TEAM UP WITH A REALTOR® TO FIND YOUR DREAM HOME

You and your REALTOR® can make a great team.

But your REALTOR® can't read your mind. Help your REALTOR® find the best options for you by sharing what you're looking for and offering feedback.

STATE YOUR PRIORITIES.

Tell your trusted real estate professional about your must-haves, nice-to-haves, and dealbreakers. Your REALTOR® can find available homes with the features that matter to you. You and your REALTOR® can also discuss the best ways to meet your goals. If privacy is important to you, your REALTOR® could search for larger lot sizes, properties near undeveloped land, or even homes with tall fences or fewer neighbors. If you have plans for a growing family or multi-generational household, your REALTOR® can find homes with more space or remodeling potential.

DISCUSS YOUR BUDGETARY GUIDELINES.

Your REALTOR® is an expert in the local real estate market and can show you options in your price range. Your REALTOR® may also provide you information about assistance programs that could help you.

YOU DON'T NEED TO HAVE ALL THE ANSWERS.

That's why you hired a REALTOR®! Ask your REALTOR® about any aspect of your home search or purchase that you don't understand. But remember: your REALTOR® adheres to a strict Code of Ethics and may not be able to answer some questions, especially ones that involve opinions instead of facts, ones that deal with legal issues, or ones that involve areas outside the expertise of your REALTOR®. In those cases, your REALTOR® can often suggest impartial sources for you to explore.

By hiring a REALTOR®, you have a professional on your side dedicated to helping you succeed in your transaction. Your vision and your REALTOR®'s expertise are a winning combination to help you find a home you'll love for years to come.

ABOUT THE BUILDER

Leidy N Morales, Builder and Owner of Leidy's Homes along with her husband, Roberto Morales, mutually have supported each other to achieve one of their dreams, which was to be home builders.

In 2019, that dream was achieved as they built their first home. In 2016, prior to building new construction homes, they began a project to remodel some uninhabitable houses to sell and/or rent which once finished, turned into a success! After a few years and multiple projects later, they decided to build their own new home together. It was with this project, past experience in the construction world and having built their personal home, they knew they were ready and prepared to start their own home building business. In 2021, Leidy's Homes, LLC was born!

Leidy's Homes is a new home building company that goes above and beyond just building a house to sell it, but they strive to have satisfied clients and they value each one of them and their new homes. They offer new ideas, designs, and quality. At Leidy's Homes, they want you to know that their standard is luxury.

HIT PARADE

As the Parade of Homes celebrates 70 years in Amarillo, this year's houses return to timeless designs

BY JASON BOYETT | DESIGN BY KAYLA MORRIS

"It's spread out across Amarillo this year, and there's something for everyone," says Mirna Fewell, the 2025 Parade of Homes co-chair and founder of the independent MGroup real estate brokerage. This is the 70th anniversary of the annual Parade of Homes, which the Texas Panhandle Builders Association first brought to Amarillo in 1955.

Those early decades of the event took place in a single city block. Over the course of two weekends in 2025, this year's Parade of Homes—April 24 to 27 and May 1 to 4—will stretch from Bushland to North Amarillo to new developments almost to Canyon.

The brand-new homes on display from local builders aren't exclusively high-end homes, either. "The Parade is for everyone," Fewell says. "We'll have a million-dollar property out in the Woodlands and normal-size homes around a $300,000 price point."

Fewell's co-chair, Hanna Podzemny, a Realtor at MGroup, says the term "luxury"—when applied to homes in this year's Parade— isn't necessarily a statement about a home's price. "You can have a luxurious new home in the $250,000 price range. It's about affordability. It's not just high-end homes," she says.

New homes at more affordable sizes don't just impact a mortgage payment, Fewell explains. "You'll have more affordable insurance with a smaller home. You have lower maintenance costs, because you're buying a new home instead of upgrading something older," she says. Today's buyers have to ask themselves if they'd rather spend $300,000 on a fixer-upper or the same amount on brand-new construction.

For some, that's an easy answer. Not every buyer wants to endure the headaches of giving a facelift to an older home. In selling real estate, Fewell and Podzemny both continue to encounter buyers eager for a move-in ready home.

