose and direction. As we move into a new year, I'm excited for what we can accomplish together and grateful to play a small role in supporting the success of this remarkable region.

Here's to a year of collaboration, progress, and shared success. ●

SHAUNA FETH

President and CEO, Alberta Chambers of Commerce

As we look ahead to 2026, I want to take a moment to recognize the strength and resilience of the Fort Saskatchewan & Lamont County Regional Chamber of Commerce and the business leaders it represents. Your efforts to build a strong local economy contribute meaningfully to the broader success of Alberta.

Fort Saskatchewan & Lamont County play a vital role in the province's industrial and economic landscape. Your proximity to Alberta's Industrial Heartland, paired with a diverse mix of entrepreneurs, manufacturers, and service providers, positions this region as a hub of innovation and opportunity. The Alberta Chambers of Commerce (ACC) remains committed to ensuring your voice is heard at every level of decision-making — municipal, provincial, and federal.

Through our province-wide network, the ACC advocates on issues that matter to you: improving interprovincial trade, expanding workforce development, reducing regulatory burden, and supporting competitiveness for Alberta businesses. These priorities are not abstract — they are shaped by direct input from our members. That includes Fort Saskatchewan, where local insight continues to guide our work.

We encourage businesses in your region to stay engaged, not only through your local chamber but also by contributing to initiatives like Alberta Perspectives, our ongoing research platform that captures the lived experience of Alberta's job creators. These insights are invaluable in shaping practical policy recommendations and amplifying your voice in a meaningful way.

The ACC's advocacy is most effective when it reflects the realities of our members. Whether you're navigating workforce shortages, capital planning, rising costs, or infrastructure pressures, your experience matters. And it's through collective action — at the local and provincial levels — that we can help shape a more responsive, business-friendly environment.

On behalf of the Alberta Chambers of Commerce, thank you for your continued leadership and collaboration. The Fort Saskatchewan & Lamont County Regional Chamber of Commerce's commitment to economic development, community partnership, and advocacy is an example of what makes Alberta's chamber network so impactful.

We look forward to working alongside you in 2026 and beyond, ensuring that Fort Saskatchewan & Lamont County businesses remain a driving force in Alberta's future. ●

New aquatics centre now moving toward construction

A new aquatics centre at the Dow Centennial Centre in Fort Saskatchewan is now firmly advancing. After years in concept and design phases, the city recently cleared a key procedural step toward construction.

City Council passed the first reading of the borrowing bylaw on August 14, 2025, enabling the project to move into detailed design and setting the stage for a spring 2026 construction start.

Earlier in the spring of 2025, Council approved the design scope informed by public engagement, which includes features such as a 10-lane lap pool, leisure pool, tot pool, hot pool, sauna, steam room, lazy river, slides, diving boards, climbing walls, therapy space, spectator and parent viewing areas, and full ramp access.

The new 52,500 square-foot-facility will be double the size of the current Harbour Pool and will serve up to 800 visitors. Harbour Pool can currently only accommodate 300 people and provide only one activity at a time — either leisure swim or swim lessons.

Planned site improvements include an updated Dow Centennial Centre lobby featuring a new corridor connecting to the aquatics centre, along with two new parking lots providing at least 145 stalls. A ring road is planned for development around the northwest parking lot, and upgrades include parking lot and road lighting, new traffic signals at 84 Street and Galloway Wynd, and enhanced landscaping throughout the area.

Dow Chemical is contributing $5.6 million, reducing the burden on municipal borrowing. In 2024, Council approved a project budget of $66.6 million, which includes design, construction, and infrastructure costs.

Detailed design work took place in the fall to finalize architectural, mechanical, structural, and civil plans. And construction is anticipated to begin in the spring of 2026. During construction, the city will work to manage disruptions to the Dow Centennial Centre and surrounding roads and parking.

Harbour Pool will continue operating until the new facility opens. A study will be conducted to determine whether the Harbour Pool site will be repurposed, redeveloped, or demolished. Demolition costs are estimated around $500,000 whereas redevelopment for new community use could run $2–3 million. ●

Keyera's natural gas liquids deal signals a turning point for Fort Saskatchewan and for Canada

Keyera's decision to acquire Plains Midstream's Canadian natural gas liquids (NGL) business for $5.15 billion is more than a major corporate transaction. For Fort Saskatchewan, it marks a rare moment when a single deal has the potential to reshape a community's economic outlook for a generation.

Fort Saskatchewan has long been one of the country's industrial anchors — a place where energy infrastructure, petrochemicals, and manufacturing quietly keep the national economy moving. With this acquisition, Keyera has placed Fort Saskatchewan squarely at the heart of its newly expanded, fully connected NGL network that stretches from Western Canada to Ontario and into the U.S. This instantly elevates the region's strategic importance.

The benefits for the community are multi-layered. First, Keyera's expanded infrastructure means more stable, long-term operations at Fort Saskatchewan's existing facilities. Fee-for-service contracts and integrated logistics reduce the boom-and-bust volatility that has challenged industrial towns in the past. This means more predictable work, steadier shifts, and a stronger foundation for families who rely on energy-sector employment.

Second, with an enlarged national network, Keyera now has a platform for future capital investment — expansions, upgrades, new pipeline tie-ins, additional storage, or enhanced fractionation capacity. Fort Saskatchewan already serves as one of the most critical midstream hubs in the country. Under a Canadian-owned operator focused on long-term, homegrown growth, the region stands to gain from new projects that bring construction work, procurement opportunities, and ripple effects for small businesses.

Third, local service providers — from transportation companies to equipment suppliers — could see increased demand as Keyera integrates its newly acquired systems. These secondary economic benefits often matter as much as direct employment, helping keep local restaurants, contractors, and retailers busy.

