The Broken Chain

Oh, little son of man,
 God calls you with a voice
 To lift me from my chains,
 To break me from my chains,
 To break me from my chains.

It breaks your heart, to hear you
 Say that you are free,
 You say you are free,
 You say you are free,
 You say you are free.

You tell me I am free,
 You tell me I am free,
 You tell me I am free,
 You tell me I am free,
 You tell me I am free.

But I am still in chains,
 And I am still in chains,
 And I am still in chains,
 And I am still in chains,
 And I am still in chains.

Oh, little son of man,
 God calls you with a voice
 To lift me from my chains,
 To break me from my chains,
 To break me from my chains.

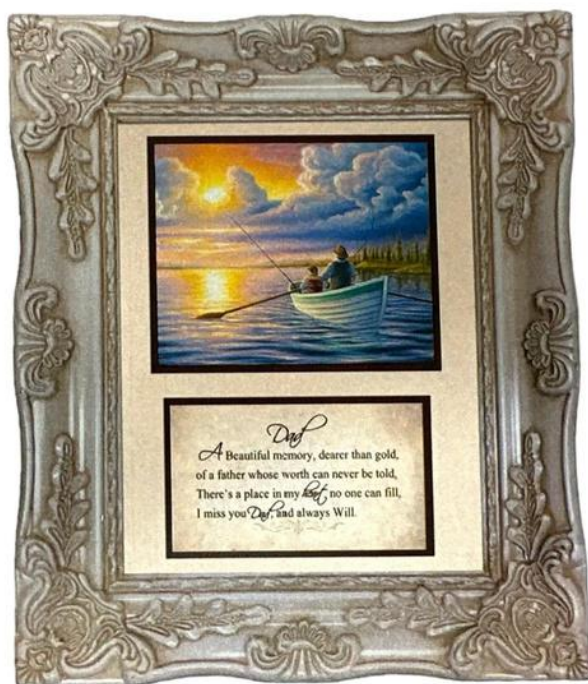

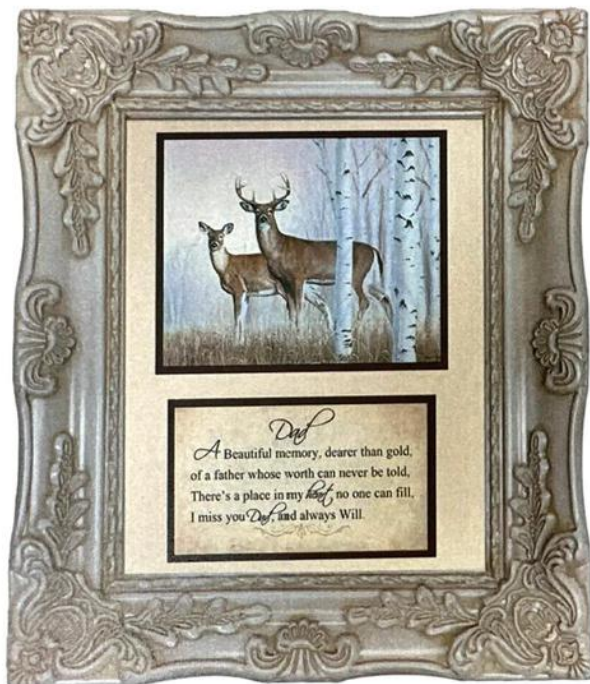

The Poet

The Old Rugged Cross

On a hill far away stood an old rugged cross, the emblem of suffering and shame,
 And I love that old cross where the sinners and their Redeemer met,
 'Twas a world of lost sinners was slain,
 So I'll cherish the old rugged cross, till my trophies at last I lay down,
 I'll sing on the old rugged cross, and exchange in some day for a Crown
