DROUGHTMASTER BULL - STANDING

The Droughtmaster evolved in north Queensland originally by crossing Brahman and Shorthorn cattle in an attempt to combine the desirable qualities of the two breeds to produce a breed suitable for the tropics.

Natureworks Bull

Bull Characteristics

Droughtmasters are medium to large cattle with medium maturity. They have good body length, a sleek coat, and a reputation for reasonable fertility, ease of calving and good mothering ability under harsh conditions. Dressing percentage is high. They have a quiet temperament, are good foragers, have a high resistance to bloat and are tolerant of heat and ticks.

Fighting Bull
Desk Top Version
L 40 x W 26 x H 26cm - 2kg

The Spanish fighting bull, or toro de lidia, is a unique breed of bovine renowned for its exceptional bravery and beauty. The bull's physical build and natural aggression make this breed appropriate for the bullfight due to its impressive strength as well as its natural instinct to charge (attack).

IN THE NEWS

David in Rockhampton News 2015

Tens of thousands of visitors to Beef Australia 2015 this week have been greeted by a small paddock of brahman bulls, droughtmasters and greys, but these ones don't require any love.

They look just as heavy and as big as the real ones but instead they are made from fibreglass.

Natureworks director David Joffe said the life-like sculptures have received a lot of interest from beef producers at the week-long industry event.

David hopes his company, which creates sculptures of animals and imaginary creatures, can team up with a number of cattle breeders to create more bull casts.

"We're hoping to, within a few years, have all the [Australian beef cattle] breeds greeting people as they walk into Beef Week," he said.

Having spent more than a decade working at the Queensland Museum in Brisbane, David mastered the art of creating realistic looking sculptures.

He said he made his first bull 30 years ago but has spent time perfecting the technique since then.

"[We need] the perfect photos or the perfect artwork and ideally a drawing with all the different details to find the perfect head, the perfect rump," he said of the creative process.

"We also need to work from exact measurements, you know the width of their hips, the height of the hump at the back, so once we have the information accurate, we start sculpting in plasticine with a steel armature. "We then mould it in silicon rubber, strip it off the original sculpture and then lay fibreglass into the silicon mould."

And from there it is just a matter of joining together the two halves and painting its features.

David said the response from the public at the event has been surprising.

"We've been focused on the bulls for the last six months but I've come to realise the massive amount of interest in these animals is actually worth pursuing because a lot of people make their entire living out of one breed of animal," he said.

MATILDA THE KANGAROO - GIANT

HER STORY

The original Matilda stood at 12 metres tall and made her debut at the Commonwealth Games in 1988. She was the star of the show, but was never designed and fabricated so as to weather the elements and the passage of time.

She was stored away in a paddock and forgotten about for some years before being bought by the Matilda Petrol Station Group in about 2007.

They spent well over $100,000 to renovate her and relocated this icon to their signature servo north of Gympie, where she now resides hidden from the passing traffic in the new roadhouse sold by the Matilda Fuel Group to the new owners "PUMA" who relinquished their connection with the kangaroo.

Prior to the sale Matilda Group intended to use this ICONIC figure as their mascot, to reside over their vision for what was to be hundreds of Matilda service stations Australia-wide.

Natureworks Pty Ltd a specialist art fabrication company in Highvale (nr Samford) north of Brisbane was engaged to re-design a slimmer version without losing the spirit of the original sculpture.

The rear end of the original roo was over 4.2 metres wide and posed a problem for both fabrication and transport of the piece, so this width at the hips was reduced to 2.4 metres and the height to 9.0 metres, making it easy to transport. The head and ears were built as separate components and Natureworks installed the first piece at Tugun on the Gold Coast in 2009.

When negotiations for the sale of the service station group later began the fabrication of further pieces was put on hold. A year later the concept died once "PUMA" took over the group. The Tugun fuel depot now owned by "Puma" sold the sculpture back to Natureworks who is now offering the piece for sale in Australia.

DESCRIPTION

The fibreglass sculpture is in excellent condition finished in pre-pigmented polyester gel-coat. It has been designed so as to enable a head turn and an eye-wink as an option.

It can be easily assembled on a concrete slab in less than a day. This highly refined version of Matilda is designed to sit in the open forever.

It is the next BIG THING waiting to put your business on the Australian map.
