SYNOPSIS

The Sixth V. Narayanan Memorial Endowment Lecture will explore the evolving relationship between Artificial Intelligence and the individual in shaping the future of work, leadership, and society. While AI is transforming industries, productivity, and decision-making at an unprecedented pace, the true differentiator will remain the human ability to learn, adapt, and lead with purpose.

Drawing from his four decades of leadership in global manufacturing and technology-driven transformation, Mr. B. Santhanam will reflect on how individuals can effectively integrate AI into their professional and personal lives. The memorial lecture will emphasize that in the era of Artificial Intelligence, the most critical element remains the “I” – the individual – who must develop the agility, ethical judgment, and continuous learning mindset required to harness AI responsibly and productively.

In the spirit of the visionary leadership of Mr. V. Narayanan, who believed in building organizations anchored in character and competence, the lecture will highlight how individuals can leverage emerging technologies while retaining the human values, creativity, and leadership qualities that drive sustainable progress.
