designers' journey

In April 2023, LAZZONI orchestrated a spectacular journey through the heart of Istanbul, curating an unforgettable experience for a selected group of esteemed interior designers. This exclusive event, held in collaboration with some of the most notable names in the design industry, AnisAnishka Clarke, Aya Matsumoto, Franco Rivera, Jay Kim, Kai Asika, Niya Bascom, Peter Krasowski, Shari Francis, Sonya Singh, unfolded as a celebration of creativity, craftsmanship, and cultural immersion.

Embarking on a voyage of discovery, a distinguished team of nine embarked on a curated exploration of Istanbul's most iconic landmarks and hidden gems. From the majestic splendor of historic sites to the contemporary allure of bustling streets, the journey offered a multifaceted glimpse into the city's rich tapestry of art, architecture, and heritage.

One of the highlights of the trip was a visit to the enchanting Six Senses Kocatas Mansions in Istanbul, renowned for their unparalleled Bosphorus vistas and exquisite interiors furnished by LAZZONI. Nestled amidst lush landscapes and steeped in timeless elegance, these mansions provided an inspiring backdrop for the designers to glean insights and inspiration for their upcoming projects.

Delving deeper into the essence of LAZZONI's craftsmanship, the journey led the participants to the manufacturing facility in Ankara. Here, they were afforded a rare behind-the-scenes glimpse into the meticulous process of creating LAZZONI's signature pieces, from inception to completion. Witnessing firsthand the dedication and expertise invested in each creation further underscored the brand's commitment to quality.

Culminating in an evening of refinement and camaraderie, LAZZONI hosted an exclusive dinner party at the illustrious LAZZONI Hotel, nestled along the picturesque shores of the Golden Horn in Istanbul. Against the backdrop of panoramic views and timeless elegance, Turkish interior designers mingled with international counterparts, forging meaningful connections and fostering a sense of community within the global design fraternity.

From immersive cultural experiences to intimate networking opportunities, LAZZONI's Designers' Trip epitomized the brand's ethos of blending luxury with authenticity, tradition with modernism. As participants departed with hearts full of inspiration and minds brimming with creative possibilities, the journey served as a testament to the enduring allure of Istanbul and the transformative power of design to transcend boundaries and unite souls.

Franco Rivera is a talented designer known for his unique and innovative approach. In a 9-question interview, we explored his design philosophy and gained insights into his creative process. This conversation sheds light on what inspires him and how he translates his vision into reality.

Can you describe your signature design style or aesthetic, and how do you tailor it to meet the needs and preferences of your clients?

I love creating contemporary yet comfortable spaces by using long, dramatic lines within both the architecture and interior design of the home. The spaces I design are minimal and free of clutter yet still detailed and well styled, enabling the inhabitants to feel welcomed and at home. I believe that spaces should be easy to maintain, and I strategically select items and finishes that will continue to look like their original, new condition, even after years of use. The design styles applied to my firm's projects often vary based on client request and project locale; such flexibility has become a standard of practice in my company.

Can you share a design concept inspired by a piece of artwork, literature, or music that you find particularly inspiring?

Art, particularly contemporary abstract, is one of my passions. Viewing art from different perspectives beyond the literal, seeing the movements, geometries, and how the eye travels while viewing it, finding open spaces, noticing symmetries and asymmetries, and even imagining the artist's energy or gestures while creating the piece all combine to play a large role in my creative style. My style has been greatly influenced by Robert Motherwell and his Open series, Richard Serra's use of drama in the negative and positive in both wall art and sculpture, and Ludwig Sander and his use of creating large and small areas, compression and decompression. When sourcing art for a project years ago, I met artist Mark Humphrey, who became a very close friend and mentored me into creating my own paintings. My paintings are noticeably influenced by architecture and design, and often come full circle when they inspire my own architectural and interior designs.

What are some emerging trends in interior design that you're particularly excited about, and how do you see them shaping the future of residential and commercial spaces?

While I generally avoid trends and prefer designing timeless spaces, I do love that the modern consumer has been empowered by the internet to identify what speaks to them personally - whether a current trend or style of the past - so that they may fulfill their design dream and create their own unique space. I feel that the future will continue to expand versatility in personal style, and spaces will increasingly continue to be unique to the individual.

What role do sustainability and eco friendly practices play in your design philosophy and how do you incorporate them into your projects?

Our design process is always guided by a principle of ecological consciousness. It is of the highest importance to us that we know the sourcing of the materials we select and that we avoid materials that have been treated with products that cause chemical off-gassing. We prefer to know where our materials are made, use eco-leather in place of animal product, minimize packaging as much as possible, and are mindful of the amount of transportation and fuel required to transport goods. I often like to create with local artisans, as doing so contributes to a decreased travel footprint, the reuse of packaging, and the support of local economies.

