Have You Seen Our New Baby?

Only a month after the creation of this magazine AZBilliards is proud to present yet another addition to the family: AZBilliards Television on Roku. If you have a Roku device (and there are over 20 million of them in the USA alone) you merely have to search for "Billiards" to find our new effort.

Over 250 hours of high-level tournament play awaits you. And we are adding to the line-up all the time to give you the widest variety possible of players and games. Plus, we give you several options as to how you may watch your favorite game.

When you arrive at AZBilliards Television you will find a menu awaiting you. The first option available to you is "Billiards Televisions 24/7". This is a continuous loop of over 50 hours of some of our favorite matches. The rest of the options on the main menu have submenus from which you select the exact match-ups you wish to see. For instance, if you select "Battle in the Bullpen" you will find Scott Frost and Rodney Morris doing battle in Last Pocket 8-Ball, Last Pocket 9-Ball and Straight Pool. You just pick which offering you wish to view, highlight and click.

Or you may choose the Chinook Winds 8-Ball Championships and watch all of the top players fighting it out on the Bar Box. And there are three Turning Stone events with all of the stars that attend there. Our other selections include the Predator Pro-Am Tour, the Diamond Pro Tour and the popular "On the Case" series with your host, Samm Diep. Check in often, new offerings will be going up to keep you busy watching!

We hope you will enjoy AZBilliards Television, along with this new magazine, AZBtv Live Streaming and AZBiliards.com. There is now one-click access to this magazine available to you within the navigation bar at the top of the AZ Billiards.com Home Page. Just click on "Buzz".

This month we are bringing you coverage of the China Open, the Turning Stone Classic, the World 9-Ball Championships, and the US Bar Table Championships along with another column by Dr. Chris Stankovich and an update on the Mosconi Cup points race. Plus we bring you every month our tournament planning calendars and tournament results and payouts. And a real treat this month from our friends at Delta-13. Side Spin

by Jerry Briesath

“I often ask players why they miss so many shots when they use side spin on the cue ball, and the answers I get are very interesting.”

Applying side spin or English to the cue ball can be a very frightening and frustrating experience for an amateur player until he or she learns the actions and reactions that take place when the cue ball is struck on either side. I often ask players why they miss so many shots when they use side spin on the cue ball, and the answers I get are very interesting. One player will say “I miss shots when I use side spin because I don’t allow for the curve of the cue ball” and another player will say, “left-hand English throws the object ball to the right and right hand spin throws the object ball to the left and I just don’t allow for it properly.” And still a third will say “when I use left-hand spin the cue ball deflects off-line to the right and when I use right hand spin the cue ball deflects off-line to the left”. Would you believe that sometimes all of these assessments are correct!

Let’s talk about what happens in a chronological order when you use side spin. First, when the cue ball is struck on the left side, the weight of the cue stick pushes the cue ball slightly off-line to the right and this is called “squirt” or “deflection”. The farther to the left you strike the cue ball, the more it is pushed off-line to the right. This “squirt” or “deflection” happens anytime you strike the cue ball off center to the left of right. Second, if the cue ball is struck very softly with left-hand spin and especially if the butt of the cue is elevated during the stroke, the cue ball first deflects off-line to the right and then might curve slightly back to the left if there is a lot of “green” between the cue ball and the object ball. Remember, the curve I am talking about here seldom happens at normal speed with a level cue. Not let’s talk about the third item, which is the “throw”.

When the cue ball arrives at the object ball with left-hand spin, the friction between the balls can cause the object ball to “throw” slightly off-line to the right of the line of the two balls at impact. This “throw affect” seldom happens at normal or high speeds but may cause a miss at very slow speed.

Now if you read this carefully you will see that you seldom have to worry about the “curve” of “throw” on most shots, but you always have to worry and allow for “squirt” or “deflection”. So here is the rule you must remember -- when using left-hand English you must aim slightly to the left of where you would normally aim to pocket the object ball and when using right hand spin you must aim slightly to the right of where you would normally aim to pocket the object ball.

Mind of Steel

Develop routines to play your best

by Dr. Chris Stankovich
www.drstankovich.com

Playing pool is a game that requires finesse, as there are countless times at the table where it is essential to have your mind and body working in synchrony so that you can make that difficult cut, bank, or combination shot. In order to achieve the needed confidence and muscle-memory that good pool playing requires, it is imperative that you develop unique, personalized routines that help you prepare for battle.

As humans, we are creatures of habit and perform our best when we feel comfortable in our surroundings. When we experience new situations in life, we run the risk of over-reacting and allowing our nervous system to create a high level of anxiety to help ward off the stress. Unfortunately, while we are actively focusing to minimize nerves, we often get “out of sorts” and away from the rituals we usually do that allow us to play our best. For example, if you are fixated on looking at the bracket for the tournament you might forget about the importance of taking a few minutes to yourself to breathe, use imagery to see success, and review your personal goals before putting together your stick.

The good news is that we can ward off much of the negative anxiety we experience in life by developing routines that help us feel comfortable. In essence, the better we feel in our surroundings, the better the chances we will play our best pool. Some ideas to consider when developing your routines include:

- Be prepared. The night before a big tournament be sure to take care of all the small details, including preparing your cue, getting enough rest, and plotting out directions to the tournament so that you’ll have enough time to get there without being rushed.
- Develop a mental pre-game mindset. Don’t leave things to chance, but instead make sure you know the basics when it comes to imagery, cue words, self-talk, and bounce-back tips (check the video link at the end of this column for more help).
- Go through a structured pre-game practice routine. The more you are in control, the less stress you will experience. What this means is that having a specific pre-shooting routine will help you feel comfortable in your surroundings and leave you less time to look around and become nervous noticing other ringers signing up for the tournament.
- Walk through resiliency strategies. While we never want to think we’ll ever miss another shot, the reality is that we will (in fact, we’ll miss lots of them in our lifetime!). The key is to think ahead of time how you will respond and regroup the first time you miss a shot that you shouldn’t, thereby preventing “mental meltdowns” that result in you missing more than a shot (in most cases that kills it for the entire tournament). By having a comfortable routine that allows you to step away, breathe, and normalize the situation you will be far more likely to make the next shot and start a new run, compared to allowing the emotions of the situation take you away from your game.

