SUGAR TIME CELEBRATIONS

By the early 1900s harvesting maple syrup had become a traditional seasonal activity. Farmers with stands of maple on their property tapped their trees when the sugar rose in the sap in late winter and early spring. This seasonal activity became a celebration in which all the family was involved. A sleigh drawn by a horse (and sometimes by a large dog) was used to collect the maple sap.

Kickin' Ceilidh

The tradition of the kitchen party, or ceilidh (pronounced kaylee), is classically known as a gathering where carousers would crowd around a woodstove or step dance across the floor, while a few musicians sat in the corner trading songs and tunes. Hence, the Kickin' Ceilidh!

This grave is of JOSEPH Dawson, an Irish coal shoveler - not JACK Dawson (aka Leonardo DiCaprio) of the Titanic movie fame.

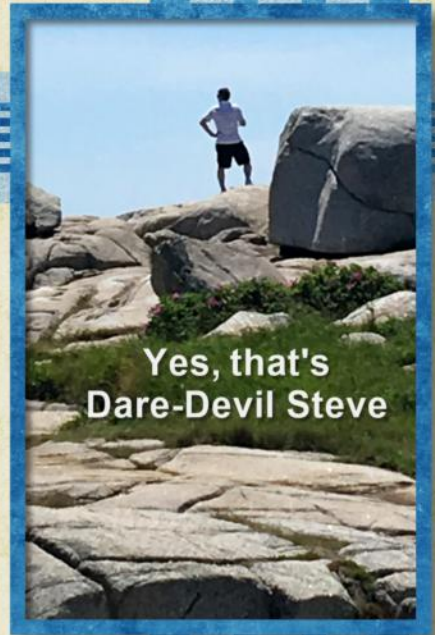

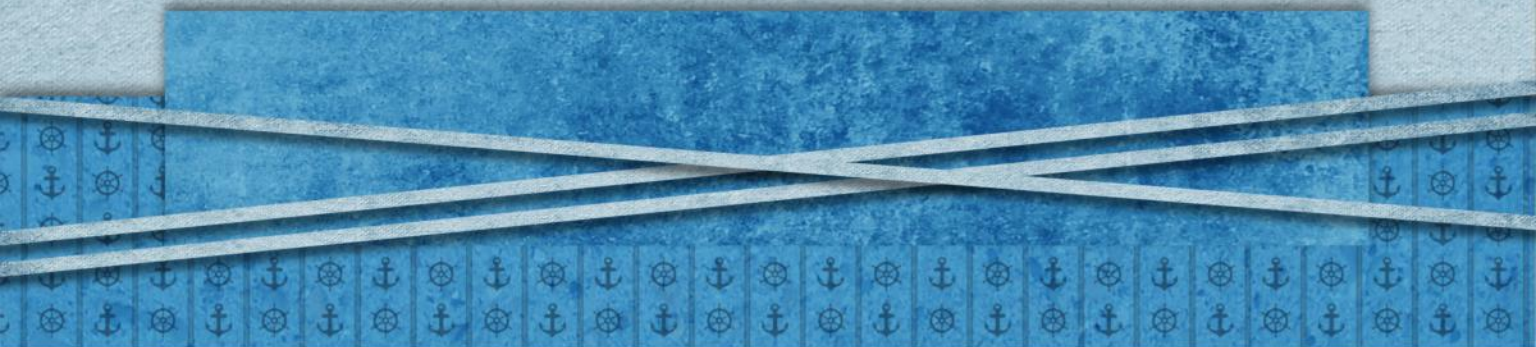

Peggy's Cove

Bar Harbor, Maine

At the turn of the 20th century, Bar Harbor was the world's most exclusive and illustrious resort and stately Victorian mansions belonged to fabulously wealthy summer residents trying to outdo each other with lavish parties.
