

ANTHONY BANDIERO, ESQ.

NEVADA

Search & Seizure Survival Guide

A FIELD GUIDE FOR LAW ENFORCEMENT

 Blue to Gold

Nevada Search & Seizure Survival Guide

A FIELD GUIDE FOR LAW ENFORCEMENT

Anthony Bandiero, JD, ALM

Blue To Gold Law Enforcement Training, LLC
SPOKANE, WASHINGTON

Copyright © 2021 by Anthony Bandiero.

All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced, distributed or transmitted in any form or by any means, including photocopying, recording, or other electronic or mechanical methods, without the prior written permission of the publisher, except in the case of brief quotations embodied in critical reviews and certain other noncommercial uses permitted by copyright law. For permission requests, write to the publisher, addressed "Attention: Permissions Coordinator," at the address below.

Blue to Gold, LLC
1818 West Francis Ave #101
Spokane, WA 99205
info@bluetogold.com
www.bluetogold.com

Ordering Information:

Quantity sales. Special discounts are available on quantity purchases by government agencies, police associations, and others. For details, contact us at the address above.

Search & Seizure Survival Guide

ISBN 979-8473922707

Last updated 06-2022

Note: This is a general overview of the classical and current United States court decisions related to search and seizure, liability, and confessions. As an overview, it should be used for a basic analysis of the general principles but not as a comprehensive presentation of the entire body of law. It is not to be used as a substitute for the opinion or advice of the appropriate legal counsel from the reader's department. To the extent possible, the information is current. However, very recent statutory and case law developments may not be covered.

Additionally, readers should be aware that all citations in this book are meant to give the reader the necessary information to find the relevant case. Case citations do not comply with court requirements and intentionally omit additional information such as pin cites, internal citations, and subsequent case developments. The citations are intended for police officers. Lawyers must conduct due diligence and read the case completely and cite appropriately.

Additional Training Resources

We offer the Nation's best search and seizure training. View our training calendar!

Visit bluetogold.com

Is your agency interested in hosting one of our training classes?

Call 888-579-7796 or email training@bluetogold.com

Want to purchase this book for your agency?

Call 888-579-7796 for bulk discount rates

— Anthony Bandiero

Overview

Let's Start with the Basics	14
Consensual Encounters	41
Investigative Detentions.....	59
Arrests.....	85
Vehicles.....	111
Homes	139
Businesses & Schools	180
Personal Property.....	193
Technology Searches	199
Miscellaneous Searches & Seizures.....	211
Search Warrants	223
Use of Force	241
Interview and Interrogation	250
Law Enforcement Liability.....	270
Index	292

Table of Contents

Let's Start with the Basics.....	14
Acknowledgements	15
Fourth Amendment.....	16
Nevada Constitution Article 1 Sec. 18.....	17
Fifth Amendment	19
Three Golden Rules of Search & Seizure	20
The Right 'To be Left Alone'	22
Decision Sequencing.....	23
C.R.E.W.	24
Fourth Amendment Reasonableness.....	25
Private Searches.....	27
“Hunches” Defined	30
Reasonable Suspicion Defined.....	31
Probable Cause Defined.....	33
Collective Knowledge Doctrine.....	35
What is a “Search” Under the Fourth Amendment?	38
What is a “Seizure” Under the Fourth Amendment?.....	39
Consensual Encounters	41
Consensual Encounters	42
Knock and Talks	45
Investigative Activities During Consensual Encounter ...	47
Asking for Identification	49
Removing Hands from Pockets.....	51
Transporting to Police Station.....	52
Consent to Search.....	53
Third Party Consent.....	56
Mistaken Authority to Consent.....	58

Investigative Detentions	59
Specific Factors to Consider	60
Detaining a Suspect	62
Officer Safety Detentions.....	64
How Long Can R.S. Detentions Last?.....	66
Investigative Techniques During a Stop.....	68
Identifications - in the Field.....	70
Unprovoked Flight Upon Seeing an Officer	71
Detentions Based on an Anonymous Tip	73
Handcuffing and Use of Force	75
Detaining Victims or Witnesses.....	76
Patdown for Weapons.....	77
Patdown Based on Anonymous Tips	80
Plain Feel Doctrine.....	81
Involuntary Transportation	82
Detaining People Who Publicly Record Police Officers...84
 Arrests.....	 85
Lawful Arrest	86
Entry into Home with Arrest Warrant	88
Warrantless Entry to Make Arrest.....	89
Collective Knowledge Doctrine.....	91
Meaning of “Committed in the Officer’s Presence?”	93
Line-Ups.....	94
Protective Sweeps.....	96
When to “Unarrest” a Suspect.....	98
“Contempt of Cop” Arrests.....	100
Arrests at Public Protests	101
Search Incident to Arrest	102
Search Prior to Formal Arrest	103

Search Incident to a “Temporary” Arrest	104
Attempt to Swallow Drugs	106
DUI Breath Tests	107
DUI Blood Tests.....	108
Searching Vehicle Incident to Arrest	109
Vehicles	111
General Rule.....	112
Scope of Stop Similar to an Investigative Detention	113
Community Caretaking Stops.....	114
Reasonable Suspicion Stops	115
Stops to Verify Temporary Registration	116
DUI Checkpoints	117
Information Gathering Checkpoints	118
Legal Considerations for Any Checkpoint	119
Ordering Passengers to Stay in, or Exit Vehicle.....	120
Detaining a Recent Vehicle Occupant	121
Consent to Search a Vehicle	122
Frisking Vehicle and Occupants for Weapons	124
Frisking People Who Ride in Police Vehicle	126
K9 Sniff Around Vehicle	127
Searching Vehicle After an Arrest	128
Searching Vehicle with Probable Cause	130
Dangerous Items Left in Vehicle	131
Inventories	132
Identifying Passengers.....	135
Unrelated Questioning	136
Constructive Possession.....	137
Homes	139

Warrant Requirement.....	140
Hotel Rooms, Tents, RVs, and so Forth.....	142
Knock and Talks	146
Open Fields	148
Curtilage	149
Plain View Seizure.....	152
Trash Searches	154
Consent to Search by Co-Occupants	155
Parental Consent to Search Child’s Room	157
Mistaken Authority to Consent.....	158
Protective Sweeps.....	159
Hot Pursuit and Fresh Pursuit	161
Warrantless Arrest at Doorway	164
Warrantless Entry to Make Arrest.....	166
Warrantless Entry for an Emergency.....	168
Warrantless Entry for Officer Safety	170
Warrantless Entry to Investigate Child Abuse.....	171
Warrantless Entry to Protect Property	172
Warrantless Entry to Investigate Homicide Crime	173
Warrantless Entry to Prevent Destruction of Evidence.....	174
Warrantless Entry Based on “Ruse” or Lie.....	175
Convincing Suspect to Exit Based on “Ruse” or Lie.....	176
Detaining a Home in Anticipation of a Warrant	178
Surround and Call-Out	179
Businesses & Schools.....	180
Warrantless Arrest Inside Business.....	181
Customer Business Records.....	182
Heavily Regulated Businesses	183
Fire, Health, and Safety Inspections.....	184

Government Workplace Searches	185
School Searches	186
Student Drug Testing.....	189
SROs, Security Guards, and Administrators.....	190
Use of Force Against Students.....	192
Personal Property	193
Searching Containers.....	194
Single Purpose Container Doctrine	195
Searching Abandoned or Lost Property.....	196
Searching Mail or Packages.....	198
Technology Searches	199
Sensory Enhancements	200
Flashlights.....	201
Binoculars.....	202
Night Vision Goggles	204
Thermal Imaging	205
Cell Phones, Laptops, and Tablets	206
Cell Phone Location Records	207
Aerial Surveillance	208
GPS Devices	209
Obtaining Passwords.....	210
Miscellaneous Searches & Seizures.....	211
Cause-of-Injury Searches	212
Medical Procedures.....	213
Discarded DNA	215
Fingernail Scrapes	216
Arson Investigations	217
Airport & Other Administrative Checkpoints	218

Border Searches	220
Probationer & Parolee Searches	222
Search Warrants	223
Overview	224
Why Get a Warrant, Even if You Don't Need to?.....	226
Particularity Requirement	227
Anticipatory Search Warrant	228
Confidential Informants.....	229
Sealing Affidavits.....	230
Knock and Announce	231
Detaining Occupants Inside and in Immediate Vicinity	233
Frisking Occupants	235
Handcuffing Occupants.....	237
Serving Arrest Warrant at Residence.....	238
Wrong Address Liability	239
Receipt, Return, and Inventory,	240
Use of Force.....	241
Non-Deadly Force	242
Use of Force to Prevent Escape	243
Deadly Force During Vehicle Pursuit.....	244
Improper Handcuffing	245
Pointing Gun at Suspect	247
Using Patrol (i.e. Bite) Dogs	248
Hog/Hobble Tie	249
Interview and Interrogation	250
When Miranda is Required.....	251
Miranda Elements	254

Coercive Influences and De Facto Arrests	255
Miranda Inside Jail and Prison	257
Miranda for Juveniles.....	258
Witnesses and Victims	259
Invocation Prior to Interrogation.....	260
Ambiguous Invocations.....	261
Suspect Invoked, Now What?.....	262
Suspect Invoked, Now Wants to Talk.....	264
Intentional Versus Accidental Miranda Violations.....	265
When to Provide Miranda Again	266
Public Safety Exception.....	267
Routine Booking Questions	268
Evidence Discovered after Miranda Violation	269
Law Enforcement Liability.....	270
Exclusionary Rule.....	271
Exceptions to the Exclusionary Rule.....	273
Fruit of the Poisonous Tree	274
Standing to Object.....	275
Good Faith Exception.....	276
Attenuation.....	278
Inevitable or Independent Discovery.....	279
Duty to Protect	281
Duty to Intervene	282
Supervisor Liability.....	283
Unequal Enforcement of the Law	284
Behavior that “Shocks the Conscience”	285
Deliberate Indifference	286
Sharing Crime Scene Photos on Social Media.....	287
§ 1983 Civil Rights Violations	288

§ 242 Criminal Charges	289
Bringing Non-Essential Personnel Into the Home	290
Qualified Immunity	291
Index	292

We have an incredible warrior class in this country - people in law enforcement..., and I thank God every night we have them standing fast to protect us from the tremendous amount of evil that exists in the world.

— Brad Thor

Let's Start with the Basics

Acknowledgements

Before we dive into the material I would like to acknowledge those who helped make this Nevada version possible.

