Prologue

Happy Birthday Goldbullet! Welcome to Big Bubby's Colorful Keepsakes! We at EDS wanted to commemorate your time here in Holostars, so we decided to create a scrapbook filled with prose poetry, short stories, and drawing the best moments from all of your incredible stream from debut all the way to your 3D showcase!

You have accomplished quite a bit these past two years. Since now we can see you (and your pecs) shine in 3D, We hope these stories and art will bring back memories of all the fun times we shared. We want to see our sniper aim even higher than before! Until you reach the golden sun.

Solving the Puzzles for Love

Gibby climbed the puzzle tower, hoping not to fall to death. Despite this, a smile shone on his face. He loved puzzles and wanted to solve as many of them as he could before he woke up. He was a sheep, after all. Wait, why was he a sheep. He sighed. Dreams usually didn't make sense. After all, he once had a dream where the key was purple, so he had to find a purple car.

He continued ascending the tower, pulling out blocks and watching them disappear into the void. Gibby didn't know where the blocks would go, but at least he didn't disappear into the void too. Other people weren't so lucky. Many sheepmen like Gibby appeared in his dreams with him, but only a handful made it to the top unscathed. One sheepman hoped to win the heart of possibly two women. Gibby hoped he could solve puzzles forever, and he just might have gotten his wish.

Silver and Gold

Camira (@camira)

Silver and Gold

"Jurard really coulda warned me about how hot this place was gonna be, if nothing else..."

It'd been a couple dozen minutes since Goldbullet had entered the ruined temple to pursue the mission assigned to him by his leader. Apparently there was a great deal of treasure to be found deep inside, and Gibby wasn't thrilled about it. While he understands that it would greatly help ARMIS's financial situation, it felt stupid not to go in as a group, especially with him recovering from a dislocated wrist, and especially if the rumors of it being haunted were true. Alas, here he is, with nothing but a lantern to his name. After completing another seemingly ancient puzzle, he starts walking down a long hallway, looking unnerved by his surroundings.

"That's gotta be at least the fourth or fifth skull I've passed..."

He can't shake the feeling that he's being watched—no, followed. And the longer he's in the hallway, the more overwhelming that feeling becomes. But every time he turns around, he sees nothing. After the sixth failed turnaround, he grasps the side of his head and sighs.

"...I'm goin' crazy in here..."

- The hallway reaches its end eventually and Goldbullet is able to see a glint of gold glittering in the distance. He smiles lightly.

- "About damn time! Come to papa!"

- "YOU/DIDN'T/DRINK/YOUR/DAILY 250 MILLION LITERS/OF WATER~YET~"

- "What the f-?!"

- SMACK

- "OW-!"

- He's caught off guard by a loud sound and deep, distorted voice, followed by a slap to his face that made him nearly lose his grip on the lantern. He looks around frantically, but sees no one no matter where he looks. He takes a deep breath and starts walking faster toward the treasure.

- "Not stayin' here any longer than I have to~"

"THERE/ARE/AT/LEAST/50/DIFFERENT NATURALLY-GROWN/WASP COLONIES/BENEATH/YOUR FLOORBOARDS. THEY/STING/LIKE THIS."

SMACK

"AGH- f b**-!"

He starts running, but it never feels like the treasure gets any closer. Not any closer than the presence looming over his back. He can see its shadow. He stops in his tracks to catch his breath and turns around slowly, horrified.

"HELLO,/GASTON/BAXTER."

"AAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAA--"

Not a word of that expedition came out of Goldbullet's mouth after he returned home empty-handed. Nope. Not going back there.

Sweet Victory

The sun was beaming and unyielding in its fierce warmth, the world ablaze as it bathed in the greatest of rays. The cold has faded its way into a faraway place. Little dew drops dissipate and leave its traces, a reminder of a season well-spent as the clouds cried about their inevitable end. The only thing that floods the place now are the memories of a summer spent dilly-dallying throughout the day. The scent of sweet cherries and other kinds of fragrant berries completely suffuse the senses, enticing enough to take a few bites and have a little taste of each. Indeed, the meadow's own flowers frolic among the greenest of fields one has ever laid eyes upon. Their colors shine, rhythms jive, and seedlings come alive as they're challenged to get into a line—one of disarray—stumbling forward over their own two feet. A loud voice pierces through the cacophony and an army of little followers tread carefully; it's Captain Goldbullet and his Bubbies!

