Clip On Bells

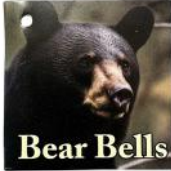

The purpose of hiking with bells is rooted in the idea that bears, being naturally wary of humans, would rather avoid contact given the opportunity. Because bears typically have excellent hearing but can be surprised by silent, fast-moving hikers, an audible warning is considered prudent. Often clipped to backpacks, belts, articles of clothing, walking sticks, bikes or saddles, they have become symbolic of outdoor excursions when out in the woods. A MUST HAVE during hunting season.

"I came across New England Bells at a country store on a visit to New Hampshire last month and was so impressed with the quality. I ordered some once I got home from my trip and couldn't be happier. The quality and sound are top notch. NOTICEABLY better than what you would get from other places. I bought a door hanger for myself and several for gifts for loved ones. All of them love them too. Great response from everyone I gave them to. Truly one of a kind and you can feel and hear the quality. If you are on the fence go for it. You won't be disappointed." -Jason

Dog Collar Bells

Always know where your pet is, whether hunting or on a hike. Choose from PVC-Web material loop with a heavy duty snap for easy use. Or for hunting dogs, we suggest our original style with a leather loop that is permanently stapled together. Both loops fit a collar up to 1.5" wide. These hold up even in the toughest conditions and can be heard from a distance in the thickest grasses. These bells can also be used on horses, goats, luggage or children.

"I was blown away by the ruggedness and excellent quality of these bells. If these don't last 100 years I will be very much surprised. Nice job!!" -Roger

"I have two dogs and purchased a #2 and a #4 bell, this way each dog has a separate sound. We have lots of trails behind our house and dogs are off leash, the sound helps me know where they are. It also lets the local animals know we are out there:"
-Holly

NEW 3: "Absolutely love the dog collar bell. I run with my dog every day and it's a way for people to hear him and animals. Plus sounds pretty!!!" - Deborah

"Love these little bells as ornaments on our Christmas tree. They serve a dual purpose! They look great, all shiny and festive. Also, and a big plus, they ward off our inquisitive pets...Hazel and Finn, for when they decide to explore the tree, or worse yet, to climb the tree, the jingle sound scares them away. They have not figured out...yet where the sound is coming from, so consequently, have been giving the tree a very wide berth! Thank you, New England Bells" -Bette