Shanon Clowers

Shanon was born and raised in Nevada. She attended UNR and went on to UNLV's Boyd School of Law. From 2006 to present, Shanon has worked as a Chief Deputy District Attorney in Clark County. She has been a team chief and assigned to specialized units, including Domestic Violence, Gun Crimes, HIDTA as a Deputy and SUSA, and Case Assessment. She chairs the Clark County District Attorney's Office's Search and Seizure Committee and is a member of LVMPD's Search and Seizure Committee. Jessica Walsh and Shanon created the "After the Arrest" law enforcement training course, which specializes in report writing and constitutional issues. She is an instructor for search and seizure at LVMPD's academy. She is also a board member for HELP International. Lastly, Shanon is married to a seasoned LVMPD detective.

Jessica Walsh

Jessica is a Chief Deputy District Attorney with the Clark County District Attorney's Office and is currently in charge of the Case Assessment Unit. She graduated magna cum laude from the University of Toledo College of Law, Class of 2005. Jessica spent most of her career as a litigation attorney on the Special Victims Unit before moving to Case Assessment. Jessica is currently the Chair of the Clark County District Attorney's Police Training Committee on Report Writing and the Fourth Amendment and is a member of a number of search and seizure committees with various law enforcement agencies.

Clark County District Attorney Steven Wolfson

I would also like to thank the Clark County District Attorney Steven Wolfson. Shanon and Jessica have trained and advised countless Nevada officers with the goal to help them make good case law. This effort would not be possible without support from CCDA leadership. Most police departments I train receive practically no advanced training from their prosecutors. This is unfortunate because cops want and need more legal training. The team at CCDA is a model for others to follow. Keep it up. - A. Bandiero

Fourth Amendment

Out of all of the Bill of Rights, the Fourth Amendment is the most litigated. It is also the most important when it comes to your job as a police officer. At the core of every police action is the Fourth Amendment and you need to understand case law in order to do your job effectively and lawfully. That's what this book is all about.

Legal Standard

The Fourth Amendment is best understood in two separate parts:

Search and seizure clause:

1. The right of the people to be secure in their
2. persons, houses, papers, and effects,
3. against unreasonable searches and seizures,
4. shall not be violated, and

Search warrant clause:

1. no Warrants shall issue, but upon probable cause,
2. supported by Oath or affirmation,
3. and particularly describing the place to be searched,
4. and the persons or things to be seized.

Nevada Constitution Article 1 Sec. 18

The Nevada Constitution¹ has its own search and seizure clause, though it is practically identical in language and intent to the Fourth Amendment. In particular, the Nevada Supreme Court said the state “has historically followed the United States Supreme Court on most, if not all, of its interpretations and applications of the law governing searches and seizures.”²

However, keep in mind that the Nevada Supreme Court has the power to interpret the state constitution in a stricter manner than the United States Constitution but has not traditionally done so. Additionally, the Nevada Legislature also has the authority to pass laws that are more restrictive than the constitution allows. For example, investigative detentions have no set time limit under the constitution. Under NRS 171.123, however, a detention becomes an “arrest” after 60 minutes even if police are still diligently investigating. Therefore, police must either arrest (with probable cause) or release the suspect once 60 minutes has elapsed.

Therefore, even though many case examples listed in this book are not from Nevada, they are all based on interpretations of the Fourth Amendment and I believe the outcome would be similar if the same set of facts arose in Nevada.

Finally, Nevada police officers should know that state law has practically no effect on federal prosecutions. Instead, federal prosecutions are almost wholly controlled by federal law and Fourth Amendment interpretations.

For example, local officers assigned to a federal task force would not violate a suspect’s “rights” if they detained a suspect for longer than 60 minutes as long as the case was prosecuted federally.

Legal Standard

The Nevada Constitution is best understood in two separate parts:

Search and seizure clause:

1. The right of the people to be secure in their;
2. persons and property;

¹ Nevada Constitution Declaration of Rights § 18

² State v. Lloyd, 129 Nev. 739 (2013)

3. against unreasonable searches and seizures;
4. shall be inviolate;

Search warrant clause:

1. and no warrant shall issue but on probable cause,
2. supported by oath or affirmation,
3. particularly describing the place to be searched; and
4. the persons or property to be seized.

Legal Standard

State law restrictions do not control federal prosecutions

“As we have noted before, federal standards control the admissibility of evidence in a federal prosecution even though the evidence was seized by state officials and would not be admissible in state court. Whether the evidence in the case was seized in contravention of the constitution or laws of the state of Wisconsin [or any state like Nevada] does not control its admissibility in federal criminal proceedings; and accordingly, the officers' compliance or lack of compliance with Wisconsin law...is irrelevant.”¹

Note: This doctrine provides no license for Nevada officers to ignore applicable state restrictions when fighting crime. Intentional violations of state law or agency policy will result in discipline or termination even if the conduct was not strictly speaking a civil right's violation. Instead, the point here is that many Nevada officers work on federal task forces and should know that sometimes the federal legal rules are different than what they were taught at the academy.

¹ U.S. v. Singer, 943 F.2d 758 (7th Cir. 1991)

Fifth Amendment

The Fifth Amendment is the most famous. Because of Hollywood, everyone seems to know their rights. Yet, the Fifth Amendment is extremely complex. For example, how many times has a suspect complained that you didn't read them his Miranda rights after an arrest, even though you didn't interrogate him? Better yet, what if you forget to read someone his rights and he confesses? How do you fix that mistake? This book gives you these answers (Interview and Interrogation section).

Legal Standard

There are a lot of subsections to the Fifth Amendment, and you probably won't deal directly with any of them except #4, the right against self-incrimination (i.e. Miranda):

1. No person shall be held to answer for a capital, or otherwise infamous crime,
2. unless on a presentment or indictment of a Grand Jury, except in cases arising in the land or naval forces, or in the Militia, when in actual service in time of war or public danger;
3. nor shall any person be subject for the same offense to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb;
4. nor shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself,
5. nor be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law;
6. nor shall private property be taken for public use, without just compensation.

Three Golden Rules of Search & Seizure

I want to share three overarching Golden Rules to help provide you with guidance in the field and to keep you out of trouble. These Golden Rules were developed after reading thousands of cases and I realized that there was a “theme” that developed when officers lost their cases or were successfully sued.

Embrace these Golden Rules and your career will benefit.

Three Golden Rules

The three Golden Rules of Search & Seizure are:

1. The more you articulate why you did something, the more likely it will be upheld in court.

This is the first and most important Golden Rule. Every time you make an intrusion into a person’s liberty or property interests (i.e. detain them or their property), you need to document why you did it. If not, you may be disciplined or successfully sued. Finally, you don’t necessarily need to produce a formal report. CAD and dispatch notes are also effective documentation when a formal report is unnecessary.

2. The more serious the crime, the more reasonable your actions are likely to be viewed.

The Fourth Amendment is like a human-sized rubber band around your body. It’s naturally constricting. But when you are dealing with violent people, or emergencies, or rapidly evolving situations, the court will give you more room to breathe. For example, courts may let you enter homes to prevent the destruction of a kilo of cocaine, but will criticize you for entering the same home to prevent the destruction of a marijuana cigarette. Use good judgment. Be willing to back down and seek judicial approval for minor crimes - use good judgment!

3. Conduct all warrantless searches and seizures in the same manner as if you had a warrant.

Most searches and seizures are warrantless. But that doesn't mean that you get any extra leeway when you proceed without judicial pre-approval. In fact, you get less leeway.

When you take the time to get judicial pre-approval courts like it. They respect it. And when your case goes to trial there is a legal presumption that you did the right thing. Therefore, the defendant must present evidence that your warrant is invalid. Good luck. The judge presiding over the case is likely the same judge who signed off on your warrant. Do you think that same judge will now decide the warrant was improperly issued? Yeah right!

On the other hand, when you proceed without a warrant there is a legal presumption that your search or seizure was unlawful! It's not personal - it's business. Without a warrant you have the burden to prove that what you did, and how you did it, was reasonable and lawful. Most of the time you will win these arguments with proper articulation (think Golden Rule #1) and your search or seizure was no more intrusive than what a judge would have allowed you to do.

Keep these Golden Rules in mind while in the field and your courtroom experience should be a tad less stressful.

The Right 'To be Left Alone'

The Supreme Court has recognized another “right,” though it is not solely defined in the Bill of Rights, and that is the right “to be left alone.” (The original phrase is the right “to be let alone.” Modern English prefers “left alone.”)

Whatever its source, whether common law, civil tort law, or the Bill of Rights, professional law enforcement officers must realize, and accept, that citizens have the right to be left alone. This is especially true today because more and more citizens are refusing police consensual encounters. I witnessed this first hand when subjects, whom I wanted to talk with, in order to develop intel, would bluntly ask me if they were free to go. When I replied “Yes,” a few would immediately leave (usually on their bicycle or moped). However, this country was founded on an unwavering respect for individual liberties. It's just one of many reasons why this country is the best.

As Justice Brandies wrote in a dissenting opinion that was later endorsed by courts around the country:

The makers of our Constitution undertook to secure conditions favorable to the pursuit of happiness. They recognized the significance of man's spiritual nature, of his feelings and of his intellect. They knew that only a part of the pain, pleasure and satisfactions of life are to be found in material things. They sought to protect Americans in their beliefs, their thoughts, their emotions and their sensations. They conferred, as against the Government, the right to be let alone—the most comprehensive of rights and the right most valued by civilized men. To protect that right, every unjustifiable intrusion by the Government upon the privacy of the individual, whatever the means employed, must be deemed a violation of the Fourth Amendment.¹

¹ Olmstead v. United States, 277 U.S. 438 (1928)

Decision Sequencing

Every search and seizure decision you make must be constitutional. If not, the evidence seized later will be “tainted” by the unconstitutional decision and the evidence may be suppressed. More importantly, an unconstitutional decision may have violated someone’s constitutional rights. If true, you may be successfully sued even if the suspect suffered no real harm. For example, if you illegally searched a backpack and found cocaine. The suspect may be able to recover damages and attorney’s fees even though they were never allowed to possess the cocaine in the first place.

A great way to conceptualize how this works is to think of constitutional decisions as upright dominos, each stacked next to each other.¹ Remember doing that as a kid...or last week? You line them up and when one falls, the rest fall after that one. In other words, if you just flicked the domino in the middle, only half the dominos would fall. Fourth Amendment decisions work the same way. For example, you make a lawful traffic stop (domino #1). You lawfully question the occupants about unrelated matters but it does not measurably extend the stop (domino #2). Eventually, you gain consent to search the trunk, but exceed the scope of search by searching inside the vehicle. This would violate the constitution and therefore that domino falls...and so do the decisions and evidence that come after it. Here, if you found drugs in the car, made an arrest, and found more drugs from a search incident to an arrest (another domino), that domino falls over too and that evidence is suppressed because it was tainted by a domino that fell over before.