What marvelous sights has this flock seen? How many hurdles have been conquered to reach such a lively scene? It's time for the next escapade nobody has yet foreseen. But, they must travel closely and be each others' warmth for some days can also turn out to be just as cold. There's danger that hangs loosely in nature's stride. The tall grass wavers behind, seemingly cowering to an enemy in sight. Its soft shell lures any prey with ease, but is tough enough to simply stop and please. Beware of its antics, defuse it like a bomb that ticks! After all, teamwork and determination will always win. Proven to be a strong opponent, the Bubbies bring home fruits of labor to their kin. Until then, celebrate and eat with mouths wide open! Savor the taste of all the berries that exist and let any negativity be dismissed. Might another adventure await their tiny feet as Captain Goldbullet leads them onto the next, greater and even bigger feats.

A Tale of Folly & Flames

Goldbullet did not fall easily. As the CQC expert of ARMIS, he often battled corruption beasts with ease. So what

- would a little hot sauce do to such a well-seasoned man?

After hearing rumors of Tempus's attempt, Goldbullet purchased some hot sauce, setting them up in the tavern.

- While cooking some chicken nuggets to add some flavor, he heard the sound of a small crowd approaching. The smell of nuggets summoned the Bubbies.

- They stood around in awe as Gibby showcased his setup. Was he going to eat all of the sauces? Could he handle it? Would the Bubbies get the leftovers??

- "Just a little dab will do ya," Gibby stated as proudly ate his sauced nuggets, the sauce getting gradually hotter. Nothing seemed to be going wrong, until suddenly Gibby burped, and burped again.

The burps slowly evolved until fire spewed from Gibby's mouth, his body pushing the heat out anyway it could.

- Some Bubbies shielded each other, while others quietly cheered for more. It was not long before Gibby had to be contained, the consequences of the hot sauce roaring throughout the tavern.

Rumor is that parts of the tavern are still charred. But don't tell Big Bubby.

"I CAN'T TAKE IT ANYMORE!"

Startled bubbies dropped their brooms and scattered as Goldbullet's voice boomed throughout the empty tavern. There had been no bounties in a long while, and the tavern's only customers had been his fellow bounty hunters. Goldie looked down from the tall barstool to a bubbly who perched at his feet. The bubbly looked back at him, their eyes glistening.

"Oh honey, I'm sorry. I didn't mean to yell," he picked up the rotund bubbly, cradling it gingerly in his arms.

"I'm just so bored. . ."

The bubbly blinked twice and reached out to touch Mama's face.

Let's go on a trip, Mama!

Goldbullet was in shock. He had just heard the bubbly talk. . . in his head.

"Woah, well that's freaky. But yeah, bubbly, you're right!" The sniper took a few moments to think. He had been so hangry recently. Rations had been slim, and he couldn't remember the last time he had something sweet.

"OH, I KNOW!" he stood up in excitement, glasses behind the bar trembling as he did. Not explaining any further, he scooped up as many bubbies as he could and began bowling them into the back of his camper van. He jumped in the driver seat, buckled up, and began to drive. Bubbies looked at each other in confusion, giving each other little "I don't know" shrugs.

They drove for hours, Goldbullet telling stories to keep the bubbies entertained. During the pit stops, Goldie recruited more bubbies, each bringing a dish on board to share. Haggis, pierogies, bratwurst, pad thai, balut—but nothing hit the spot.

"I need my little snack. . ." Goldie, weary from travel, began to feel himself drift off at the wheel of the van. When he woke up, he found himself sitting in the passenger seat. Stepping outside, he found himself surrounded by a forest of cherry blossoms.

They'd finally made it.

Xenokuni.

- Scooping up the nearest bubbies, they ran to the closest konbini. They began filling their baskets with snacks, laughing and squeaking in excitement.