Photography by Peter Krasowski

What do you hope clients will remember most about your designs, and how do you ensure that your work leaves a lasting impact?

I want the spaces we design to invoke a sense of calmness and balance for our clients and their guests, simultaneously combining ease and relaxation with a healthy dose of invigoration and inspiration. I aim to encourage this by creating unique concepts in both architecture and furniture, often reinventing items that otherwise may go unnoticed or forgotten. This is particularly evident in those places frequently encountered by our hands and eyes, such as door levers, plumbing placements, cabinetry, and handrails - initiating delightful moments of inspired interaction that would otherwise be lost to the daily and the mundane.

Can you discuss the role of technology in modern interior design, and how do you integrate smart home features and innovative materials into your projects?

We've created homes that included the most advanced of technologies, as well as homes where the client wished to scale back the technology to a level that they would realistically use. My approach to integrating home technology is led by the principle that guests should be able to easily understand how to use it and live within the home. We endeavor to keep the technology only visible from where it's operated, versus hiding elements that don't need to be seen, such as speakers in walls or ceilings, or installing window shades that disappear into ceilings. I also strive to incorporate control devices that can continue to be updated and don't fall into obsolescence with the invention of new technology, as well as technology that can adapt over time with minimal impact to the home.

How do you balance functionality and aesthetics in your designs, particularly in spaces that need to serve multiple purposes?

Simply through listening - I prioritize what our client needs and wants from a space, and use that to guide the design process, rather than only designing what I envision. Through discussions with the clients, we identify their desired objective and why they wanted to create something new. Once that framework is established, we go through multiple rounds to polish the design until we create something extraordinary that also meets the client's original goal.

If you had unlimited resources and complete creative freedom, what type of unconventional or avant garde project would you pursue?

I'd create a small collection of distinctive vacation homes in remote locations such as a jungle, mountain, and/or tropical island, styled and built using methods that are inspired by local design and techniques, but include the contemporary and unexpected. Homes that ground the inhabitant by enabling them to feel completely at ease and connected to the earth, nature, their surroundings, and above all, with themselves.

If you could design a room inspired by a famous historical event or era, which would it be and how would you capture its essence in your design?

I'd love to create a space based on design found from previous civilizations or constructions - ancient Egypt, Greece, Göbekli Tepe, the Mayans - spaces that invite the individual to connect with the outdoors through architecture that uniquely incorporates light and the natural world and celebrates the perfectly-imperfect that can only be achieved by the human hand. The design would include local materials, a palette of warm neutrals and natural tones, and contemporary styling that evokes a sense of minimalism and encourages a focus on relaxation.

LAZZONI + RIT

Lazzone aims to bring comfort to people who live in the world's metropolises with the distinctive flavor of their brand. Rochester Institute of Technology (RIT) industrial design students collaborated with Lazzone to develop unique seating solutions. These explorations began with inspirational research into the RIT archives of Lella and Massimo Vignelli, a deep understanding of the company, and the students' own relationship with seating.

LAZZONI's commitment to quality, modern design, and superior craftsmanship is exemplified in their collaboration with the Rochester Institute of Technology (RIT) on Metaproject 13. This project has pushed the boundaries of industrial design, challenging students to create solutions that marry form and function seamlessly.

LAZZONI, a modern furniture brand with a strong emphasis on quality, has been an integral part of Metaproject 13. The philosophy aligns perfectly with the ethos of the Vignelli Center for Design Studies at RIT, which advocates for the merge of beauty and practicality in design. LAZZONI's dedication to craftsmanship and detail has inspired students to consider not just the aesthetic appeal of their designs but also the practical implications and user experience.

Metaproject 13 was focused on seating solutions, a fundamental aspect of interior design that demands both comfort and style. LAZZONI's involvement provided students with the unique opportunity to receive direct feedback from industry professionals who are at the forefront of modern furniture design. This collaboration ensured that the designs developed during the project were not only contemporary but also usable in the real-world.

One of LAZZONI's core values is a strong commitment to quality. This is reflected in every piece of furniture created, from the selection of materials to the final product. During Metaproject 13, students were encouraged to adopt this mindset, emphasizing the importance of high standards in both design and execution. LAZZONI's expertise in quality control and craftsmanship helped guide the students in refining their prototypes, ensuring that the final designs were both aesthetically pleasing and durable.

LAZZONI has always been at the cutting edge of design, constantly seeking new ways to improve. Metaproject 13 provided a platform for students to explore new ideas and push the boundaries of what is possible in furniture design. LAZZONI's involvement ensured that these designs were grounded in practical application, making them more than just theoretical exercises.

The collaboration between LAZZONI and RIT's Metaproject 13, highlights the importance of industry and academia working together to push the boundaries of what is possible, ensuring that future designs are functional, and of the highest quality.