Finally, remember everything that you found before the first domino that fell is constitutional. Any evidence discovered during that period would not be suppressed.

Legal Standard

Constitutional decisions are like upright dominos — an unconstitutional decision will cause the domino to fall over, knocking over (i.e. “tainting”) all the dominos that come later.

¹ This concept came from Bruce-Alan Barnard, JD

C.R.E.W.

The Supreme Court stated that all Fourth Amendment searches are presumed unreasonable unless there is a warrant or recognized exception. There are several exceptions, including “consent.” C.R.E.W. is an acronym to help you remember this important limitation.

The “C” stands for consent. “R.E.” stands for recognized exceptions. “W” stands for—you guessed it, warrant.

Legal Standard

Whenever you conduct a search or a seizure you need one of the following:

1. Consent
2. Recognized Exceptions, examples include:
 - Exigency
 - Community caretaking
 - Reasonable suspicion
 - Probable cause arrest in public place
 - Mobile conveyance exception
 - Plain view (or smell, feel, hear)
 - Emergency searches
 - Hot/fresh pursuit
3. Warrant

Fourth Amendment Reasonableness

The ultimate touchstone of the Fourth Amendment is reasonableness.¹ In particular, the Fourth prohibits “unreasonable searches and seizures.” In other words, if a search or seizure is reasonable, it’s probably lawful.

Yet, how do we define what’s reasonable? Most of our definitions come from case law. What we can, and cannot, do is usually spelled out by judges. But remember, courts don’t expect you to do your job perfectly—cops are humans and make mistakes. But you must be able to articulate why you’re doing something. If you cannot, then it’s probably unreasonable.

Also, keep in mind that the Fourth Amendment focuses on “objective reasonableness,” not subjective factors. This means that courts usually ignore personal motives and instead analyze whether or not an objectively reasonable officer “could” have lawfully done the same thing. As the U.S. Supreme Court stated, “the focus is to be on the [officers’] actions not their motives.”²

There is one important exception that relates to using “inventory searches” as a ruse to rummage around for criminal evidence. If an officer lacks probable cause and has discretion to tow, and would not tow but for the intent to search for evidence, then the lawful decision is to seek consent or let the vehicle go.³

Legal Standard

“[I]n determining whether the seizure and search were ‘unreasonable’ our inquiry is a dual one—whether the officer’s action was justified at its inception, and whether it was reasonably related in scope to the circumstances which justified the interference in the first place.”⁴

“An otherwise lawful seizure can violate the Fourth Amendment if it is executed in an unreasonable manner.”⁵

¹ Riley v. California, 134 S. Ct. 2473 (2014)

² Scott v. U.S., 436 U.S. 128 (1978)

³ State v. Greenwald, 109 Nev. 808 (1993)

⁴ Gama v. State, 112 Nev. 833 (1996)

⁵ United States V. Jacobsen, 503 U.S. 540 (1992)

Finally, the "Fourth Amendment does not mandate that police officers act flawlessly, but only that they act reasonably."¹

Case Examples

An arrest would be lawful even if the officer admitted he didn't think he had enough for an arrest, as long as the court found probable cause:

An officer observed a hand-to-hand transaction and detained the suspects. The officer then conducted a patdown for narcotics despite not believing he had enough for the arrest. Narcotics was discovered and the suspect was formally arrested. The court held that despite improperly calling this search a patdown the officer nevertheless had probable cause to arrest and therefore properly upheld the officer's conduct as a formal search incident to arrest.²

Arrest lawful despite not having probable cause because court found probable cause for another uncharged offense:

"In Klingler, the officers made an arrest for vagrancy and conducted a contemporaneous search which revealed a pistol that later formed the basis for a Federal Firearms Act charge. The court held that, while there was insufficient probable cause with respect to vagrancy, there was probable cause to arrest for robbery. Upholding the arrest, the court said:

'Because probable cause for an arrest is determined by objective facts, it is immaterial that (the officer) . . . testified that he did not think that he had 'enough facts' upon which to arrest Klingler for . . . robbery. His subjective opinion is not material"³

An officer's mistake of facts, if reasonable, will not result in suppression of evidence:

Officers sought consent to search an apartment from the defendant's brothers. Officers reasonably believed the brothers lived there because they were sitting in front, and told officers there was marijuana inside the apartment. The search resulted in evidence against the defendant. Later, the defendant provided evidence that his brothers did not actually live in the apartment. However, since the officer's mistake was reasonable, evidence was not suppressed.⁴

¹ United States V. Rohrig (6th Circuit, 1996)

² State v. Rodrihuez-Torres, 77 Wash.App. 687 (1995)

³ Surianello v. State, 92 Nev. 492 (1976) (Citing Klingler v. U.S. 409 F.2d 299 (8th Cir. 1969)

⁴ Snyder v. State, 103 Nev. 275 (1987)

Private Searches

The Fourth Amendment controls government officials, not private actors. Therefore, there's generally no restriction on using information gained from a private citizen's search as long as he was not acting as a government agent. This is true even when the private search was conducted in a highly offensive, unreasonable, or illegal manner.¹

An agent is someone whom you encouraged or directed to perform a search or seizure. If so, then the agent must comply with the Fourth Amendment. In other words, you cannot direct a private person to do something that you couldn't do. A classic example of an agent is the confidential informant asked to go to a person's house to purchase narcotics. This would not violate the Fourth Amendment. However, if you asked the agent to "search around" while the dealer was in another room that would be problematic since you could not do the same thing. The dealer might be a criminal but he does have a right not have police or their agents searching inside his house without his consent or a warrant.

There's another doctrine in play involving private searches known humorously as a "cat out of the bag" search. These searches occur when a private person searches another person's container (i.e. backpack, purse, etc.) and finds contraband. The private person then informs police what they found inside and the police conduct the same search on the container and usually seize the evidence and charge the owner of the container. For example, a roommate searches his fellow co-occupant's backpack and finds narcotics. Cops arrive and can perform the same search because the cat is out of the bag, the expectation of privacy is eliminated because of the original private search. Does this make sense?

Keep two important limitations in mind regarding these private searches. First; cops must not exceed the scope of the private search even if they have probable cause. If the roommate only searched the main compartment of the backpack then searching other closed compartments would be off limits unless another exception applies such as exigency or the owner's consent. Second; cat out of the bag searches require lawful access to the container. If the roommate left the contraband-laden backpack in his cooccupant's room then cops would likely not have lawful access to the backpack, as the room would generally be off-limits. If you are in doubt or are dealing with a big case the best response is to seek a search warrant.

¹ Skinner v. Railway Labor Executives' Ass'n, 489 U.S. 602 (1989)

Legal Standard

Whether a private actor becomes a government actor depends on two factors:¹

- Whether police encouraged, directed or participated in the search or seizure; and
- Whether the private person conducts the search with the intent to assist police or is just furthering his own ends.

There are two important restrictions if police replicate a private search of a container (i.e. cat out of the bag search):²

- Police must not exceed the scope of the private search; and
- Police must have lawful access to the container.

Note: Read Hotel, Tents, and RVs chapter for advice on how to deal with these areas after contraband is found.

Case Examples

Government did not exceed private search by opening another box on the same pallet:

Private carrier's employee opened one of thirteen boxes on a pallet and discovered marijuana. Police later searched the other boxes without a warrant. Typically, this would have exceeded the "scope" of the original private search. However, the government effectively argued that the additional boxes on the same pallet were essentially a "single" box. The court agreed and the search was upheld.³

No government search where wife simply handed over evidence:

Officers went to the defendant's home and questioned his wife. Officers asked if husband owned any guns and what clothes he had worn on the night of the crime. Wife then grabbed the items and gave them to police. This was a private search—no evidence that police told her to do it, she did it on her own to clear her husband's name.⁴ That last part backfired!

¹ State v. Miller, 110 Nev. 690 (1994)

² See U.S. v. Jacobsen, 466 U.S. 109 (1984)

³ U.S. v. Garcia-Bercovich, 582 F.3d 1234 (11th Cir. 2009)

⁴ Coolidge v. New Hampshire, 403 U.S. 443 (1971)

Hotel manager was government agent while searching room for drugs:

Hotel manager called police and asked that police protect him while he searched a suspected drug dealer's room. The officers stood guard at the door and listened to the manager describe the drug evidence found. This was a government search because police participated in (i.e. stood guard) and the manager was motivated to help police (i.e. look at what I just found boys!).¹

FedEx employee was not an agent despite wanting to find evidence for police:

A FedEx employee who previously found drugs in eight packages, and testified in court two times, was not a government agent simply because he wanted to find evidence to turn over to the government.²

Private search exceeded after laboratory tests performed:

Where a previous private search was limited to visual inspection of pills but the government subsequently had a series of tests performed on the material at a toxicology laboratory that revealed its precise molecular structure, the action was a search because of the danger that private facts about the items could be revealed and because the search exceeded the scope of the private search. The court distinguished a field test that would reveal only whether or not the pills were a particular contraband substance but would not otherwise reveal exactly what they were.³

No violation where police viewed same child pornography wife viewed:

Police officers who examined defendant's child pornography obtained and brought to the officers by defendant's wife, did not violate defendant's privacy expectations, where defendant's wife had performed a private search of the materials, and the police officers only viewed those materials that had already been viewed by defendant's wife.⁴ Still, officers are highly encouraged to get a search warrant for electronic devices, especially those suspected of containing child pornography.

¹ U.S. v. Reed, 15 F.3d 928 (9th Cir. 1994)

² U.S. v. Koenig, 856 F.2d 843 (7th Cir. 1988)

³ U.S. v. Mulder, 808 F.2d 1346 (9th Cir. 1987)

⁴ U.S. v. Starr, 533 F.3d 985 (8th Cir. 2008)

“Hunches” Defined

You cannot make a stop or detention based “on mere curiosity, rumor, or hunch...even though the officer [you] may be acting in complete good faith.”¹ The solution is to work on converting those hunches into reasonable suspicion so they can make investigatory detentions. As the Court said:

The officer, of course, must be able to articulate something more than an “inchoate and unparticularized suspicion or ‘hunch.’” The Fourth Amendment requires “some minimal level of objective justification” for making the stop. That level of suspicion is considerably less than proof of wrongdoing by a preponderance of the evidence. We have held that probable cause means “a fair probability that contraband or evidence of a crime will be found,” and the level of suspicion required for a Terry stop is obviously less demanding than that for probable cause²

Legal Standard

You cannot seize a person or property based merely on a hunch.³ Instead, you may make a consensual encounter or pursue other investigative techniques that are not prohibited by the Fourth Amendment.