Money Pool

by Anthony Beeler

In November of 2007, the Clarion Hotel and Conference Center in Louisville, Kentucky played host to the $20,000 added CSI Qlympics. A star studded field gathered to compete in the BCA, U.S. Open Bank Pool Championship, U.S. Open One-Pocket Championship, U.S. Open 14.1 Championship, and the ever prestigious U.S. Open 10-Ball Championship. Early on Saturday morning I decided to drive north to Louisville and watch some of the world's greatest players. My intention was to watch the featured Action Report match pitting Earl Strickland against Shane Van Boening. However, when I arrived on the scene, my good friend Samantha Patton convinced me to enter both the 8-Ball and 9-Ball mini-tournaments. She said it would be a great way to test my skills against some of the world's greatest players.

The 9-Ball mini was single elimination, race to 5. I started out strong winning several matches by significant margins. After winning the final match of the 9-Ball tournament against "Detroit Tom" by a score of 5-2, I found myself in the semi-finals of the 8-Ball event pitted against top ranked touring professional, Louis Ulrich. Louis had just won the BCAPL Men's Master Big Table Singles Division and had just finished 2nd in the U.S. Open 10-Ball Championship.

The match was close and it was only a race to 3. I was on the hill by a score of 2-1 and Louis had just missed an opportunity at a difficult run out. I came to the table with a crucial decision to make. As you can see below, I had the solids and Louis had only the 8-ball left. It was clear that I had to play safe. The problem was how do you defend against the firepower of a world-class player?

As I studied the layout my first instinct was to do something simple. I wanted to graze the 6-ball rolling up behind it and the 5, leaving the cue ball at position "A." However, as I continued to study the layout of balls, I came to the realization that it was the incorrect shot. I kept telling myself, "You can't let him have a clear kick shot to pocket the 8." So I surveyed the table for other options.

"It's important to weigh all of your options and to always play the percentage."

After carefully surveying the table, I noticed that my 2 and 3 ball were positioned near the 8, and could be potentially used as blockers for executing a different type of safety. My new plan was to shoot thinly into the left side of the 6-ball and position the cue-ball two rails onto the other side of the table, leaving it at position "B". This plan cuts off the upper cushion, which takes the easier to pocket 1-rail kick out of the equation. I would rather have my opponent kick to the short side of the ball with a lower percentage of making it, rather than letting him kick to the long side, which has a higher probability of the ball being pocketed.

After I executed the safety, Louis came to the table and kicked to the short side. The 8-ball rebounded off the cushion and broke loose my 2 and 3. This was the only opportunity that I needed to run the remaining balls and win the match.

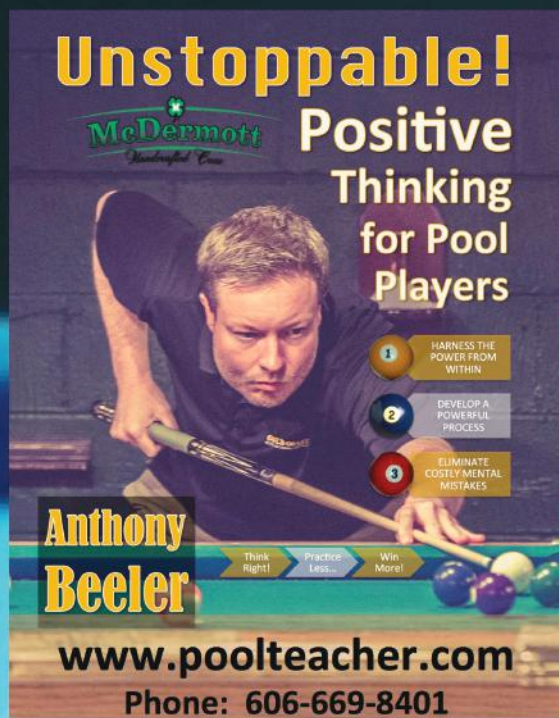

Looking back, I now realize how important that it is to look for various safety options and to weigh the probabilities of each shot. If I had elected to go with my first instinct and had attempted to play the simpler safety, I very well may have watched Louis kick in the 8-ball and win the game. The movie Money Ball talks about how the Oakland Athletics general manager, Billy Beane, uses percentages over the long haul to win at baseball. Pool is no different. It's important to weigh all of your options and to always play the percentage. Any time you can gain even a 1 or 2 percent advantage it is important to exercise that option. Even small percentages add up over the course of time.

Ouschan Rules the World of 9-Ball

by AzB Staff

Albin Ouschan is literally on top of the world in 9-Ball pool. His victory at the WPA World 9-Ball Championship in Qatar in August vaulted him to the number two spot in the world rankings (just behind Yu Hsuan Chen) and has forever removed the presence of his sister Jasmin's shadow. After his win he addressed this and said: "I always wanted to show people who I am. When I was younger I didn't even have a name. People always addressed me as Jasmin's brother."

No more. Albin Ouschan stands clearly now in his own spotlight and this victory, paired with his second-place finish here to Niels Feijen two years ago, has erased any doubts about where he fits in the international scene of pro pool. The foundation for this major win was laid in 2015 when Ouschan won the China Open, the Eurotour Dutch Open and was a member of the winning Mosconi Cup team. The long promise has matured into a considerable force.

Ouschan captured this crown by defeating American Shane Van opening in the finals 13-6.

Ouschan started off hot and never cooled down while Van Boening did not come to the table with his "A" game. Ouschan told WPA Press Officer Ted Lerner: "I don't know if it was the pressure or he didn't feel fine but I took the early lead and I just had it till the end." When Lerner questioned Van Boening he got this confirmation: "I think I ran out of gas," said Van Boening. "I wasn't really tired, I just made a couple of mistakes at the beginning and I had a bad start. I tried to fight my way back but I just didn't seem to have it today."