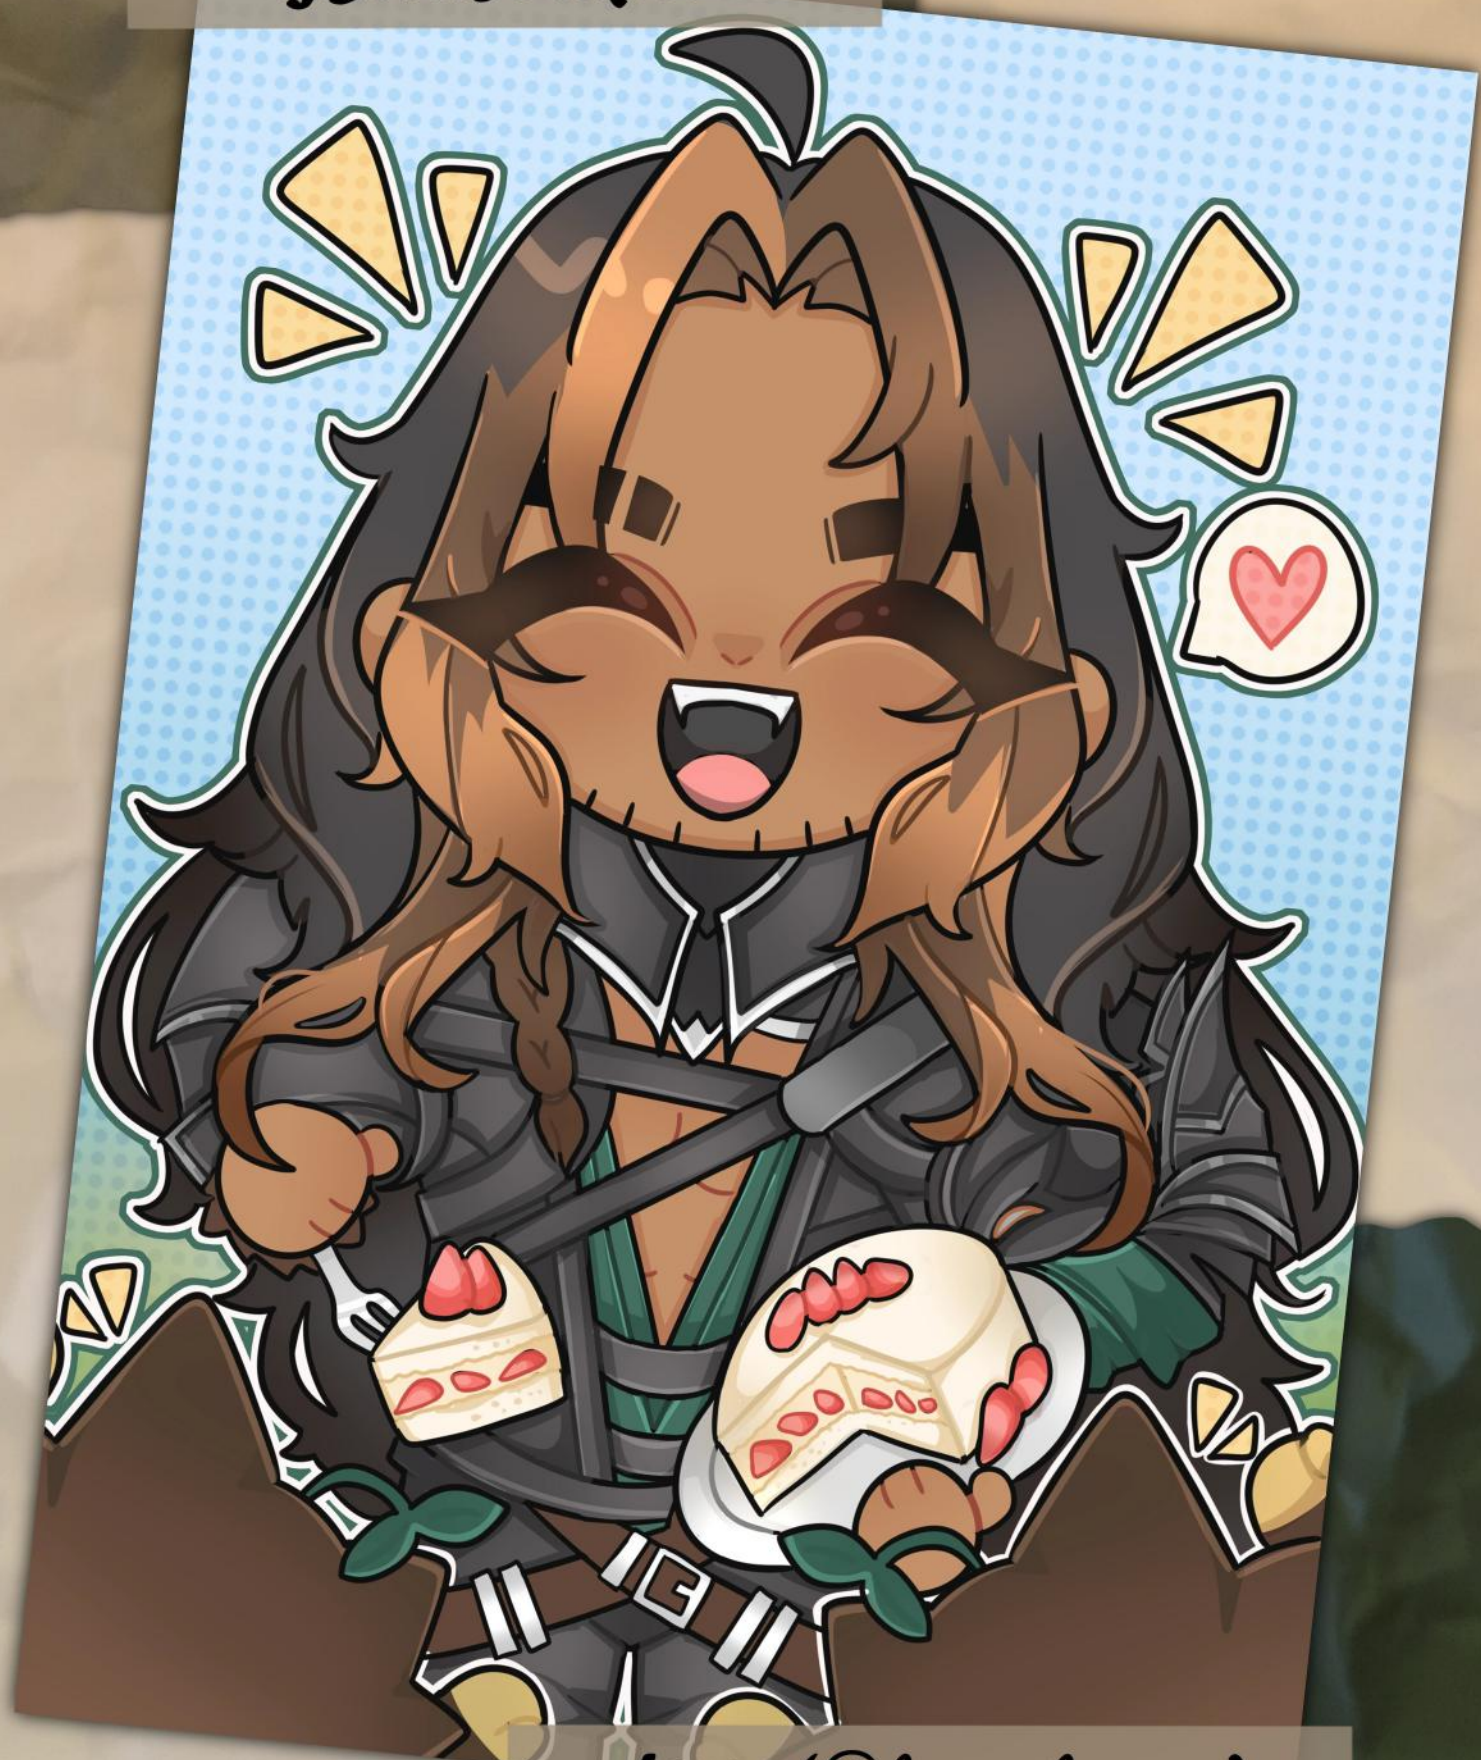

- When they returned, the other bubbies had set up a blanket under the blossoms. Mama's smile was electric. The spring breeze had rejuvenated him. He made himself comfortable, and the feast began.