Case Examples

Hunches can’t support a stop, but are nevertheless valuable:

“A hunch may provide the basis for solid police work; it may trigger an investigation that uncovers facts that establish reasonable suspicion, probable cause, or even grounds for a conviction.”⁴

Criminal history alone is a hunch, not reasonable suspicion:

During a traffic stop, the facts that a computer check reveals that driver had once been involved in a hit-and-run incident and had once been arrested on a drug charge did not provide reasonable suspicion for further detention. Officer was impermissibly acting on a hunch that defendant might presently be involved in criminal activity.⁵

¹ In re Tony C. 21 Cal.3rd 888 (1978)

² U.S. v. Sokolow, 490 U.S. 1 (1989)

³ See State v. Rincon, 122 Nev. 1170 (2006)

⁴ United States v. Thomas, 211 F.3d 1186, 1191 (9th Cir. 2000)

⁵ U.S. v. Sandoval, 29 F.3d 537, 543 (10th Cir. 1994)

Reasonable Suspicion Defined

You may conduct an investigative detention (i.e. Terry Stop) when you can “point to specific and articulable facts which, taken together with rational inferences from those facts, reasonably warrant”¹ you to believe “the person has committed, is committing or is about to commit a crime.”²

Like probable cause, reasonable suspicion is fact-specific. Each situation is different. Therefore, the key is to articulate why this particular person appears to be engaged in criminal activity.

Legal Standard

Reasonable suspicion exists when:

- You can articulate facts and circumstances that would lead a reasonable officer to believe the suspect is, or is about to be, involved in criminal activity;
- If your suspicions are dispelled, the person must be immediately released or the stop converted into a consensual encounter.

Case Examples

Confidential informant may be used to build reasonable suspicion:

An informant known to the officer, who had provided him with information in the past, told him that a person seated in a car nearby was dealing drugs and was armed. Reasonable suspicion for an investigative stop was present.³

Being uncooperative is a hunch, not reasonable suspicion:

The mere fact that a suspect refuses to cooperate with police, when the suspect has no duty to do so, is insufficient to support reasonable suspicion.⁴

The fact that car is parked in front of fugitive’s house is not enough for stop:

“That on one occasion a car is parked on a street in front of a house where a fugitive resides is insufficient to create reasonable

¹ Terry v. Ohio, 392 U.S. 1 (1968)

² NRS 171.123(1)

³ Adams v. Williams, 407 U.S. 143 (1972)

⁴ I.N.S. v. Delgado, 466 U.S. 210, 216 (1984)

suspicion that the car's occupants had been or are about to engage in criminal activity.”¹

¹ U.S. v. Green, 111 F.3d 515 (7th Cir. 1997)

Probable Cause Defined

Articulating precisely the definition of “probable cause” or “reasonable cause” is not possible. P.C. is a fluid concept and whether or not you had P.C. to arrest or conduct a search will be evaluated on a case-by-case basis. “On many occasions, we have reiterated that the probable-cause standard is a ‘practical, nontechnical conception’ that deals with the factual and practical considerations of everyday life on which reasonable and prudent men, not legal technicians, act.”¹

Remember, evidence found after a search cannot be used retroactively to establish probable cause.² It may be tempting to try to cure an unlawful search by telling the prosecutor, “But I found 100 kilos of cocaine! There must have been probable cause!” That’s a great argument, but it is legally flawed. Similarly, just because the evidence sought was not found does not mean that there was no probable cause at the beginning.³

Legal Standard

Probable cause to arrest:

Probable cause to arrest exists “where ‘the facts and circumstances within [the arresting officer’s] knowledge and of which he had reasonably trustworthy information [are] sufficient in themselves to warrant a man of reasonable caution in the belief that an offense has been or is being committed,”⁴ and that the defendant is the perpetrator.⁵

Probable cause to search:

Probable cause to search, on the other hand, arises when there are reasonable grounds to believe, “not that the owner of the property is suspected of a crime, but that there is reasonable cause to believe that the specific ‘things’ to be searched for and seized are located on the property to which entry is sought,”⁶ and there is probable cause to believe the things sought are

¹ Illinois v. Gates, 462 U.S. 213 (1983)

² Maryland v. Garrison, 480 U.S. 79 (1987)

³ United States v. Gaschler, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 48449 (N.D. W. Va. June 3, 2009)

⁴ Draper v. United States, 358 U.S. 307 (1959)

⁵ United States v. Watson, 423 U.S. 411 (1976)

⁶ Zurcher v. Stanford Daily, 436 U.S. 547 (1978)

evidence of a crime.¹ In fact, the identity of the offender need not be known.²

Case Examples

Officer had probable cause to search vehicle:

“There was probable cause to search a vehicle where police knew that a “blue compact station wagon” with four men in it had been circling a service station shortly before it was robbed by two men; and sped away from an area near the scene shortly thereafter; that one occupant wore a green sweater as did one of the robbers, [and] that there was a trench coat in the auto similar to that worn by another of the robbers.”³

Officer had probable cause that tied-off balloon contained narcotics:

Where an officer observed a tied-off, uninflated opaque party balloon in a vehicle together with additional balloons, small plastic vials, and white powder in the glove compartment, and when the officer knew from his experience that such balloons were often used to deal drugs, probable cause existed to believe that the balloon contained narcotics.⁴

Probable cause existed to arrest party-goers in near-empty house:

A reasonable officer could have concluded that there was probable cause to believe the partygoers knew they did not have permission to be in the house, and the officers had probable cause to arrest the partygoers because the officers found a group of people who claimed to be having a bachelor party with no bachelor, in a near-empty house, with strippers in the living room and sexual activity in the bedroom, and who fled at the first sign of police.⁵

Probable cause defines the scope of search:

Smelling the odor of drugs can give probable cause to search for drugs. Scope is always an issue with probable cause. For example, the odor of burnt marijuana may give probable cause to search the passenger compartment while a powerful smell of unburnt marijuana may give probable cause to search the vehicle’s trunk.⁶

¹ State v. Tamer, 475 So. 2d 918 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 3d Dist. 1985)

² State v. Warren, 301 S.E.2d 126 (N.C. Ct. App. 1983)

³ Chambers v. Maroney, 90 S. Ct. 1975 (1970)

⁴ Tex. v. Brown, 103 S. Ct. 1535 (1983)

⁵ District of Columbia v. Wesby, 138 S. Ct. 577 (2018)

⁶ U.S. v. Downs, 151 F.3d 1301 (10th Cir. 1998)

Collective Knowledge Doctrine

The collective knowledge doctrine is one of the most powerful and important doctrines in law enforcement. It allows a single police officer to benefit from the collective knowledge of all officers working on a case. For example, if a detective asks another officer to search a vehicle for drugs, the search would be valid even if the officer conducting the search had no idea why he was authorized to search the vehicle, as long as the detective had probable cause.

The key with the collective knowledge doctrine is that officers communicate with each other. This doesn't mean officers have to know everything about the case, but they at least have to be working together.

Legal Standard

The collective knowledge doctrine has two requirements:

- The officers must be involved in the same investigation, but may be from different departments (i.e. task forces); and
- Officers must be in communication with each other related to the investigation.

Case Examples

Collective knowledge doctrine applied to officer who stopped vehicle:

A narcotics task force requested that an officer stop a vehicle for any observed traffic violation. Though the arresting officer only observed a traffic offense, the collective knowledge of the task force permitted the later arrest and warrantless search of the vehicle for drugs.¹

Officer may wholly rely on the probable cause of a fellow officer:

A police officer relied on the instruction of a fellow officer, who had probable cause to believe that drugs were in a vehicle. The police officer stopped the vehicle and searched it under the automobile exception. Even though the initiating officer did not have probable cause, because he was in communication with a fellow officer who did, the stop and search were lawful.¹

¹ United States v. Thompson, 533 F.3d 964 (8th Cir. Mo. 2008)

Intel from confidential informant contributed to collective knowledge:

Officers who stopped defendant for a traffic violation had probable cause to arrest him for drug trafficking. At the time of the stop, law enforcement collectively knew that a confidential informant made a controlled drug purchase from defendant five days earlier, the informant made a controlled drug payment of $5,000 to defendant on the day of the stop, and defendant engaged in what appeared to be other drug transactions shortly before the stop.²

Collective knowledge doctrine controls even when agent told officer to develop his own probable cause:

A DEA agent had probable cause that the defendant was in possession of drugs. He told a local officer to watch out for the defendant, and to develop his own probable cause and stop the vehicle, but the officer had no knowledge of the facts underlying the DEA's probable cause. The officer stopped the vehicle and searched it. The court held that the officer had probable cause under the collective knowledge doctrine.³

Collective knowledge doctrine can also be used for investigatory detentions:

Officer worked in a fast-paced, dynamic situation in an area known for drug sales, in which the officers worked together as a unified and tight-knit team. One officer developed reasonable suspicion to stop the defendant. A fellow officer, unaware of the officer's reasonable suspicion, stopped the defendant without his own individualized suspicion. The court upheld the stop under the collective knowledge doctrine.⁴

Supervisor's knowledge, not on the scene, was too remote for collective knowledge doctrine:

Knowledge of all officers on the scene is imputed to each officer in determining whether "collective knowledge" provided probable cause, but knowledge of a supervisor not on the scene cannot be imputed when the information was not communicated to those on the scene.⁵

¹ U.S. v. Chavez, 534 F.3d 1338 (10th Cir. 2008)

² U.S. v. Nicksion, 628 F.3d 368 (7th Cir. 2010)

³ U.S. v. Williams, 627 F.3d 247 (7th Cir. 2010)

⁴ U.S. v. Whitfield, 634 F.3d 741 (3d Cir. 2010)

⁵ U.S. v. Edwards, 885 F.2d 377 (7th Cir. 1989)

Nevada subscribes to the collective knowledge doctrine:

Although the officer may not have been specifically aware of each and every fact, collectively, the officers involved in the investigation were aware of sufficient facts and circumstances to warrant a person of reasonable caution to believe that a crime had been committed and that the defendant had participated in its commission. The court held that the officers possessed probable cause to arrest the defendant. “Probable cause is not based on the knowledge of a specific police officer but is based on the collective knowledge of all the officers involved.”¹

¹ Doleman v. State, 107 Nev. 409 (1991)

What is a “Search” Under the Fourth Amendment?

It is important to understand that the term “search,” as used in this book at least, refers to conduct that invokes the protections of the Fourth Amendment. Police may engage in hundreds of “searches” every day, and yet invoke the Fourth Amendment only a few times.

For example, when police look into a stopped vehicle, they may be searching for weapons or contraband, but that conduct is not protected by the Fourth Amendment. In other words, just using your senses while lawfully positioned somewhere is not a Fourth Amendment search. On the other hand, opening the trunk of that same vehicle and looking around for contraband would be a search because that area is protected as a closed container.

There are two constitutional searches: a “physical intrusion” search; or a search where a person has a “reasonable expectation of privacy.”

Legal Standard

Physical intrusion:

A physical intrusion will be a search under the Fourth Amendment if:

- You make a physical trespass into a constitutionally protected area (i.e. persons, houses, papers, and effects); and
- You did it for the purpose of obtaining information.¹

Reasonable expectation of privacy:

A reasonable expectation of privacy will be violated if:

- The person exhibited an actual (subjective) expectation of privacy; and
- His expectation is one that society is prepared to recognize as reasonable (objective).²

¹ U.S. v. Jones, 565 U.S. 400 (2012)

² Katz v. U.S., 389 U.S. 347 (1967)

What is a “Seizure” Under the Fourth Amendment?

A seizure of a person occurs when a reasonable person would believe that he or she was not free to leave, even if for a brief period of time.

The test is necessarily imprecise because it is designed to assess the coercive effect of police conduct, taken as a whole, rather than to focus on particular details of that conduct in isolation. Moreover, what constitutes a restraint on liberty prompting a person to conclude that he is not free to “leave” will vary, not only with the particular police conduct at issue, but also with the setting in which the conduct occurs....¹

There are two ways to seize a person. First, and most obviously, you may use physical force to make the seizure. For example, intentionally grabbing a person’s shoulder or more drastically shooting him are both seizures. Alternatively, and more commonly, police may seize a person when there is a show of authority sufficient enough to lead a reasonable person to believe he was not free to avoid the officer without legal consequences and the person submits (i.e. doesn’t run away).

A Fourth Amendment seizure of property occurs whenever you intentionally interfere with an individual’s possessory interest in his property. The most important element here is intent. For example, if you blow a red light and run into another person’s car, you have unintentionally interfered with his property and will be subject to tort liability, not a constitutional violation.

Remember you can be held vicariously liable if you “keep the peace” while someone takes another person’s property. For example, if you’re called to a civil standby while a subject removes property from a residence, it may be unwise to allow any disputed property to leave the residence.

Legal Standard

A seizure of a person occurs under the Fourth Amendment when:

¹ Mich. v. Chesternut, 486 U.S. 567 (1988)

- You use force on a person with the intent to restrain,¹ even with minimal force. Additionally, a seizure occurs even if the suspect is trying to escape (submission is not required);² or
- There is a sufficient show of authority that would lead a reasonable person to believe he was not free to leave or avoid you without legal consequences, and submits.³

A seizure of property occurs under the Fourth Amendment when:

- You intend some meaningful interference with someone's possessory interest in his property.

Case Examples

No seizure by DEA agents airport:

The defendant was not seized under the Fourth Amendment when she was asked by airport DEA agents if she would accompany them back to their office to discuss some discrepancies with her plane ticket. Once there, they asked for consent to search and she was informed of her right to refuse. She agreed and a female officer asked her to partially disrobe, after which bundles of heroin were discovered. The whole encounter was consensual.⁴

Consensual contacts on a bus:

Narcotics agents boarded a Greyhound bus and without any reasonable suspicion asked various passengers for consent to search their luggage. Arrested smuggler later argued that he was not free to leave because he was stuck on the bus in order to complete his journey and therefore consent was tainted. The Supreme Court disagreed, and stated that the test for a consensual encounter is not only the ability to leave, but also the ability to terminate the encounter while staying on the bus (e.g. “Leave me alone officer”).⁵

No seizure by moving airport luggage for dog sniff

Officers removed a passenger's luggage from the conveyor belt to facilitate a dog sniff. This was not deemed a seizure. The key to remember in this case is that sniffing the luggage did not affect the passenger's travel or delay his luggage. In fact, he did not know it occurred until later.⁶

¹ Brower v. County of Inyo, 489 U.S. 593 (1989)

² Torres v. Madrid, 141 S. Ct. 989, 209 L. Ed. 2d 190 (2021)

³ California V. Hodari 499 U.S. 621 (1991)

⁴ United States v. Mendenhall, 446 U.S. 544 (1980)

⁵ Fla. v. Bostick, 501 U.S. 429 (1991)

⁶ U.S. v. Furukawa, 99 F.3d 1147 (9th Cir.1996)

Consensual Encounters

Consensual Encounters

The most common police encounter is the consensual one. You don't need a specific reason to speak with people and consensual encounters are a great way to continue an investigation when you have neither reasonable suspicion nor probable cause. As the Supreme Court said, "Police officers act in full accord with the law when they ask citizens for consent."¹

Start a consensual encounter by asking a question: "Can I talk to you?" Not, "Come talk to me." Also, your conduct during the encounter must be reasonable. Lengthy encounters full of accusatory questioning will likely be deemed an investigative detention, not a consensual encounter.

Finally, your un-communicated state of mind has zero bearing on whether the person would feel free to leave. Therefore, even if you had probable cause to arrest, this factor will not be considered as long as the suspect did not know that you intended to arrest him.

Legal Standard

A consensual encounter becomes a seizure when:²

- Under the totality of the circumstances;
- A reasonably innocent person;
- Believes they do not have the freedom to terminate the encounter or leave; and
- Yields to a show of authority or physical force.

Some factors courts consider include:

- How the initial contact was made (was order given?)
- Use of flashing lights or sirens
- Uniform versus plain clothes
- Number of officers
- Demeanor of officer (conversational v. accusations)
- Display of weapons
- Physical touching or patdowns

¹ United States v. Drayton, 536 U.S. 194 (2002)

² CCDA Shanon Clowers

- Ordering person to move next to patrol car
- Blocking their vehicle
- Telling person they are free to leave
- Reading Miranda (not recommended for consensual encounters)
- Duration of the encounter
- Public versus private location
- And many others. Use common sense and talk to the person in a professional yet conversational tone.

Case Examples

Order to come over and talk is not consensual:

Suspect was observed walking in mall parking lot after stores were closed. Officer said, "Come over here, I want to talk to you." Court held officer gave command to suspect and therefore needed reasonable suspicion. Evidence suppressed.¹

Suspect fit drug courier profile and police conduct was not a consensual encounter:

A suspect who fit the so-called "drug-courier profile" was approached at an airport by two detectives. Upon request, but without oral consent, the suspect produced for the detectives his airline ticket and his driver's license. The detectives, without returning the airline ticket and license, asked the suspect to accompany them to a small room approximately 40 feet away, and the suspect went with them. Without the suspect's consent, a detective retrieved the suspect's luggage from the airline and brought it to the room. When the suspect was asked if he would consent to a search of his suitcases, the suspect produced a key and unlocked one of the suitcases, in which drugs were found. Court found this was not a consensual encounter and suppressed the evidence.²

Even if police have probable cause, they can still seek a consensual encounter with the suspect:

"Therefore, even assuming that probable cause existed at some earlier time, there was no violation of the Fourth Amendment...No

¹ People v. Roth, 219 Cal. App. 3d 211 (Cal. App. 4th Dist. 1990)

² Fla. v. Royer, 460 U.S. 491 (1983)

Fourth Amendment privacy interests are invaded when an officer seeks a consensual interview with a suspect.”¹

Consensual encounter and search valid after officer released driver following a traffic stop:

Where the officer stopped a vehicle to issue a traffic citation, concluded the traffic stop, indicated to the driver that he was free to leave, but then asked if the driver had drugs and whether or not the officer could search the vehicle, consent to search was voluntary.² Many cops call this move the “two step.” After releasing the offender, the officer will turn towards his patrol car, stop, turn around, and in a Columbo-like manner say, “Sir, can I ask one more question before you leave....” It’s a solid way to separate the stop from the consensual encounter.

Whether someone feels “detained” is based on objective facts:

“The test provides that the police can be said to have seized an individual ‘only if, in view of all of the circumstances surrounding the incident, a reasonable person would have believed that he was not free to leave.’ As the test is an objective standard—looking to a reasonable person’s interpretation of the situation in question... This ‘reasonable person’ standard also ensures that the scope of Fourth Amendment protection does not vary with the state of mind of the particular individual being approached.”³

Violation of a state law does not equal automatic Fourth Amendment violation:

Although the officers may have violated state law requirements in not informing the person answering the door during “knock and talk” investigation that he had a right to terminate the encounter, that circumstance did not render the consent to talk involuntary under the Fourth Amendment.⁴

¹ People v. Coddington, 23 Cal. 4th 529 (2000), as modified on denial of reh'g (Sep 27, 2000)

² U.S. v. Rivera, 906 F.2d 319 (7th Cir. 1990)

³ State v. McKellips, 118 Nev. 465, 469 (2002)

⁴ U.S. v. Cormier, 220 F.3d 1103 (9th Cir. 2000)

 CONSENSUAL ENCOUNTERS

Knock and Talks

There is no Fourth Amendment violation if you try to consensually contact a person at his home. The key to knock and talks is to comply with social norms. Think about it this way; if the Girl Scouts could do it, you can too.

You must be reasonable when you contact the subject. Constant pounding on the door, for example, would likely turn the encounter into a detention if the subject knows that it's the police knocking (an objectively reasonable person would believe that police are commanding him to open the door). Additionally, waking a subject up at 4 a.m. was viewed as a detention requiring reasonable suspicion (see below). In other words, if the Girl Scouts wouldn't do it, then it's probably unreasonable.

What about "No Trespassing" signs? You can usually ignore them because trying to have a consensual conversation with someone is not typically considered trespassing. Same goes with "No Soliciting" signs.

Legal Standard

Knock and talks are lawful when:

- The path used to reach the door does not violate curtilage and appears available for uninvited guests to use;
- If the house has multiple doors, you chose the door reasonably believed to be available for uninvited guests to make contact with an occupant;
- You used typical, non-intrusive methods to contact the occupant, including making contact during a socially-acceptable time;
- Your conversation with the occupant remained consensual; and
- When the conversation ended or was terminated, you immediately left and didn't snoop around.

Case Examples

Knock and talk at 4 a.m. held invalid:

Officers went to suspect's residence at 4 a.m. with the sole purpose to arrest him. There was no on-going crime and the probable cause was based on an offense that occurred the previous night. Violation of knock and talk because officers exceeded social norms.¹

Command to open door was not a consensual encounter:

“Officers were stationed at both doors of the duplex and [an officer] had commanded [the defendant] to open the door. A reasonable person in [defendant’s] situation would have concluded that he had no choice but to acquiesce and open the door.”²

Constant pressure to consent to search held unlawful:

During knock and talk officers continued to press defendant for permission to enter and search. Later consent-to-search was product of illegal detention.³

Officer’s statement that he didn’t need a warrant to talk with occupant found to have tainted consent to enter:

Officers made contact with a suspected alien at his apartment. The officers asked to enter the apartment, and the occupant asked whether they needed a warrant for that. The officers said they “didn’t need a warrant to talk to him.” Based on the totality of the circumstances, the consent was involuntary, since a reasonable occupant would have thought that police didn’t need a warrant to enter and talk.⁴

Unless there is an express order otherwise, officers have the same right to knock and talk as a pollster or salesman:

“Consensual encounters may also take place at the doorway of a home. In a frequently cited opinion, one federal appeals court stated more than forty years ago: ‘Absent express orders from the person in possession against any possible trespass, there is no rule of private or public conduct which makes it illegal per se, or a condemned invasion of the person's right of privacy, for anyone openly and peaceably, at high noon, to walk up the steps and knock on the front door of any man's ‘castle’ with the honest intent of asking questions of the occupant thereof—whether the questioner be a pollster, a salesman, or an officer of the law.’”⁵

¹ United States v. Lundin, 47 F. Supp. 3d 1003 (N.D. Cal. 2014)

² United States v. Poe, 462 F.3d 997 (8th Cir. Mo. 2006)

³ United States v. Washington, 387 F.3d 1060 (9th Cir. Nev. 2004)

⁴ Orhorgaghe v. I.N.S., 38 F.3d 488 (9th Cir. 1994)

⁵ People v. Rivera, 41 Cal. 4th 304 (2007)

Investigative Activities During Consensual Encounter

Just because you're engaged in a consensual encounter doesn't mean you can't investigate. However, be careful as to how you go about it. Be cool, low key, and relaxed. Make small talk and just present yourself as a curious cop versus someone looking to make an arrest (though that may be your goal).

During a consensual encounter, there are really three investigative activities you can engage in; questioning, asking for ID, and seeking consent to search.

“[L]aw enforcement officers do not violate the Fourth Amendment by merely approaching an individual on the street or in another public place, and asking him if he is willing to answer some questions, [or] by putting questions to him if the person is willing to listen.”¹

Asking for ID and running a subject for warrants doesn't automatically convert an encounter into a detention.² Hint: return ID as soon as possible so that a reasonable person would still “feel free to leave.”³

Legal Standard

Questioning:

Questioning a person does not convert a consensual encounter into an investigative detention as long as:

- Your questions are not overly accusatory in a manner that would make a reasonable person believe they were being detained for criminal activity.

Identification:

Asking a person for identification does not convert a consensual encounter into an investigative detention as long as:

- The identification is requested, not demanded; and

¹ Fla. v. Royer, 460 U.S. 491 (1983)

² People v. Bouser, 26 Cal. App. 4th 1280 (Cal. App. 4th Dist. 1994)

³ United States v. Chan-Jimenez, 125 F.3d 1324 (9th Cir. Ariz. 1997)

- You returned the identification as soon as practicable; otherwise a reasonable person may no longer feel free to leave.

Consent to search:

Asking a person for consent to search does not convert the encounter into an investigative detention as long as:

- The person's consent was freely and voluntarily given;
- He has apparent authority to give consent to search the area or item; and
- You did not exceed the scope provided, expressed or implied.

Case Examples

Child illegally questioned at school while officer was present:

A child was illegally seized and questioned by a caseworker and police officer when they escorted the child off private school property, and interrogated the child for twenty minutes about intimate details of his family life and whether he was being abused. The government argued that this was a consensual encounter, but no reasonable child in that position would have believed they were free to leave.¹

Note: This case may have come out differently if they did not remove the child from school grounds. Involuntary transportation usually converts an encounter into an arrest.

Consent to search was involuntary after arrest-like behavior:

Suspect did not voluntarily consent to the search of his person, and suppression of a handgun discovered was warranted, where the suspect was in a bus shelter, was surrounded by three patrol cars and five uniformed officers, an officer's initial, accusatory question, combined with the police-dominated atmosphere, clearly communicated to the suspect that he was not free to leave or to refuse the officer's request to conduct the search. The officer never informed the suspect that he had the right to refuse the search, and the suspect never gave verbal or written consent, but instead merely surrendered to an officer's command.²

¹ Doe v. Heck, 327 F.3d 492 (7th Cir. 2003)

² U.S. v. Robertson, 736 F.3d 677 (4th Cir. 2013)

 CONSENSUAL ENCOUNTERS

Asking for Identification

If you make a consensual encounter, you can always request that the subject identify themselves. But remember, there is no requirement that he do so. Additionally, there is likely no crime if the subject lied about his identity during a consensual encounter (however, possession of a fraudulent ID may be a crime under NRS 205.465).).

I know a lot of officers don't understand how a person can lie about his identity and get away with it. But think about it, what law requires a person to identify himself during a consensual encounter? There may be a requirement the suspect identify himself during an investigative detention, but not a consensual one. Therefore, lying about ones' identity while engaged in a consensual conversation with a police officer is not against the law.

On the other hand, lying about ones' identity may help develop reasonable suspicion that the person is engaged in criminal activity, but this can't be the sole reason to detain or arrest the person.

Legal Standard

Asking a person for identification does not convert a consensual encounter into an investigative detention as long as:

- The identification is requested, not demanded; and
- You return the identification as soon as practicable; otherwise a reasonable person may no longer feel free to leave.

Case Examples

Detaining a subject for identification requires reasonable suspicion:

"When the officers detained [suspect] for the purpose of requiring him to identify himself, they performed a seizure of his person subject to the requirements of the Fourth Amendment.¹

Providing a false name not a crime unless lawfully detained or arrested:

Defendant's arrest was premised on his giving a false name. The state statute criminalizes a person's false representation or identification of himself or herself to a peace officer “upon a lawful detention or arrest of [that] person” The law applies only where the false identification is given in connection with lawful detention or arrest, and does not apply to consensual encounters with police. Since defendant’s subsequent arrest was based upon an unlawful detention, and the search incident to the arrest was likewise unlawful, suppression is required of contraband seized after search incident to unlawful arrest.¹

¹ Brown v. Tex., 99 S. Ct. 2637 (1979)

Asking for identification, among other activities, held to be consensual:

Where a narcotics officer approached the defendant after she deplaned, identified himself and asked to speak with her; asked for her ticket, which she gave to him; asked for identification, which was produced; asked for permission to search her purse, which she allowed; and asked whether a female officer could pat her down for drugs, to which she agreed; all consents were voluntary even though the defendant was visibly nervous and became more so as the interview progressed.²

Consent to search for identification valid:

Following a patdown of defendant, and after defendant was not “immediately forthright” about his identity, giving only his first name and providing several false dates of birth, the officer asked defendant if he had any identification. Defendant indicated that it could be found in his back pocket. The officer asked for, and was granted, consent to retrieve the identification from defendant’s back pocket, but the pocket turned out to be empty. When asked if the identification might be located elsewhere, defendant suggested that it might be in his left front pocket, where the officer found not only an identification card, but what appeared to be cocaine.³ Double prizes!

Holding passenger’s identification while seeking consent to search from driver, held to be an unlawful detention:

After stopping a car, the trooper obtained the driver’s license and the passenger’s identification card. After writing the citation, the trooper spoke to the driver outside the car. He handed the driver a citation and his license, but held onto the passenger’s identification. The trooper sought and obtained consent to search. The court held that since the passenger’s ID was still being held, the driver was not truly free to leave and the search was suppressed.⁴

¹ People v. Walker, 210 Cal. App. 4th 165 (Cal. App. 6th Dist. 2012)

² U.S. v. Galberth, 846 F.2d 983 (5th Cir. 1988)

³ U.S. v. Chaney, 647 F.3d 401 (1st Cir. 2011)

⁴ United States v. Macias, 658 F.3d 509, 524 (5th Cir. 2011)

CONSENSUAL ENCOUNTERS

Removing Hands from Pockets

Generally, you may ask a subject to remove his hands from his pockets without worrying about converting the encounter into a detention. Courts understand the importance of officer safety.¹ What if the subject refuses to comply? If you can articulate a legitimate officer safety issue, then ordering a suspect to show his hands may be deemed reasonable.

Moreover, an order to show hands may not even implicate the Fourth Amendment, because the interference with a person's freedom is so minimal it may fall under the "minimal intrusion doctrine."

What if the suspect still refuses to show his hands and tries to leave? Remember, this is a consensual encounter and if you decided to detain the subject you would need reasonable suspicion. An order to show hands may be a minimal intrusion, but a detention is not.

Legal Standard

Asking a person to remove his hands from his pockets does not convert a consensual encounter into an investigative detention as long as:

- You requested that he remove his hands from his pockets; and
- You did it for officer safety purposes.

Ordering a person to remove his hands from his pockets may not convert a consensual encounter into an investigative detention if:

- You had a legitimate safety reason for ordering it; and
- You articulate that ordering the person to remove his hands was a minimal intrusion of his freedom.²

¹ People v. Franklin, 192 Cal. App. 3d 935 (Cal. App. 5th Dist. 1987)

² United States v. Enslin, 327 F.3d 788 (9th Cir. Cal. 2003)

Transporting to Police Station

There is no Fourth Amendment violation if you consensually transport a subject to the police station for a consensual interview or to a crime scene. The key is that the subject's consent must be freely and voluntarily given. If you involuntarily transport someone it may be deemed an arrest requiring probable cause.

Legal Standard

You may voluntarily transport a person in a police vehicle. However, if the person is a suspect to a crime and you are transporting the person for an interview, remember:

- Make it clear to the person that he is not under arrest;
- Seek consent to patdown the suspect for weapons; if the patdown is denied, do not patdown and you probably should not transport.

Case Examples

No violation when a person agrees to accompany police:

Appellate courts have held that when a person agrees to accompany the police to a station for an interrogation or some other purpose, the Fourth Amendment is not violated.¹

No seizure after agreeing to accompany police to the station and staying for five hours:

No seizure where defendant went with police to station and stayed there five hours before probable cause developed for his arrest.²

Detention ended when suspect consented to go to police station:

Law enforcement officer's Terry stop of automobile ended when defendant, who was riding in the automobile, agreed to go to police station, rather than when defendant was arrested several hours later.³

¹ In re Gilbert R., 25 Cal. App. 4th 1121 (Cal. App. 2d Dist. 1994)

² Craig v. Singletary 27 F.3d 1030 (11th Cir.1997)

³ United States v. Kimball, 25 F.3d 1 (1st Cir. 1994)

 CONSENSUAL ENCOUNTERS

Consent to Search

Absent good reason, you should routinely seek consent to search a person or his property even if you have reasonable suspicion or probable cause. Why? Because this will add an extra layer of protection to your case. For example, let's imagine you have probable cause to search a vehicle for drugs but still receive consent to search, the prosecution essentially needs to prove that consent was freely and voluntarily given.¹ If that fails, the prosecutor can fall back on your probable cause.

Without consent your case depends entirely on articulating P.C. Why not have both? Plus, juries like to see officers asking for consent. Either way, do your prosecutor a solid and write a complete and articulate report.

Legal Standard

Asking a person for consent to search does not convert the encounter into an investigative detention as long as:

- The person's consent was freely and voluntarily given;
- He had apparent authority to give consent to search the area or item; and
- You did not exceed the scope provided, expressed or implied. Scope is determined by objectively viewing the situation from the suspect's position.² Where would a reasonable person think you would search? It's not based only on where police think evidence would be found. .
- Courts may look at four factors when evaluating whether or not the scope of search was exceeded: time, duration, area, and intensity.³ See case examples below.
 - Time: Was the search executed within the time frame contemplated by the suspect?
 - Duration: Was the search unreasonably lengthy?
 - Area: Did officers search areas where the item sought could be found?

¹ Bumper v. North Carolina, 391 U.S. 543 (1968)

² State v. Ruscetta, 123 Nev. 299 (2007)

³ See State v. Ruscetta, 123 Nev. 299 (2007)

- Intensity: Did the methods used to search exceed the bounds of consent?

Things that help consent:¹

- Telling person they do not have to allow the search
- Telling person what you are searching for
- Fewer officers
- Plain clothes
- No weapons displayed
- No trickery such as hinting “no prosecution”
- Relatively short contact before consent given
- Friendly tone of voice, not threatening or commanding.
- Giving Miranda warnings (especially if person in custody)
- All factors about person giving consent such as: age, experience with the police, physical and mental condition, fluency in English.

Things that hurt consent:²

- Display of weapons or hand on weapon
- Large number of police, especially uniformed
- Deceit or trickery about either purpose or outcome
- Officer’s threatening demeanor, tone of voice
- A claim that police have authority to do the search anyway such as false claim that police have a warrant
- Negatives about person giving consent (young, lower intelligence, drunk, poor English).

Case Examples

Time: Search of van two days after written consent received was upheld as reasonable:

In-custody suspect gave written consent to search van for forensic evidence of a rape. Van was searched two days later by different agents. Under these particular circumstances, the time of the search was reasonable.³ Note: Ideally, the suspect would have been told the search would be executed two days later. But since he was in custody and never revoked consent, the court upheld it.

¹ Clark County Nevada DA Search and Seizure Manual for Lawyers (2015)

² Id.

³ U.S. v. White, 617 F.2d 1131 (5th Cir. 1989)

Duration: Request for a “real quick” search exceeded after 15 minutes and unscrewing speaker box:

With defendant agreeing to the officer’s request to “check (defendant’s car) real quick and get you on your way,” the scope of that consent was exceeded at some point before the search had continued for fifteen minutes without finding anything, and certainly when the officer later pulled a box from the trunk and removed the back panel to the box by unscrewing some screws.¹

Area: Directly “touching” genitals outside implied consent:

Officer got consent to search for drugs and “within seconds” reached down the defendant’s crotch and felt the suspect’s genital area searching for drugs. This area was not included in the consent to search. Note, searching “near” genital area is often upheld.²

Intensity: Damaging property requires “express consent”:

Officer got consent to search for drugs and opened a “tamales in gravy” can. Drugs were found inside. Since the officer “rendered the can useless” express permission was required.³

Dismantling a vehicle also requires express consent or the motor vehicle exception:

Cops received consent to search a vehicle for drugs and removed a door panel, revealing narcotics. The state argued that this fell within the driver’s consent and the court disagreed. However, PC existed because the trooper observed a missing door handle, mismatched screws, and a package inside the door.⁴ Note: Check your policy.

Consent valid despite being under arrest:

“Consent for the search must be freely and voluntarily given by the individual. Proof of the voluntariness is a question of fact. [Citations omitted.] . . . However, the mere fact that the consent was given while in the custody of a police officer does not render the consent involuntary.”⁵

¹ People v. Cantor, 149 Cal.App.4th 961 (2007)

² U.S. v. Blake, 888 F.2d 795 (11th Cir. 1989)

³ U.S. v. Osage, 235 F.3d 518 (10th Cir. 2000)

⁴ U.S. v. Garcia, 897 F.2d 1413 (1990)

⁵ Surianello v. State, 92 Nev. 492 (1976)

Third Party Consent

You may seek consent to search a residence from co-occupants. However, the situation changes when there is a present non-consenting co-occupant. If one occupant tells you to “Come on in and bring your friends!” and another yells “Get the hell out, I’m watching Netflix!” Well, you must stay out.

What about areas under the exclusive control of the consentor? For example, the “cooperative” tenant says you can still search his bedroom? Or a shed that he has exclusive control over in the backyard? There is no case that deals directly with this issue, but if the area is truly under the exclusive control of the consenting party, and you can articulate that the non-consenting party has no reasonable expectation of privacy in that area, it would likely be reasonable to search just that area. But one thing is certain, you still may not be able to access the area under the cooperative tenant’s control without walking through common areas—common areas would still be off limits.

The best practice is to wait until the non-consenting occupant has left the residence and then seek consent from the cooperative occupant. In other words, if the non-consenting occupant goes to work, a store, or is lawfully arrested, the remaining occupant can consent to a search. Still; do not search areas under the exclusive control of the non-consenting party. This may include file cabinets, “man-caves,” purses, backpacks, and so forth.

Finally, if the consenting party has greater authority over the residence, then police may rely on that consent. For example, if a casual visitor or babysitter objected to police entry, it may be overruled by the homeowner. Remember, you may not search personal property under the exclusive control of the visitor or babysitter.

Legal Standard

Spouses and Co-Occupants:

Spouses or co-occupants may consent to search inside a home if:

- The person has apparent authority;
- Consent is only given for common areas, areas under his exclusive control, or areas or things the person has authorized access to; and

- A non-consenting spouse or co-occupant with the same or greater authority is not present.
- Note: The consenting party does not need to be present.¹

Articulating Greater Authority:

An occupant with greater authority over the premises may consent to search even if the objecting occupant is present if:

- The co-occupant had greater authority over the area or item searched (e.g. parents versus child); and
- Your search did not exceed the scope provided by the consenting occupant.
- Note: A mature child can consent to search common areas or exclusive areas/items under his control. A child cannot consent to search private areas like parents' bedroom.²

Case Examples

If non-consenting occupant is arrested or leaves, remaining occupant may consent to search despite prior objection:

Police could conduct a warrantless search of defendant's apartment following defendant's arrest, based on consent to the search by a woman who also occupied the apartment, although defendant had objected to the search prior to his arrest and was absent at the time of the woman's consent because of his arrest.³

Consent of wife valid after non-consenting husband left residence:

"The consent of one who possesses common authority over premises or effects" generally "is valid as against the absent, non-consenting person with whom that authority is shared."⁴

If an occupant invites police inside, police may assume other occupants wouldn't object:

"[S]hared tenancy is understood to include an "assumption of risk," on which police officers are entitled to rely, and although some group living together might make an exceptional arrangement that no one could admit a guest without the agreement of all, police need not assume that's the case"⁵

¹ Casteel v. State, 122 Nev. 356 (2018)

² See Georgia v. Randolph, 547 U.S. 103 (2006)

³ Fernandez v. California, 571 U.S. 292 (2014)

⁴ United States v. Cordero-Rosario, 786 F.3d 64 (1st Cir. P.R. 2015)

⁵ Georgia v. Randolph, 547 U.S. 103 (2006)

Mistaken Authority to Consent

Sometimes you may think you're dealing with someone who has the authority to consent, but later find out that you were wrong. For example, the consent was received from a guest, not a homeowner. Here, courts will look to see if your mistake was reasonable.

However, ignorance is not bliss: “[O]fficers cannot use the apparent authority doctrine to justify a warrantless search when they fail to make a sufficient inquiry into the consenting party’s ‘use, access, or control over’ the area to be searched,”¹ especially when circumstances exist that would lead a reasonable person to question the person’s authority.

For example, if an adult female answers the door and consents to a search and cops look around the apartment and it’s fairly obvious that only a man lives there, then courts expect officers to stop searching and ask more questions about her connection to the apartment. In the end, she may be an overnight guest with no apparent authority over the defendant’s property.

Legal Standard

If you mistakenly receive consent from a person who had “apparent authority,” courts will employ a three-part analysis to determine if your mistake was reasonable:²

- Did you believe some untrue fact;
- Was it objectively reasonable for you to believe that the fact was true under the circumstances at the time; and
- If it was true, would the consent giver have had actual authority?

Case Examples

Simply claiming to live at a home may not be enough without more info:

Even if person claims to live at a home, “the surrounding circumstances could conceivably be such that a reasonable person would doubt its truth and not act upon it without further inquiry.”³

¹ Lastine v. State, 134 Nev. 538 (Nev. App. 2018)

² State v. Taylor, 114 Nev. 1071 (1998)

³ Ill. v. Rodriguez, 497 U.S. 177 (1990)

Qualified Immunity

You work in a dynamic and unpredictable environment. Therefore, you encounter situations where you are tasked to solve unique problems despite no direct training or case law to guide them. Qualified immunity protects you whenever you venture into constitutionally-unchartered territories.

Legal Standard

Even if a constitutional violation occurred and evidence is suppressed under the exclusionary rule, there is no § 1983 violation when:

- You violated a constitutionally or federally right; but
- That right was not clearly established at the time of the violation.

Case Examples

Officer who attempted knock and talk on side door, versus front door, entitled to qualified immunity:

It is an open, undecided issue, with authority going both ways, as to whether it is lawful for an officer to conduct a “knock and talk” at other than the front door. A trooper was sued by homeowners because he knocked on a side door, instead of the front door. The Supreme Court determined that the officer was entitled to qualified immunity in that the issue is the subject of conflicting authority.¹

No qualified immunity for prison guard who obviously violated rights:

Guard who handcuffed a shirtless prisoner to a hitching post as punishment was not eligible for qualified immunity since it obviously violated the Fourth Amendment.²

¹ Carroll v. Carman, 135 S. Ct. 348 (2014)

² Hope v. Pelzer, 536 U.S. 730 (2002)

Index

AIRPORT & OTHER ADMINISTRATIVE CHECKPOINTS 218ARRESTS

“Contempt of Cop” Arrests, 100
 Collective Knowledge Doctrine, 35, 91
 Drugs, attempt to swallow, 106
 DUI blood tests, 108
 DUI breath tests, 107
 Lawful, 86
 Line-Ups, 94
 Meaning of “Committed in the Officer’s Presence?” 93
 Private searches, 27
 Protective sweeps, 96
 Public protests, arrests at, 101
 Search, “temporary” arrest, 104
 Search, incident to, 102
 Search, prior to formal arrest, 103
 Vehicle search, incident to, 109
 Warrant, entry with, 88
 Warrantless entry, 89
 When to “Unarrest” a Suspect, 98

ARSON INVESTIGATIONS, 217BORDER SEARCHES, 220BUSINESSES & SCHOOLS

Customer business records, 182
 Fire, health, and safety inspections, 184
 Government workplace searches, 185
 Heavily regulated businesses, 183
 School searches, 186
 SROs, security guards, and administrators, 190
 Student drug testing, 189
 Use of force against students, 192
 Warrantless arrest inside business, 181

C.R.E.W., 24, 138, 168, 173, 174CAUSE-OF-INJURY SEARCHES, 212CHECKPOINTS

Airport & other administrative, 218
 DUI, 117

COLLECTIVE KNOWLEDGE DOCTRINE, 91CONFIDENTIAL INFORMANTS, 229CONSENSUAL ENCOUNTERS, 42DECISION SEQUENCING, 23DISCARDED DNA, 215DUI

blood tests, 108 breath tests, 107
 checkpoints, 117

FIFTH AMENDMENT, 19FINGERNAIL SCRAPES, 216FOURTH AMENDMENT, 16

Reasonableness, 25
 Search, 38
 Seizure, 39

“HOMES

“Ruse” or lie, convincing suspect to exit, 176
 Child’s room, parental consent to search, 157
 Co-occupants, consent to search, 155
 Curtilage, 149
 Detaining a home in anticipation of a warrant, 178
 Fresh pursuit, 161
 Hot pursuit, 161
 Hotel rooms, 142
 Knock and talks, 146
 Mistaken authority to consent, 158
 Open fields, 148
 Plain view seizure, 152
 Protective sweeps, 159
 RVs, 142
 Surround and call-out, 179
 Tents, 142
 Trash searches, 154
 Warrant requirement, 140
 Warrantless arrest at doorway, 164
 Warrantless entry based on “ruse” or lie, 175
 Warrantless entry for an emergency, 168

Warrantless entry for officer safety, 170
Warrantless entry to investigate child abuse, 171
Warrantless entry to investigate homicide crime, 173
Warrantless entry to make arrest, 166
Warrantless entry to prevent destruction of evidence, 174
Warrantless entry to protect property, 172

HUNCHES, 30

INTERVIEW AND INTERROGATION,

Ambiguous invocations, 261
Coercive influences and de facto arrests, 255
Evidence discovered after Miranda violation, 269
Invocation prior to interrogation, 260
Miranda violations, intentional versus accidental, 265
Miranda, elements, 254
Miranda, inside jail and prison, 257
Miranda, juveniles 258
Miranda, when required, 251
Miranda, when to provide again, 266
Public safety exception, 267
Routine booking questions, 268
Suspect invoked, 262, 264
Witnesses and victims, 259

INVESTIGATIVE ACTIVITIES, 47

INVESTIGATIVE DETENTIONS

Anonymous tip, 73
Detaining a suspect, 62
During stop, 68
Factors to consider, 60
Field identifications, 70
Flight, upon seeing officer, 71
Handcuffing, 75
Involuntary Transportation, 82
Length of detention, 66
Officer safety detentions, 64
Patdown, 77, 80
Plain Feel Doctrine, 81
Recording of Officer, 84
Use of force, 75
Victims, detaining, 76
Witnesses, detaining, 76

KNOCK AND ANNOUNCE, 231

KNOCK AND TALKS,

Homes, 146, 45

LAW ENFORCEMENT LIABILITY

Attenuation, 278
Behavior that “shocks the conscience”, 285
Deliberate indifference, 286
Duty to protect, 281
Duty to intervene, 282
Exclusionary rule, 271
Exclusionary rule, exceptions, 273
Fruit of the poisonous tree, 274
Good faith exception, 276
Inevitable or independent discovery, 279
Non-essential personnel, bringing into the home, 290
Qualified immunity, 291
Section 1983 civil rights violations, 288
Section 242 criminal charges, 289
Social media, sharing crime scene photos on, 287
Standing to object, 275
Supervisor liability, 283
Unequal enforcement of the law, 284

LEFT ALONE, RIGHT TO BE, 22

MEDICAL PROCEDURES, 213

MISCELLANEOUS SEARCHES & SEIZURES

Airport & other administrative checkpoints, 218
Arson investigations, 217
Border searches, 220
Cause-of-injury searches, 212
Discarded DNA, 215
Fingernail scrapes, 216
Medical procedures, 213
Probationer & parolee searches, 222

PATDOWNS

Based on anonymous tip, 80
For weapons, 77

PERSONAL PROPERTY,

Abandoned or Lost Property, 196

Containers, 194
 Mail or Packages, 198
 Single Purpose Container Doctrine,
 195

PLAIN FEEL DOCTRINE, 81

PRIVATE SEARCHES, 27

PROBABLE CAUSE, 33

PROBATIONER & PAROLEE SEARCHES, 222

PROTECTIVE SWEEPS

Arrests, 96
 Homes, 159

REASONABLE SUSPICION

Border search, 220
 Community caretaking, 114
 Confidential informants, 229
 Consensual encounters, 42
 Defined, 31
 Detaining suspect, 62
 Drug testing, students, 189
 Handcuffing, 75
 Hands in pockets, removing, 51
 Hot pursuit, 161
 Hunches, 30
 Identification, asking for, 49
 Investigative detentions, 60
 K9, 127
 Knock and talks, 45, 146
 Length of detention, 66
 Passengers, 120, 135, 137
 Protective sweep, 96, 159
 Recording of police, 84
 School search, 186, 190
 Stops, 57, 115
 Unrelated questioning, 136
 Vehicles, 115, 117, 118

REASONABLENESS, 25

RIGHT 'TO BE LEFT ALONE', 22

SEARCH WARRANTS

Anticipatory search warrant, 228
 Confidential informants, 229

Detaining occupants inside and in immediate vicinity, 233
 Frisking occupants, 235
 Handcuffing occupants, 237
 Knock and announce, 231
 Overview, 224
 Particularity requirement, 227
 Receipt, return, and inventory, 240
 Sealing affidavits, 230
 Serving arrest warrant at residence, 238
 Wrong address liability, 239

SEARCH

Arrest, incident to, 102
 Border searches, 220
 Child's room, parental consent to search, 157
 Consent to search a vehicle, 122
 Co-occupants, consent to search by, 155
 Defined, 38
 Government workplace searches, 185
 Prior to formal arrest, 103
 Private Searches, 27
 Probationer & parolee searches, 222
 School searches, 186
 Searching vehicle incident after an arrest, 128
 Searching vehicle with probable cause, 130
 Technology searches, 200 thru 210
 "Temporary" arrest, 104
 Trash searches, 154
 Vehicle search, incident to arrest, 109

SEIZURE (See also MISCELLANEOUS SEARCHES & SEIZURES)

Defined, 39

TECHNOLOGY SEARCHES

Aerial surveillance, 208
 Binoculars, 202
 Cell phone location records, 207
 Cell phones, laptops, and tablets, 206
 Flashlights, 201
 GPS devices, 209
 Night vision goggles, 204
 Obtaining passwords, 210
 Sensory enhancements, 200
 Thermal imaging, 205

USE OF FORCE

Escape, use of force to prevent 243
Deadly force during vehicle pursuit, 244
Handcuffing, improper 245
Hog/hobble tie, 249
Non-deadly force, 242
Pointing gun at suspect, 247
Using patrol (i.e., bite) dogs, 248

VEHICLES

Checkpoints, DUI, 117
Checkpoints, information gathering, 118
Checkpoints, legal considerations, 119
Community caretaking, 114
Consent to search a vehicle, 122
Constructive possession, 137
Dangerous items left in vehicle, 131
Detaining a recent vehicle occupant, 121
Frisking people who ride in police vehicle, 126

Frisking vehicle and occupants for weapons, 124
General rule, 112
Inventories, 132
K9 sniff around vehicle, 127
Ordering passengers to stay in, or exit vehicle, 120
Passengers, identifying, 135
Reasonable suspicion, 115
Scope of stop similar to an investigative detention, 113
Searching vehicle incident to arrest, 109
Searching vehicle with probable cause, 130
Temporary registration, verification of, 116
Unrelated questioning, 136

WRONG ADDRESS LIABILITY, 239

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Anthony Bandiero, JD, ALM

Anthony is an attorney and retired law enforcement officer with experience as both a municipal police officer and sergeant with a state police agency. Anthony has studied constitutional law for over twenty years and has trained countless police officers around the nation in search and seizure.

View his bio at BlueToGold.com/about

NEVADA

Search & Seizure Survival Guide

Your job as an officer is almost completely controlled by the Fourth and Fifth Amendments. Therefore, you need a reference that can break down these important constitutional doctrines into easy-to-apply checklists. That's what this book does. If you need guidance in the field, pick up this book. When you get back to the station and need help articulating the legal standards for your report, pick up this book.

There are other legal references out there and I highly recommend you read them. But this book has one serious competitive advantage: it was written by a retired police officer-turned-attorney who has been in your shoes, and knows what you need to know.

Visit: Bluetogold.com

Training | Legal Updates | Free Webinars