That was the first match of the week where Van Boening did not shine brighter than his foe. In the semis he faced his toughest match of the week against current U.S. Open Champion and WPA ranked #1 player Yu Hsuan (Kenny) Cheng. When Van Boening won that match 11-9 in a manner that was more convincing than the score displayed, he became the favorite to win the tournament. But the fans began to rumble about Ouschan when Albin covered up Alex Pagulayan 11-3 in a fearsome display of shotmaking and precise position play. By finals time the arena was divided on whom should be considered the favorite.

It did not take long to find out as Ouschan moved ahead and after an hour and fifteen minutes he led the match 5-1. As said previously, he was able to maintain his lead throughout and took the title convincingly.

Albin Ouschan pocketed $40,000 for his victory while Van Boening accepted $20,000 for his efforts. Full results and payouts may be found in The Billiards Buzz results section. For detailed coverage of this event we have daily reports that originally appeared on AZBilliards.com. You can see these at this page. 8th World 9-Ball China Open

alison-chang.com

In November of 2005, Wu Chia-Ching became the first player to hold both the WPA World 9-Ball and World 8-Ball titles. At the ripe old age of 16, the future looked bright for the young Taiwanese star. Then came problems with the Taiwanese government regarding his eligibility to play in events that he wanted to. After a brief time coaching the Singapore National Team, Wu changed the spelling of his name to Wu Jia-Qing to conform to Chinese standards and applied for citizenship in China. With the political drama going on, Wu had a hard time finding the winner's circle at another international event. He took first place in the 2007 All Japan Championship and lost to Darren Appleton in the final of the 2008 WPA World 10-Ball Championship, but the future that looked so bright a decade ago was certainly not coming to fruition.

Fans at the 8th World 9-Ball China Open in Shanghai China on August 25th - 28th got a glimpse though, of what Wu is capable of doing on a pool table when he is able to devote 100% of his attention to the game. The China Open's Men's division starts with eight groups of eight players racing to 9 in double elimination brackets. Two wins are required for a player to advance from these group stages to the main event. Wu advanced without a loss, after wins over Matthew Edwards and Niels Feijen. Wu really turned things on in the single elimination stage of the event. An 11-4 win over Denis Grabe was followed up by an even more dominating 11-3 win over countryman Zeng Zhao-Dong. Wu kept things rolling with an 11-5 win over Wang Can and then an 11-6 win over 2015 WPA World 9-Ball and 10-Ball Champion Ko Pin-Yi to earn his place in the finals.

Wu's opponent in the finals was 2015 US Open Champion Cheng Yu-Hsuan. Cheng's path through the single elimination stage of the event couldn't have been more nail biting as he won four straight hill-hill matches over Johann Chua, Carlo Biado, Jeffrey Ignacio and Wu Kun-Lin. Cheng's win over Wu Kun-Lin saw him come back from a 6-3 and an 8-6 deficit to win.

While the final match ended with an 11-4 scoreline in favor of Wu, it didn't truly tell the story of the match. Cheng's break, which had served him well up to the finals, completely abandoned him in the final match. The event was played with alternating break rules requiring the breaker to either pocket or move a total of three balls past the head string for the break to be legal. Cheng struggled with this rule the entire match and either broke dry or made an illegal break six out of seven times. His one legal break resulted in a miss on the four ball and another rack won by Wu. Wu took full advantage of Cheng's break problems and raced to a 7-2 lead. Cheng got back within three racks at 7-4, but it is tough to build any momentum when you have to sit down after every break. From 7-4, Wu broke and ran on each of his breaks, and ran out from each of Cheng's illegal breaks.

The China Open Ladies Division was contested with eight groups of six ladies competing in double elimination groups, with the top two ladies from each group advancing to the single elimination stage of the event.

As a testament to the skill of the Chinese players, the final four players in this division were all representing China. The semi-finals would see Han Yu defeat Wang Xiao-Tong 9-4 and Liu Shasha defeat Chen Xue 9-5.

The Ladies final match would also be determined by the break rules, but in a much more heartbreaking way. The first six racks saw two dry breaks and three illegal breaks, with Liu Shasha taking an early 4-2 lead. Both ladies appeared to get the break under control with legal breaks in the next five racks and Liu holding on to a one rack lead at 6-5. Liu would make an illegal break in rack 12, but would still win the rack for a 7-5 lead and would then get to the hill at 8-5 in the next rack. That was when the pool gods turned their backs on Liu. An illegal break in rack fourteen led to an 8-6 scoreline and a break and run by Yu would draw her back within one at 8-7. Liu again made an illegal break and watched Yu run that rack to tie the score at 8-8. The final rack of the match saw Yu with a legal break, followed by a table run, to secure the 9-8 win and the Ladies World 9-Ball China Open title.

Wu earned $40,000 for his win in the men's division, while Yu took home $36,000 in prize money in the ladies division of this event.

Jayson Shaw TAKES Turning Stone

All photos for this story presented courtesy of Erin Bechner

To be successful as a professional pool player, one has to learn how to bring their “A” game in foreign conditions. Different games, venues, time zones and food can be difficult on a player, especially one without years and years of experience dealing with these obstacles. On those rare occasions when a player gets to play close to home and in a venue that they really like, it can be a lot easier to find that “A” game. With that being said, Jayson Shaw really likes the Turning Stone Casino in Verona, NY.

Shaw was one of the 128 players that made up another full field of players at Turning Stone on August 25th - 28th for the 26th running of the Turning Stone Classic, a popular stop on the Joss NE 9-Ball Tour. Mike Zuglan has turned this twice yearly event into one of the favorite tour stops for not only his Joss tour regulars, but the pros who are attracted by the $25,000 in added prize money. The ability for fans to come out and watch all of the matches at no cost has also made it a favorite destination for a number of knowledgeable fans.

