Being Ready for an Emergency is More than Just a First Aid Kit

Injuries happen on the job, make sure you're prepared to treat different types of injuries and adhere to OSHA guidelines.

- OSHA requires First Aid Supplies must be readily available for every business.
- State regulations require certain businesses and organizations to have AEDs readily available to treat Sudden Cardiac Arrest victims.
- Employers must limit exposure to bloodborne pathogens (BBP).
- Protection is needed for possible burn exposure at work.
- OSHA strongly recommends bleeding control kits for unexpected traumatic bleeding events.
- If required, Eyewash stations must be installed within 10 seconds walk and on same floor.

A worker is injured on the job every seven seconds