Zooming out, the deal strengthens Alberta's position as the country's NGL powerhouse. By consolidating infrastructure under a single, stable Canadian operator, Keyera reduces inefficiencies across the system and enhances energy security for the province. Alberta benefits from increased value-added processing at facilities like those in Fort Saskatchewan — turning Alberta's natural gas liquids into higher-value products rather than simply shipping raw volumes elsewhere.

The acquisition also helps build investor confidence in Alberta's midstream and petrochemical sectors. At a time when global capital is cautious about energy, seeing a Canadian firm commit billions to long-term infrastructure is a powerful signal that the province remains a competitive and attractive jurisdiction for industrial investment.

At the national level, this transaction is a strategic asset. Canada has long struggled with fragmented midstream infrastructure. A fully integrated NGL corridor — from field, through processing hubs like Fort Saskatchewan, to demand centres in Ontario — strengthens the resilience of the country's energy supply chain. It creates a more reliable system for moving the materials needed for fuels, plastics, manufacturing, and everyday products.

It also keeps critical energy infrastructure under Canadian ownership, ensuring decisions about national supply chains are made in Canada, for the interests of Canadians. In an era of global uncertainty, that matters more than ever. ●

Bruderheim Terminal: A quiet but strategic engine in Alberta's energy heartland

Tucked into the eastern edge of Alberta's Industrial Heartland, the Bruderheim Energy Terminal remains one of Cenovus Energy's key logistical assets — a quiet but influential hub shaping how oil moves through the province and how local industry evolves. Originally built as a crude-by-rail loading facility, the terminal connects Cenovus's upstream production to major rail lines, giving the company a vital alternative to pipeline constraints. That flexibility has proved essential as Alberta's production continues to outpace midstream capacity.

While rail volumes have fluctuated in recent years, Bruderheim continues to play a meaningful role in Cenovus's transportation strategy. The site's large footprint and proximity to major pipeline networks have long made it a candidate for expansion. That potential came into focus when Cenovus submitted an application to construct a Diluent Recovery Unit (DRU) at the terminal — an industrial facility designed to strip diluent from diluted bitumen before shipment, improving efficiency and allowing the company to ship a higher-value product.

The company has since paused the DRU project in order to evaluate market conditions, capital priorities, and long-term transportation needs, but the regulatory application remains on record.

Even so, the DRU initiative underscores the scale of development Bruderheim is capable of supporting. If revisited in the future, the project could reduce the unnecessary transport of diluent, lower per-barrel shipping costs, and return recycled diluent to upstream operations. It would also represent the most significant evolution at the terminal since Cenovus purchased it a decade ago — a signal of the kind of value-added infrastructure that could eventually emerge at the site.

For the Town of Bruderheim and surrounding Lamont County, the terminal continues to offer clear economic and strategic benefits. Industrial activity contributes to the regional tax base, attracts complementary businesses, and reinforces the area's reputation as a reliable corridor for energy logistics. Because the terminal ties directly into national rail infrastructure, it also links the community to broader North American supply chains, positioning Bruderheim within discussions about diversification and future-focused energy development.

While the DRU's future remains uncertain, the terminal itself is far from static. Its infrastructure, location, and integration with both rail and pipeline networks keep it central to Cenovus's midstream mix. Whether future expansions proceed or remain on hold, the Bruderheim Terminal stands as a critical anchor in Alberta's energy transportation network — one with the capacity to shape regional growth when market conditions align. ●

Alberta crews can close the gap for first-year workers

Alberta Construction Safety Association

Alberta's construction crews face a troublesome reality: 55 per cent of injury claims involve workers in their first year with a company. This number reveals a pattern—the worker who hesitates to ask about a procedure, the experienced crew learning new protocols, or the supervisor rushing to meet a deadline are contributing to these injuries.

"Preventing one lost-time back injury can avoid weeks of modified duties and premium increases for your company," says a Safety Showdown participant.

Struck-by incidents, falls to lower levels, and back injuries are common across work sites. Each incident disrupts more than schedules. An injured worker means recovery time and lost wages while crews adjust to coverage gaps and companies deal with investigations and rising premiums.

Leaders and crews recognize this challenge and are stepping up together. They are creating space for conversations and investing in solutions—understanding that preventing incidents requires both technical knowledge and open communication.

"Leaders create safer work sites when they take an active role by building trust, encouraging teamwork and acting early to prevent injuries," says Alberta Construction Safety Association (ACSA) CEO Mark Hoosein.

Beyond skills training

Technical skills training alone won't prevent these incidents. Your crew also needs clear expectations and permission to speak up.

When ACSA launched Crew Brew visits across Calgary, Red Deer, and Edmonton, leaders encouraged their teams to participate. These onsite visits created space for crews to share daily experiences over coffee.

One participant shared, "Discuss habits and set clear expectations during onboarding and safety check-ins to prevent incidents"—practical advice that resonates because it addresses the gap between knowing procedures and feeling comfortable using them.

Team-centred solutions

Based on industry data and earlier research in partnership with Berlin Communications and MacEwan University, ACSA developed resources to address common first-year risks. Crew Brew visits later confirmed what crews valued most—practical onboarding tools, engaging toolbox talk materials and clear ways to reinforce safety knowledge. These insights strengthened the foundation of ACSA's Injury Prevention Campaign, which also featured the Safety Showdown contest.

Safety Showdown transformed routine safety discussions into engaging team competition. Over 500 workers across 150 teams participated, tackling real-world safety scenarios. Their feedback is shaping the tools you use.

"Safety Showdown was fun and boosted employee participation in safety; I hope it continues," says Christie from Kidco Construction Ltd., whose crew earned an ACSA-sponsored team lunch.