With three wins in the last two years, Shaw came into this event as one of the odds on favorites. Shaw was joined at the top of the field by other former winners Earl Strickland, Mike Dechaine and Rodney Morris. Although she has never won this title, Karen Corr was another top player in this field, and she would make her presence known in a big way before a champion would be crowned.

With all four of the former event winners in the same half of the bracket, fireworks were sure to be on display for the fans in attendance and watching the event on AzBTV’s free live stream of the event. Those fireworks got started on Saturday with Strickland’s 9-5 win over Rodney Morris. Next up for Strickland was a match with “The Fireball,” Mike Dechaine late on Saturday night. Dechaine got to the hill first in this match, at 8-7, but he couldn’t get over that hill before Strickland won back to back games to send Dechaine west to deal with the players on the one loss side. Meanwhile, Shaw was mowing down opponents with relative ease. Korean

Champion Lee Kang, Bucky Souvanthong, Ivaylo Petrov, Ernesto Dominguez and Danny Hewitt all fell by the wayside, with Shaw putting together a dominating 45 - 11 record in games.

Shaw would then have to get by The Pearl, Earl Strickland. Although Strickland may not be as consistent as he was a decade ago, he is sure to let anyone know that he can make any shot on the table that he could make in his prime, and he was making all of them early in this match. Strickland held an early 5-2 lead before Shaw got comfortable at the table. After that, it was the "Jayson Shaw Show" as he came back to win the match 9-6 and book a spot in the hot-seat match.

While all of the fireworks were happening on the top half of the brackets, Karen Corr was quietly making her way through the bottom half. After a close call in her opening match against Sean Morgan, Corr had scored lopsided wins over Dawn Fox, Zion Zvi and Alain Parent. Just like Shaw's match where he flirted with a trip to the one loss side, Corr had her own gut-check moment in the next round against Russian sensation Maksim Dudanets. Dudanets' play had gained the attention of a lot of fans and players all week, and he looked to be on his way to an easy win over Corr as he led the match 8-5. Corr has been in this spot before though, and she methodically came back to tie the score at 8-8 with her breaking. That would be a crucial advantage as she made the 9-ball on the break to win the match 9-8. After another 9-8 win, this time over Donny Mills, Corr was ready to take on Shaw for the hot-seat.

Shaw took complete control of this match right out of the gate, and led 5-0 before Corr could move a scoring bead. That would be one of only two games that Corr won, as Shaw ran away with the match 9-2.

As always, the one loss side was full of top talent, but only one player could would make it to the semi-final match to face off with Corr. Morris would drop a 9-4 match to Hunter Lombardo, who would then lose 9-4 to Brandon Shuff. Shuff then dropped a match to Dudanets, who then lost to Ernesto Dominguez. Dominguez would not celebrate his win for long, as he then lost a hill-hill match to Strickland. Strickland then eliminated Mills, who had just ended Dechaine's tournament in the round prior.

The semi-final match was easily the match of the tournament. Strickland and Corr had faced off a handful of times in the past, but Corr had never defeated Strickland. Even with his perfect record against Corr, it was a surprisingly tame Strickland on display this time, as he didn't seem interested in talking to fans on the rail or any other distractions that might keep him from the finals. In contrast to the hot-seat match with Shaw's explosive breaks and "take no prisoners" table runs, this match was more subdued with a number of crucial safety battles and tough tables. Corr took the matches' first multi-rack lead at 5-3, but Strickland came back to tie things at 7-7. Corr got to the hill first at 8-7, but was quickly joined there by Strickland for another hill-hill match. A dry break from Strickland gave early control of the table to Corr, but she had no easy pocket for the 1-ball. After a two way shot left Strickland kicking at the 1-ball, Corr took ball in hand and ran one of the biggest racks in her career for the 9-8 win. Corr admitted after the match just how important the win was for her. She referred back to her pre 9-ball days in Europe, when all she knew about American 9-ball was Earl Strickland and Efren Reyes. "Earl is such a genius at the table, and how many times are you going to have the chance to play him?" she commented.

Corr didn't have long to think about her win over Strickland though, as the extended race to 13 final match with Shaw was still on the schedule. Like someone trying to hold back a thoroughbred who sees the finish line, Corr did all she could to contain Shaw early in the match, and was within one rack at 5-4, but Shaw was unstoppable once he got his break going and got back to his rack running ways. What was a one rack lead for Shaw, was a 13-5 win just nine racks later.

In his post match interview, Shaw expressed how much he loved the Turning Stone venue. "I just feel really comfortable here. There are a lot of people watching, which is good. I feel as if I can play good anywhere, but it's nice to have a crowd watching. You know what it is like sometimes. Some places you go you don't have many spectators. I like the fact that it's open to anyone. I feel really at home here."

This win gives Shaw his fourth win in just two years, and brings him within two wins of tying Johnny Archer's record of six wins. Considering Shaw's young age, and that Archer took four years to win his six Turning Stone titles, Shaw will have more than enough chances to tie and surpass the Scorpion as the most successful player in Turning Stone history.

US Bar Box Championships

A Celebration of the Small Track by AzB Staff

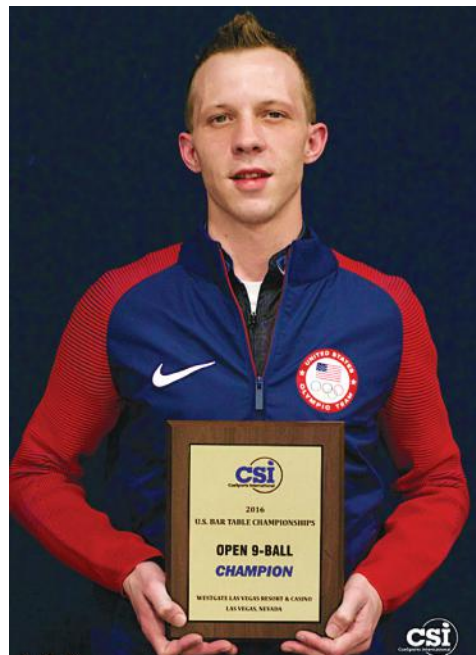

All photos presented in this story courtesy of Mary Coffman - CueSports International

The US Bar Table Championships has become an American tradition. Begun in 1994, the event is now owned by CSI and calls the Westgate Hotel and Casino in Las Vegas home. It consists of both Open and Women's competitions in three Divisions (8-Ball, 9-Ball, and 10-Ball) plus a Master of the Table Bonus for the most consistent player in all three divisions.