Goodbye Farmhouse, Hello Homestead

One of the draws of the Parade of Homes is the opportunity to see new trends, innovative ideas, and how different builders in this area approach living spaces and design. Fewell says to expect a lot of diversity. "Because of the pandemic, home-buyers became interested in creative work-from-home spaces," she says. "You see a lot of open spaces and big patios. I've seen some that are taking us back to a more geometric, mid-century modern design. And some that are a lot more vintage or cottage-style—like some of the cozy homes in Wolflin or Bivins, but a brand-new house."

Podzemny describes it as a shift away from the ultra-modern styles of architecture and design magazines, and back toward traditional designs. Podzemny, Fewell and Beatriz Kimball of the TPBA all judged the Lubbock Parade of Homes last year, and say that event to our south had a similar stylistic feel. "We saw more timeless designs, which you might have seen 20 or 30 years ago. They looked so good," Fewell says. "We're going to see some of that this year [in Amarillo]."

Another change they expect to be reflected in this year's home designs is a noticeable shift away from the modern farmhouse aesthetic. "That look got overused a few years ago with all the white and black. The style now has turned into rich colors, warmer tones, sophistication and elegance," Fewell says.

It reflects not just changing trends but a younger generation of homebuyers. "New generations come into the market and the workforce as they reach adulthood," says Podzemny. Builders are hoping to appeal to those homebuyers—and they have a much different mindset. “Everyone’s into homesteading,” she says, reflecting another trend driven by the post-pandemic years. “Chickens and homesteading and sourdough are such a thing right now.”

AS SEEN IN

That means multi-functional living spaces, kitchens designed for homemade food production (think deep sinks, walk-in pantries and double ovens), larger backyards and even dedicated gardening spaces or outdoor workspaces.

“Every builder is different,” says Fewell, and one of the highlights of the Parade, for her, is seeing the creative ways builders approach these national trends—and what that looks like in the Texas Panhandle compared to other parts of the country.

Prizes and Technology

The large geographic spread of this year’s Parade, which features several homes in new developments along the city’s edges, means mobile-friendly mapping is critical. Fewell, Podzemny and the TPBA team are working on that technology now. “We want to make it easier for every attendee to navigate around the city and look at every house,” says Kimball.

As in previous years, paraders who accomplish this—by having their ticket scanned at every home in the event—will be entered to win one of several attention-getting prizes. The event’s Gold Prize includes a combined $7,000 shopping spree from Casey Carpet One and Marble Depot. Silver and Bronze Prizes, respectively, include shopping sprees at ProLift Garage ($3,000) and Sound by Design ($1,000).

Tickets for the 2025 Parade of Homes are $10 a person, and children younger than 12 are free. Tickets can be purchased at Pak-A-Sak locations and the TPBA Office at 5601 Enterprise Circle, as well as online at amarilloparadeofhomes.com.

OF

70 YEARS ON PARADE

ADVERTISING
THE AMARILLO
SUNDAY TIMES
ON SEPT. 11, 1955

The combination of sleek new construction and mobile mapping may make the Parade of Homes feel like a distinctly of-the-moment event, but this year actually marks the 70th year of this local tradition. On September 11, 1955, the Sunday morning edition of the local newspaper touted “Amarillo’s First Parade of Homes” in which local builders in the Texas Panhandle Home Builders Association had planned a unique way to observe National Home Week.

From 2 to 10 p.m. that day, 14 new homes—most of them furnished—were open for public inspection. (The homes remained open each evening that week and all day the following Sunday.) And it truly was a parade: All the 1955 homes were located within the 3600 block of Doris Drive, in the up-and-coming Paramount Terrace neighborhood. Families would visit one home after another, walking their way down the block. Streets were closed to traffic.

The city made a big deal of it, and Amarillo Mayor Art Jordan brought an interesting twist to the Parade’s opening ceremony. “Instead of the usual ribbon-cutting,” the newspaper explained, “the city’s chief executive will saw through a pine board at the gate to make the official opening.”

The Parade of Homes chairman that year was B.R. Jones. “Home building, like any competitive industry, must manufacture an improved product each year. And it must offer its product at a competitive price. Builders in the Panhandle have been hard at work planning how to do just that,” he told the newspaper.