- "Ah, this is what I needed. Sweet treats with the sweetest of bubbies!" they chirped and hollered, brawling for the best snacks, sharing little pocky smoochies, and getting tipsy on soju.

- Such perfect days like this never ended; they lived forever in the hearts of bubbies. Bubbies knew that no matter how long the journey or how sweet the reward was at the end, what made it all special was the time they spent together, with each other and with Goldbullet.

Berry Familiar Life

The Goldbullet I knew was trapped in a prison.

A hard-knock life to make ends meet and cater to his chimeras.

Life could have been luxurious and fit for royalty.

Life could have been boring, cooped up in a cubicle.

Life could have been all his in a maniacal, iron fist.

But this particular life changed in a flash.

Dirty greys were bathed in pure whites, grassy greens, and clear blues from Mother Nature.

A gentle breeze lifted weights off of his chest.

Despite his newly sharpened features, he's still a total softie.

Despite all the battle-driven darkness surrounding his heart, he detects a new, pure freedom.

And despite the ghastly out-of-body experience, the sniper still calls The Badlands his home.

The prospect of a new life chapter illuminates.

His attire glows gold, emerald, and an unfamiliar yet befitting cobalt.

A simple platter serves him a treat.

The berries on top are the fruits of his labor.

The berries taste sweeter when shared with his chimeras.

Lorraine still has his back.

The Bubbies are still rooting for him.

The Goldbullet I know now can relax as the wind takes him to new and exciting places.

And he hopes his followers can find the same joy.

The pristine floor of the grand cathedral hall floods with warm light, entering through the stained windows

- from above. Standing in the middle of such a welcoming hall, Goldbullet knew better than to fall to the pleasant-like surroundings. He already took a mental note of the peculiar things within the room from the moment he and
- ARMIS entered: the strangely stagnant wind, the calm atmosphere enveloping them, and the mysterious thick strand of black goo at the far-end of the hall, which
- revealed itself as a corruption beast.