This year Master of the Table honors went to Justin Bergman and Rebecca Wagner, both of whom won two out of the three Divisions in which they participated. Bergman won both the 9-Ball and 10-Ball Open Divisions while Wagner was masterful in both the 8-Ball and the 9-Ball arenas.

Justin Bergman did not have an easy go of the 10-Ball Division. He was sent to the loser's bracket by his friend Skyler Woodward and had to take the long road to get another shot at Woodward in the finals. He made the most of his opportunity there and double-dipped Woodward to own the win.

This year Master of the Table honors went to Justin Bergman and Rebecca Wagner

Meanwhile, Rebecca Wagner was having a tough time with Jessica Frideres. Frideres sent her left and then she wound up facing Frideres again in the finals where Jessica won the Division from the hill. This seemed to only add determination to Wagner's game and she took both the 8-Ball and 9-Ball titles, along with the Master of the Table crown, to salvage her loss.

On the men's side, Justin Bergman was the man to beat all week. After defeating Woodward in the 10-Ball he moved to the 9-Ball competition and proved just as lethal in that discipline. When the competition dwindled down to only four players left standing it was the unscathed duo of Bergman and Shane McMinn on the 'A' side while the two with only one bullet left were Billy Thorpe and Jason Klatt.

After Klatt put Thorpe out of the tournament he had to face Shane McMinn. McMinn had just lost 9-7 to Bergman and was hungry to get another shot. He earned it by beating Klatt and once again he had the opportunity to win the event. All he had to do was to get by Bergman.

Bergman was just too strong. McMinn made a mistake early in the set that gave Bergman an advantage he would never surrender and Bergman took it all 9-7. Afterward Bergman shared the inspiration for his stellar play: "I want to make the Mosconi Cup so bad, that is my main goal this year."

Bergman did not outshine the field, however, in 8-Ball. That discipline would be captured by Shane Van Boening who commented "Finally!" after winning the title that had always previously eluded him.

Sponsors of the US Bar Table Championships included OB Cues, Kamui, Diamond Billiard Products, Cyclop Balls, Simonis Cloth, Matchroom Sport, Badboys Billiard Productions, Fargorate, and Magic Ball Rack.

TWICE BITTEN : BLACK WIDOW SERIES 2

Accu-Stats

Industry Spotlight

by AzB Staff

The reason that Barry Behrman chose Pat Fleming of Accu-Stats to first manage the U.S. Open and then succeed him as Promoter (along with the Behrman siblings, Brady and Shannon) is simply that Barry knew that no one else understood the event as well as Fleming. After all, Fleming and his Accu-Stats company have been a part of the Open since 1983.

The first couple of years Accu-Stats was just doing the stats. But then in 1985 they began to video the event as well and Accu-Stats became an integral part of the show. The original playing pit is now the "Accu-Stats Arena," a title that is often sold to a major sponsor now that the Open broadcast is marketed in foreign markets with access to 100,000,000 potential customers.

Until 2006 Accu-Stats taped the event, took it back to New Jersey and edited it, then sold it in TV packages to broadcast networks while selling the individual matches to the large cadre of Accu-Stat fans and collectors. All of this is still done today, but with a new twist. In 2006 Fleming and Behrman agreed to live stream the event as a Pay Per View as well. The idea here was to try and defray some of the rapidly growing costs involved in making the video.

In the beginning, the stats could be done by two or three people. But with the streaming and the increased demands of broadcast networks, that manpower requirement grew to fifteen people, all of whom must be transported, housed, fed and paid for ten days, some more. Put a pencil to that and you come up with a figure that is north of large.

We asked Pat why most of the countries taking his broadcast were in Asia. "China and Taipei and other Asian countries support their billiards programs, they support and promote them quite a lot, so the interest and money is there ready to take the shows." And in the US? "The US offers the game no support so we haven't large sponsors from outside the industry the way the Asians do.

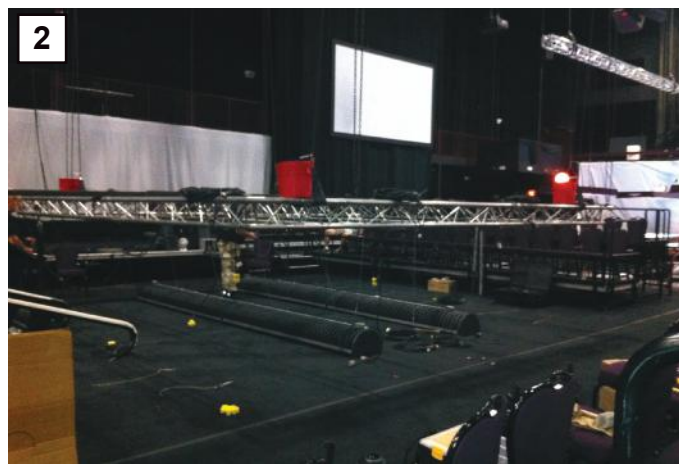

We get support from inside the industry only and we should all count our lucky stars for getting that. Without the major players from inside the billiard industry we would be looking at a pool scene devoid of tournaments. A very few companies do an awful lot for the game in the US."