Among those mid-century improvements was a modern concept introduced by Joe Glover, Jr., at 3613 Doris Drive. Built with what came to be known as “Fabricon” house design, that home was built as a single large room, “completely free of interior partitions,” with steel trusses and slab flooring. Once the floors, walls and ceiling were completed as a 1,450-square-foot shell, the home was divided into rooms and living areas with prefabricated, non-load-bearing interior room dividers. The process was the brainchild of an Austin architect named Ned A. Cole, who began designing and constructing prefabricated walls and efficient interior storage units after World War II.

Glover went on to build several other partially prefabricated homes using that method in Paramount Terrace and other local neighborhoods throughout the 1950s.

The Natcha at 7265 Jameson Road is one of 12 houses to be included in Amarillo's Parade of Homes—Future '66, which will open at 5 p.m. Saturday with a ribbon-cutting ceremony. Sponsored by the Texas Panhandle Home Builders Association, the show incorporates the talents of 12 top builders. More than 70,000 families are expected to tour the week-long parade on Jameson Road.

Other builders showing homes on Doris Drive in 1955 included A.R. Fulton, E.O. Milburn, R.G. Hughes, Howard Lawson, Norman Penhall and Herb Staloch. Many of the homes boasted modern conveniences like evaporative coolers, electric clothes dryers and built-in electric ovens.

That first Parade of Homes was the culmination of an exceptionally busy post-war period in Amarillo. Driven by the opening of the Amarillo Air Force Base in 1951—which employed 15,000 people at its peak—builders erected nearly 18,000 new homes in the area from the late 1940s into early 1950s. New developments were planned, neighborhoods sprang into existence, and home ownership skyrocketed.

The Parade of Homes was one way developers found builders and builders found new owners. "The developer would offer a discount on the lots for everyone who built in the parade," says Bob Fenley, past president of the Texas Panhandle Builders Association. Now 87, he started building houses in the area in 1972. Back then, developers would offer to install the fencing or sod in order to attract participating builders to blocks designated for that year's Parade of Homes. "The homes were all in one location and all within a comparable price range," he says.

New-fangled innovations—from Joe Glover's "Fabricon" to other new technologies—were significant elements of each Parade. "We used a lot of new things people hadn't seen," Fenley remembers. "People could come through and see a brick fireplace or an air conditioning system that had just come out. They wouldn't see those things otherwise."

In the following decades, Parade of Homes blocks would include destinations like Gainsborough Drive and Jameson Drive in Belmar in the 1960s, and Pinehurst Drive in Puckett Place or Ethan Lane in the Estacado Estates neighborhood in the 1970s. Eventually, it evolved into what it is today, with individual properties spread across the area.

That allows this year's paraders to see multiple neighborhoods and communities. A lot of things have changed in seven decades, so don't be disappointed if you don't see any city luminaries sawing through a pine board.

PARADE IN PRINT

Every year, the Texas Panhandle Builders Association showcases its homes and builders in a full, printed magazine (or, in the past, as a newspaper insert). This popular resource serves as a reference, keepsake and physical guide paradegoers use to remember the featured houses, adding to the immersive experience of touring newly built homes.

GUADALUPE FLORES ★★★★★

Madison was amazing. We were very nervous about selling our house and the whole process. Madison and her team explained everything and kept us in the loop the whole way through. She went above and beyond to not only sell the house, but also make us comfortable. We went through many obstacles, but she reassured us and kept such a positive attitude through it all. We are so grateful to her for making such a hard process seem so easy. We will forever be recommending her to all our friends as family!

BRADY GALES ★★★★★

Madison and Margie are two of the most knowledgeable and personable individuals I've ever had the privilege of doing business with. Their knowledge of the area as well as their willingness to always do what is best for their customers are unmatched to anyone. I could not recommend them enough and would say people would be doing a disservice to themselves if they did not reach out to the Homestead Property Group.

SEASON CRAVEN ★★★★★

Margie and Madison with The Homestead Property Group have been the most amazing realtors! I can't say enough about how hard they worked for us. They sold our house fast and walked right beside us through the whole buying/selling process. They went beyond expectations and were always quickly available when we had questions or concerns. They're incredibly professional and also lots of fun! We highly recommend them!

HANNAH & ANDREW ★★★★★

I have worked with Margie while buying and selling real estate and she is a rockstar! She worked hard to help me narrow down what I wanted and guided me to get the most out of a sale.

Margie was fantastic when I bought my house. She was even looking up listing as she was showing me other so that we didn't miss anything. Madison is always very helpful and knowledgeable!