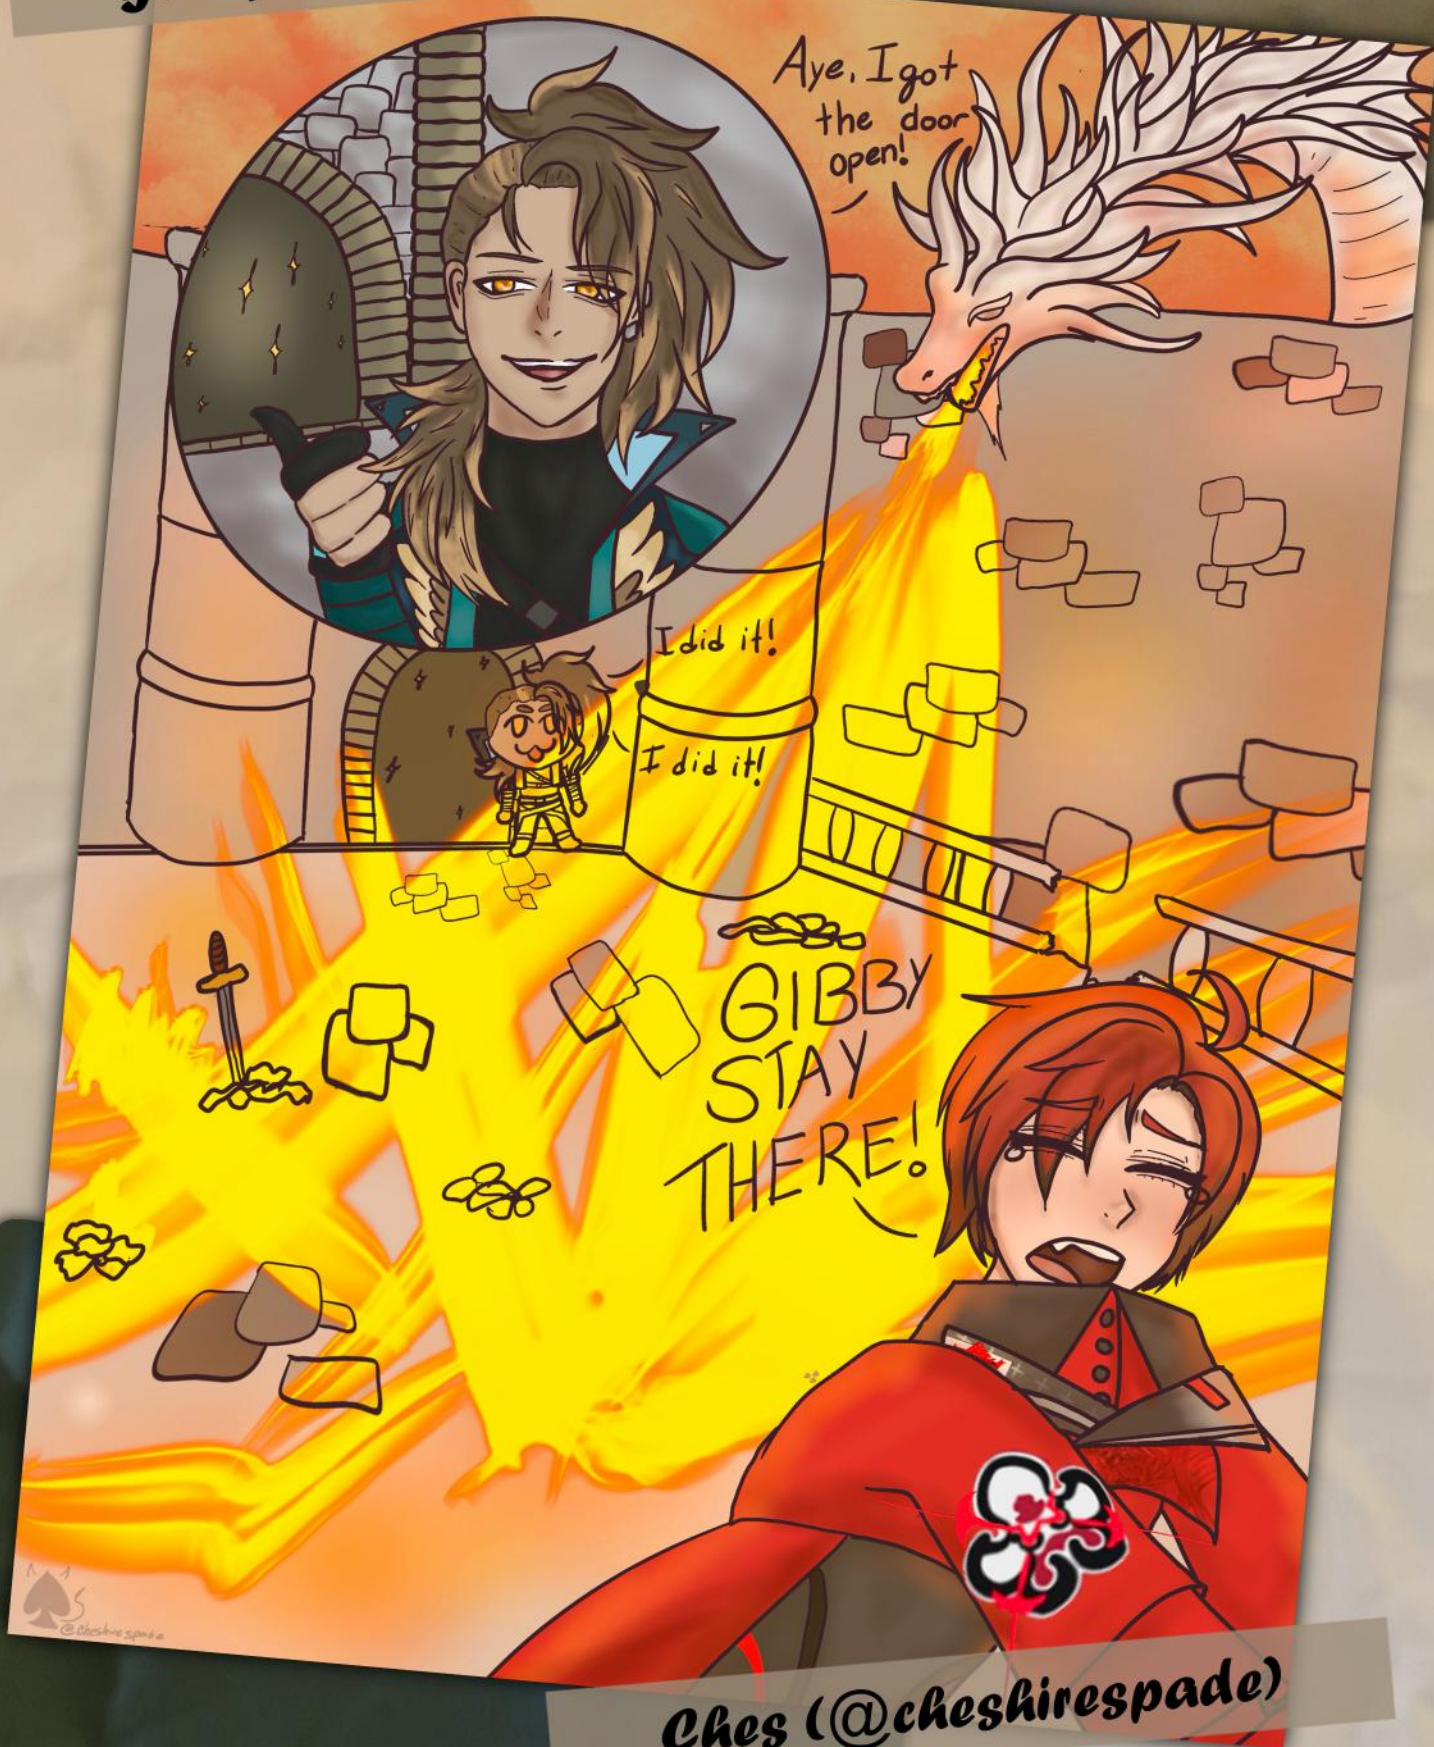

- The corruption beast hovers over them as it surrounds them, forcing them to battle against perhaps one of the strongest corruption beasts they have faced. Goldbullet shoots at the beast's chest, yet it seems undisturbed, surging forward towards him.

- He jumps to the side, dodging the beast. Goldbullet looks around to find his teammates—Ruze standing in front of Li'l Timmy, while ordering Jurard and Octavio to shoot the beast.

- ARMIS returns to a routine that Goldbullet knows by heart. Instinctively, he inhales deeply, controlling his breathing as grips on his rifle, Loraine. Then, carefully, he drops his cheek to his rifle, aims at the beast's head, then squeezes the trigger.

Everyone can dream, including grown up men, of course. You would think a sniper would dream to purchase a new scope or a new gun. But for one particular felicitous man, his biggest dream was to make...

"Holostars Pizzeria."

Ah.

Every man's biggest dream, exactly.

"Oh."

Well, not every man's biggest dream. But it was one for Goldbullet.

"Think about it, Octavio! We open our own restaurant and can design our ooooooown menu items! It would be perfect," he said enthusiastically, with images of pepperoni and cheese and beef and mushroom all over his head. It was different in the puppeteer's image, though. The crust was stuffed with cream, and the entire bread was covered with mango. Mango for life to him!

But, yeah. Having a Pizzeria would be nice.

The Horror of ARMJSween

Twas the night of Halloween and tricks were bountiful for those brave enough to wander. The Badlands were not exempt from this tradition, corrupted beasts only one of the many horrors afflicting the bounty hunter group Armis. While Gibby, Ruze, and Octavio kept to the classics of the holiday, Jurard stood out as the biggest fright of the night: taxes.

After addressing the true horror of life, Gibby distributed small plastic pumpkins to the boys, explaining how trick or treating worked. Ruze hopped in as needed, making sure to lecture Jurard before he embarrassed them. Gibby and Octavio could only laugh as the pair's arguing escalated, pushing the red coded men out of the house for the priority of the night: free candy.