By the time the fans file in for the first day of the Open the filming rigs have all been prepared and are ready to go. But few realize the days of work required to set everything up. The job begins with the lighting truss. All of the parts have to be laid out and assembled. The crew has become quite skilled at this and they can get that truss together quickly unless reporters, promoters or other stragglers get in the way and impede progress (see photo #1 above).

Once the truss is assembled it has to be strung up on large chain hoists that will lift it into position above where the table will be installed. At first the truss is lifted only a few feet. Then the crew goes to work hanging the banks of lighting that must be present in order to provide proper lighting not only of the table but also of the area around the table (see photos #2 below, and #3 top-left of next page).

Then the truss is lifted to its final height and the crews go to work installing the cameras and balancing the lighting. We see long-time Accu-Stats crewman Buster Lewis positioning one of the robotic cameras that are on each side of the arena and allow the fans to follow the action around the table without the interference of camera men either sharking the players or getting into the shot (see photo #4 below).

Once the light and camera rig is set then it is time to move in the table. Once it is set to be leveled the arena walls can come in and surround the set. These walls will soon be covered with sponsor billboards and, outside of that, spectator seating. (see photo #5, top-right)

And that is just the part of the production that those in the audience can see. Behind the scenes the commentators "box" must be set up and the sea of wires connecting screens and computers and switching equipment and tape decks must all be sorted and put together. This is not a job for the impatient. The cables from the cameras and microphones on the floor must all be routed into the proper boxes and everything must be able to talk to everything else. And then the team members must be sorted out with their own communications gear so that they can talk to whom they need to without hearing conversations that are of no use to them in their roles.

It is all an impressive task. And as Pat says: "It matters not in the least how much time we have. We never get finished until right at deadline."

But they do get finished. And we get to all sit back and watch the U.S. Open 9-Ball Championships from the comfort of our living rooms.

The American Poolplayers Association (APA) Knows How to Throw a Party!

www.poolplayers.com

LAKE SAINT LOUIS, MO (Sept. 9, 2016) — The American Poolplayers Association (APA) sure knows how to throw a party. And the party was in full effect in early August for the recently rebranded APA World Pool Championships.

Record attendance? Check. The most recognizable stars in the sport of pool? Check. Live streaming of all five event finals? Check. Epic pool party? Check — times two!

Throw in more than $1.2 million in cash, front row viewing of an iconic casino implosion and 10 days of non-stop poolplaying action, and it all adds up to a party unlike any other.

For thousands of die-hard APA members, it was paradise. For APA's staff and officials, it was business as usual, helping to make memories of a lifetime for their members.

This year's version of the world's largest pool tournament saw more than 12,000 players from 48 states and three countries competing on nearly 320 tables. APA members rubbed elbows with billiard celebrities like "The Black Widow" Jeanette Lee, "The Striking Viking" Ewa Laurance, Florian "Venom" Kohler, "Dr. Cue" Tom Rossman and instructor Lee Brett.

In the early hours of Tuesday, Aug. 16, many of those in attendance took in the opportunity to see the Riviera Hotel & Casino come tumbling down in a rare Vegas implosion. After 23 years of hosting APA tournaments at the now extinct "Riv," the timing couldn't have been more appropriate.

In the end though it was pool tournament action they came for, and it was pool tournament action they received.

In the 716-team 8-Ball World Championship,

Believe the Hype of Evansville, Ind., defeated Make It Work of Harahan, La., to take home $25,000 in cash and the championship title. As Runners-Up, Make It Work received $15,000 in prize money.

Teams in the 8-Ball Championship squared-off in a modified single-elimination format that ensured each team played at least twice before elimination. All 8-Ball Division teams automatically received $350 in national qualifier money, and the top 8 teams won at least $5,000. The 8-Ball Division began play on Aug. 15 and concluded on Aug. 20.

In the 476-team 9-Ball World Championship, it was Big Tyme Misfits of Spring, Texas, defeating Bruce Monnier of Port Charlotte, Fla., in the finals. Big Tyme Misfits took home $15,000 in 1st Place prize money. As Runners-Up, Bruce Monnier received $7,000 in cash.

The 9-Ball Championship was held Aug. 11-15, with teams competing in a modified single-elimination format that ensured each team played at least twice before elimination. All national qualifiers received a minimum of $350, with the top 8 teams winning at least $2,000.

After winning their divisions in weekly APA 8-Ball and 9-Ball League play and then placing in Local Team Championships throughout the United States, Canada and Japan, teams consisting of five to eight players, qualified to compete in the 2016 APA World Championships.

In the Jack & Jill Doubles Championship, it was Smokin' Ace of Kansas City, Mo., winning $3,500 in the finals with a victory over Plan B of Whitby, Ont. Plan B received $2,300 as Runner-Up in the 256-team event.

The finals of the Masters Championship featured We Are One of Orange County, Calif., defeating the Virginia Gentleman of Newport News, Va. We Are One took home $10,000 in 1st Place prize money, while the Virginia Gentleman received $5,000 as Runner-Up in the 256-team event.

In the finals of the Ladies 8-Ball Championship, it was KQ 2.0 of Stratford, Conn., defeating Miss Qs 607 of Oak Forest, Ill., to win $10,000 in 1st Place prize money. As Runners-Up, Miss Qs 607 received $5,000 in cash.

In addition, the APA conducted nearly round-the-clock MiniMania tournaments, which took place daily and were open to all APA members. The MiniMania tournaments offered multiple formats with 100% prize money payback that awarded nearly $260,000.

The APA, based in Lake Saint Louis, Mo., sanctions the world's largest amateur pool league, with leagues throughout the United States, Canada and Japan. More than 250,000 members compete in weekly 8-Ball and 9-Ball League play. The APA is generally recognized as the Governing Body of Amateur Pool, having established the official rules, championships, formats and handicap systems for the sport of amateur billiards.

The APA produces three major tournaments each year—the APA World Pool Championships, the APA Poolplayer Championships and the U.S. Amateur Championship—that, together, pay out more than $2 Million in cash and prizes annually!

The APA and its championships are sponsored by Aramith, Action Cues and PoolDawg.

Larson Wins First Pro Event

Goes Undefeated to Take Second Stop on North American Pool Tour (NAPT)

When 16-year-old April Larson first arrived at Shooter's Sports Bar & Billiards in Greyslake, IL on the weekend of August 18-21 to compete in the second stop on the North American Pool Tour, she got a glimpse of the winning trophy. She reportedly got very excited and mentioned to her traveling companion that she didn't care about the winning prize money. She wanted that trophy.

Four days, six opponents and seven matches later, she'd won her first pro event - the $5,000-added Summer 10 Ball Classic that had drawn 58 entrants to Shooter's Sports Bar and Billiards. Proving the point, Larson accepted the trophy and walked away without collecting the $3,400 check that went along with it. Adrienne Beach, a fellow competitor and regular on the Northwest Women's Pool Association Tour, chased her down and handed it to her. Larson glanced at it once, and then, a second time, at which point, according to Beach, her eyes went wide, her mouth dropped open, and she was rendered, literally, speechless.

"Is it the most you've ever won?" Beach asked her.

All the youngster could do was nod. It had been a busy summer for Larson. In July, she'd represented the USA at the Atlantic Cup Challenge. Two days after the conclusion of that event (won by Team Europe 11-3), Larson won her fifth straight Billiards Education Foundation Junior Nationals Championship. A week or two after that, she traveled to Las Vegas for the BCAPL Championships, competing in three events. She was part of the Women's Gold Scotch Doubles team that finished ninth, finished fifth in the Women's 9-Ball Singles Platinum division, and third in the Women's 8-Ball Singles Platinum Division, having defeated (on the loss side) Briana Miller and Eleanor Callado before being eliminated by Vivian Villareal in the semifinals.

"She's very steady, very composed & very solid,"

- Adrienne Beach,
a fellow competitor & regular on the Northwest Women's Pool Association Tour

In Illinois, Larson opened her winning campaign with a 7-3 win over Beth Fondell, and then, shut out Adrienne Beach, who would later present her with the winning trophy and even later, the winning check.

"She wasn't missing," said Beach. "Her fundamentals are so solid, and they don't change. It's like her heart rate never increases. She plays without fear."

"She's very steady, very composed and very solid," Beach added, noting that she'd never seen anything like Larson before. "Not at that age, no, especially with her composure."

Larson advanced, sending Jacqui Schroeder and JPNEWT veteran Jia Li to the loss side, both 7-5. This set her up to face Bonnie Arnold in a winners' side semifinal, as Tara Williams and Cassie Francois squared off in the other one. Larson defeated Arnold 7-2, and in the hot seat match, faced Williams, who'd downed Francois 7-1. In their first of two, Larson defeated Williams 7-4 and sat in the hot seat awaiting her return.

On the loss side, Arnold picked up Naomi

Williams, who'd eliminated Janet Atwell, double hill and Briana Miller 7-2 to reach her. Francois drew another junior champion Taylor Hansen, who had, a week or so earlier, defeated Vivian Villareal in the finals of the BCAPL's Women's 8-Ball Singles (Platinum Division), in which Larson had placed third. Sent to the loss side by Bonnie Arnold, Hansen defeated Sarah Rousey and Jia Li, both 7-5, to reach Francois.

Hansen advanced to the quarterfinals over Francois 7-2, as Williams spoiled a potential Hansen/Arnold re-match with a 7-1 victory over Arnold. Williams took the subsequent quarterfinal match 7-5 over Hansen, and was then, herself, eliminated 7-5 by Tara Williams in the semifinals.

Larson, though, really wanted the winning trophy for this event. She punctuated her undefeated run in her first pro event by shutting Williams out in the finals to claim the event title.

Billiards in Pop Culture Through the Years

- by Kristin Taggart

We have compiled a list of the top movies in billiard history. If you haven't seen them all, make sure you do! Really. If you are looking to brush up on your "hustling" techniques, you have come to the right place.

Pool Sharks - 1915 YouTube Movie Clip

First black and white silent billiard film

The film was written by and stars William Claude Dukenfield (W. C. Fields), who was an American comedian, actor, juggler and writer. This was his first film role. The film features early stop motion animation during the pool game.

The film follows how Fields and his rival both play a game of pool to win the heart of a woman. They both are pool sharks, so they play very well, which makes it very unlikely that either will win. The game gets out of hand and the woman ends up denying them both.

The Hustler - 1961 Youtube Movie Clip

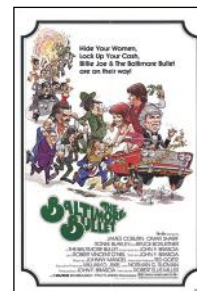

Tagline: They called him "Fast Eddie"... He was a winner... He was a loser... He was a hustler.

The Hustler is about a pool hustler, "Fast Eddie" Felson (Paul Newman) and his desire to get into professional hustling. He has tons of talent, but a self-destructive attitude. He plays against the best player in the country, Minnesota Fats (Jackie Gleason). He initially loses to Fats and gets involved with an unscrupulous manager. When they face off again, Eddie must pay a terrible personal price to do so.

Real pool player Rudolf Wanderone, who was originally known as "New York Fats" and "Chicago Fats", claimed to be the inspiration for the Minnesota Fats character and he eventually adopted the name as his own.

Pool champion, Willie Mosconi, had his voice and hands in this movie. All the pool shots in the movie are performed by the actors themselves except one. The massé shot was performed by Willie Mosconi.

The Baltimore Bullet - 1980 Youtube Movie Clip

Tagline: Hide your women. Lock up your cash. Billie Joe & the Baltimore Bullet are on their way!

A story about two pool hustlers in the United States. Released in 1980.

The movie's screenplay was written and produced by legendary film and stage dancer John Brasica. Several professional players made cameos in the movie including Lou Butera, Willie Mosconi, Steve Mizerak, Mike Sigel and Jimmy Mataya.

