

Croco the Crocodile and the Cold Water
downloadable templates

Title: “Croco the Crocodile and the Cold Water”

Characters on sticks: Croco the Crocodile, Froggy

Props on sticks: River waves, a little stone, a fish

Is the stage ready? Let's begin!

Croco walks onto the stage, heading toward a flowing river nearby.

Narrator: Croco looks very hungry. His tummy is growling loudly.

Croco: (worried voice): Oh nooo... I'm super hungry! ...

Croco steps to the riverbank and dips his paw in the water - then pulls it out immediately.

Narrator: He shakes his paw and steps back. He shivers from the cold and frowns.

Croco: Brrr! It's freezing! I can't go in there...

Just then, Froggy pops out of the river and hops onto the shore.

Narrator: Froggy bounces happily and gives a big smile.

Froggy (cheerfully): Hi, Croco! What are you up to?

Croco (worried): Hey Froggy... I'm starving, but the water's so cold - I'm too scared to go in.

Narrator: Froggy sits on the shore, kicking her legs and looking at Croco with concern.

Froggy (surprised): Scared of cold water? But you're a crocodile!

Croco (sadly): I know, Froggy, but it's just too cold.

Froggy (sympathetically): Oh no... That means you'll stay hungry... and you won't help me either.

Narrator: Croco notices Froggy looking sadly at the river.

Croco: What's wrong, Froggy? What did you need my help with?

Froggy: I lost my favorite little stone. It sank to the bottom of the river, and I can't find it...

Croco: A stone? Was it really that important? It's just a little stone...

Froggy (sniffing): But it was a gift from my mom... It's a very special keepsake...

Narrator: A tiny tear rolls down Froggy's cheek. Croco watches her, touched by her sadness.

Croco: Hmm, alright. I may not like cold water, but I'll help you, Froggy. I'll dive in and try to find your stone!

Narrator: Croco takes a deep breath and looks at the river. His tail trembles slightly, but there's determination in his eyes.

Froggy (happily): Really? Thank you, Croco! That's so kind and brave of you!

Croco: But I can't promise I'll find it.

Froggy: What matters is that you'll try.

Narrator: Croco hesitates for a moment, but then he overcomes his fear and jumps into the water. Froggy watches the river closely.

Croco returns with the little stone and a fish. Froggy jumps around joyfully, croaking with happiness.

Croco (proudly): Here's your stone, Froggy! I found it! And I caught a fish too!

Froggy: Croco, you're amazing! Thank you! You found my stone and caught a fish! You're a real hero!

Croco: You know, Froggy - sometimes it's worth facing your fears to help others. And... it wasn't so bad after all!

The End

Moral: It's worth overcoming your fears to help others.