The two continued on for a bit until they realized only children were running from door to door. They looked at each other as they forgot how silly it would be for three bounty hunters and a sheet of paper to ask for candy. But the team had handled worse, and what is a little embarrassment for free stuff?

With a quick nod, the four walked up to the door, sheepishly knocking before screaming:

ARMIS is currently on a field mission. With yesterday's well-prepared shooting practice, Jurard, Gibby and Ruze were confident enough to go on another expedition.

Ruze wasn't a fan of pistols, however since the mission strangely requires a long ranged weapon, he chose to use a medium-ranged 'Wingman' pistol. With Jurard's guidance, he should have a basic knowledge of how to handle the pistol. Jurard didn't worry about Gibby at all because he's the head sniper of ARMIS and an expert in all types of guns.

On the day of the mission, Ruze and Gibby unfortunately weren't going their bestest because of their accidental curse of 'the ISP' and 'the blue screen of death'. Jurard, who is obviously well prepared, has to take care of the corruption beasts alone while carrying their fallen teammates. Well, at least less injured Gibby can still recover and handle a few gunshots.

"I SHOULD'VE BRING OCTAVIO INSTEAD!" Jurard shouts to the heavens.

Meanwhile Octavio, who is on his days off, is munching his popcorn in the Church of O.

Hey man, Happy Birthday to ya. Hope that you like the project, we worked hard to make it special for ur Birthday. Take care man

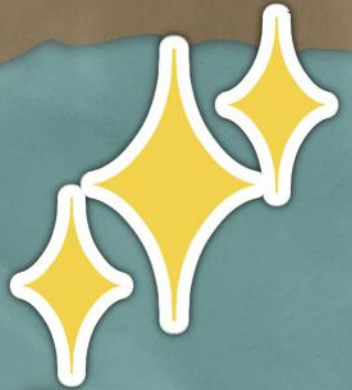

- Tidus

A big happy birthday from the Bubbies to you, Gibby! Thank you for sharing your joy, laughter, and time with us, and we look forward to making more wonderful memories with you in the upcoming year. Thank you for all you do for this community, and happy birthday!

Well... Well... Well. Can't believe that I made this silly little project for a tall, zesty, sniper guy who can't even say my name correctly, but then again, you can't write the alphabet properly, so that checks out. Anyways, Happy Birthday, Gasto-I-mean GoldBullet!(yeah) I hope that you enjoyed this project that started with me hyper-fixating one evening on a concept for 30 minutes straight. I didn't know that I had this drive to create projects and collaborate with many incredible people. It was only when you showed up in my life that the inspiration flooded my mind, and without that, I don't think I would be here with you all today. So thank you, for existing, for being who you are, for never faltering, and for making such an amazing community - I'm truly proud to be a bubbly. Now that the sappiness is over, I can finally reveal another secret that I've been hiding from you. Here it goes... I've been messing with you by switching the pronunciation of my name, so you'd have to say both. (also huney isn't my real username-) ANYWAYS AS ALWAYS "May your health stay goated, your pockets stay loaded, your happiness stays bloated, and your gay ass stays golden" See ya in the next project!!!

Thank you!

To our golden-haired sniper,

From the moment we were brought to life, you took us under your wing. You vowed to create a place where we could draw, dance, and sing.

Up through your 3D Live, the bubbies watched you grow and thrive. We laughed, cheered, yelped and cried. Your growth had us beaming with pride.

You've shot a bullet straight into our hearts, we hope that our journeys never part. You've taught us to be true to ourselves, to love, care, and cherish like nobody else.

In return, we hope with all of our might, that we can lift you up when things aren't as bright.
From dawn till dusk, no matter the weather,
let us play, sing and dance together.

We'll share our interests, hopes, and dreams.
We'll bring yours to life as a team!
Witness our drive, our strength, and our undying passion, to you our wonderful sniper - our sweetest assassin.

With a joyous heart, a shining laugh, and warmth all the while, thank you, Mama Gibby, for always making us smile.

Signed by the Bubbies

Happy Birthday!