The "Baltimore Bullet," Nick Casey, is a legendary pool player who teaches his young sidekick all he knows. In the end, they both compete in a major match with a former rival of Casey.

According to IMDb, during filming, one of the actors, Omar Sharif, was staying nearby and sent his cousin to tell the Director where he was staying and ask for his blue pages. Due to their resemblance, the Director thought he was Sharif and rushed him into makeup!

The Baron and the Kid - 1984 Youtube Movie Clip

Tagline: Nothing to lose ... Everything to win.

Johnny Cash stars in this film as the "Baron," a legendary pool shark is reunited at a charity exhibition game with his long-lost son the "Cajun Kid." Through various adventures, they grow to know each other better and draw closer.

Premiered in November 1984. The movie is based on Cash's hit song "The Baron."

The Baron and The Kid was a competitor with Kenny Rogers' similar TV-movie, The Gambler. Cash's second wife, Jane Carter, co-stars in this movie with Cash. The movie was directed by American television and film director Gary Nelson, known for many TV series including Gilligan's Island and Happy Days.

The Color of Money - 1986 Youtube Movie Clip

Tagline: The Hustler isn't what he used to be, but he has the next best thing. A kid who is.

The story of Fast Eddie is continued from the original movie, The Hustler made in 1961.

It takes place about 20 years after the original movie with Eddie retired. Retired pool hustler, Fast Eddie Felson, finds a young and promising pool player named Vincent (Tom Cruise) in a local bar. Eddie offers to teach Vincent how to be a hustler. As he begins teaching him his hustling ways, he eventually gets back into the hustling game and plays Vincent.

Speaking Roles and Cameo Appearances include: Steve Mizerak, Grady Mathews and Keith McCready, Jimmy Mataya, Mark Jarvis, Howard Vickery, Louie Roberts, Iggy Pop, Richard Price and even the director himself, Martin Scorsese.

Tom Cruise did all of his own pool shots in the movie except for one that would take him too long to learn, so it was done by Mike Sigel(a technical director). Cruise mentioned, to prepare for the role, he bought a pool table for his apartment and practiced for hours on end.

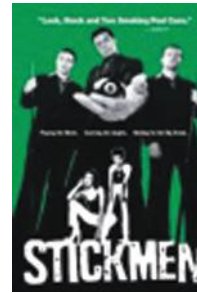

Ben Stiller, who was a film student at NYU at the time, created a student film, The Hustler of Money, that parodied the movie. The film actually appeared on an episode of Saturday Night Live.

Paul Newman was the one who approached Martin Scorsese about doing The Color of Money film. Scorsese got the idea for the movie, Goodfellas, when shooting The Color of Money.

Kiss Shot - 1989 Youtube Movie Clip

After losing her job, a single mother, played by Whoopi Goldberg, turns to billiards and tries to make a career out of her playing talent. Her journey takes her in search of a new career and new love. The scene in the biker bar, there are a group of bikers standing around watching them play. This group were really Harley Owners Group (HOG) members. Actress Tasha Scott co-stars in this film with Goldberg as a child actress.

Stickmen - 2001 Youtube Movie Clip

Tagline: Playing the Shots. Covering the Angles. Waiting for the Big Break.

This movie was made and released in New Zealand.

Dave owns a pool hall that he rents from "Daddy," where the Stickmen play pool regularly. When he gets into a bind with money, he gets these three young men to enter into a pool tournament. The men become involved in the underground pool tournament called "Daddy's Game" ran by a local Greek crime lord named Daddy. They enter into the pool tournament with the name "The Stickmen" and while the games begin, Daddy's guys hire women to distract them and prevent them from winning. In the end, will they save Dave, take home the money and the girls or will they lose everything?

Poolhall Junkies - 2002 Youtube Movie Clip

Movie tagline: Sometimes you get a second shot... Make it.

There were no camera tricks or special film editing used for any of the billiards shots in the film. These shots were done by billiards legend Robert LeBlanc. The main character, Johnny, who has an obsession with pool, is held back by his mentor, Joe, a shady hustler who decides how and who Johnny plays. Johnny finally breaks free from Joe, only to end up getting beaten up by Joe's guys. This leads him to leave the world of pool hustling and getting a normal job. Years later, he is forced to go back into his old ways as his younger brother begins following Johnny in his hustling footsteps and getting caught up with Joe, Johnny's old shady pool hustling mentor.

Behind the Nine - 2003 Youtube Movie Clip

Tagline: Trust... is overrated.

Behind the Nine is about a pool hustler running an illegal high-stakes pool tournament at his house. The final 8 players are playing for $500,000, which brings in a lot of questionable characters and he is afraid that this prize money will get stolen.

Shooting Gallery - 2005 Youtube Movie Clip

Tagline: There's no such thing as luck to a hustler.

A street-smart pool player (Freddie Prinze Jr.) falls in with a pack of hustlers. As he rises in the underground circuit, he lands in the middle of a match between his boss and a crooked cop when he's played as a pawn in the contest.

Turn the River - 2007 Youtube Movie Clip

Tagline: Sometimes Your Last Shot is Your First Break.

Gulley, who's in middle school, lives with his father and step-mother. He has secretly been in touch with his mother, Kailey, a pool hustler, who wants to win big and take Gulley to Canada. With the help of Quinette, who runs Quinn's Pool Hall, Kailey may get her big shot.

The main character, Kailey (Famke Janssen) did all of her own pool shots in the movie. Many of the extras in the pool hall were actually regulars in the place.

9 Ball Movie - 2012 Youtube Movie Clip

Tagline: Her talent made her a winner. Her heart made her a champion.

A young woman forced into pool hustling by her uncle, aspires to "break free" in a struggle for herself and her game, to become a professional player. Jennifer Barretta, the main character, is actually apart of the Women's Professional Billiard Association (WPBA). Delta-13 racks and banners were featured in several scenes from this movie!
