WHAT YOU DO TODAY AFFECTS OUR TOMORROW

NOT YOUR USUAL SNOWBIRD

Arvy flew in from Connecticut on an airplane like so many other snowbirds. Only thing is, Arvy is a brown pelican that should have flown south on her own. The ever-changing environment has affected the timing of bird migration patterns and this little girl missed her opportunity before northern temperatures fell. She arrived at the Sanctuary with such badly frostbitten feet that toes had to be removed leaving her unable to survive in the wild.

A FED BEAR IS A DEAD BEAR

Black bears Tehya and Kiona were orphaned as young cubs when their mother was killed. As they were being raised in an urban environment where residents were feeding them, the girls had no fear of humans and weren't equipped for life in the wild. Life in captivity was their only option for survival.

THE HUMAN CONNECTION

Almost 6,000 wildlife patients come to the Sanctuary annually, many due to harm inflicted by humans. Gunshot wounds, being hit by cars, tangled in fishing line, electrocution, kept illegally as pets, attacked by people's pet, the list goes on and on.

OUR WILDLIFE PREDICT OUR FUTURE

- Scientists use the health and welfare of our wildlife as indicators of the health and welfare of our environment. The American River Otter and American Crocodile are dying at a rapid rate in the wild. This means that their ecosystem (and ours) are headed for danger.
- 1,000 people per day are moving into Florida. Our natural wildlife habitats are shrinking as new homes and roads are built and traffic increases.
- Our food supply is dependent upon pollination, not only by butterflies and bees, but by bats, moths and several other animal species. When they and their habitats are threatened, so is the food we put on our tables.
- The introduction of exotic species, like iguanas and Burmese pythons, by humans to the Everglades, Florida's crucial water and wetland resource, has and continues to threaten the life and health of hundreds of our native species and can cause serious economic damage.

SAVE OUR WILDLIFE - SAVE OUR PLANET

Did you know, when Bald Eagles, found in 49 US states, were mysteriously dying in the 1970s, it was discovered that the cause was the pesticide DDT, used to keep crops and livestock pest-free. Once DDT was outlawed, the eagles thrived and populations soared again. With all of our help, we can make a difference and help our wildlife survive and thrive.

DOING OUR PART

For over 30 years, Busch Wildlife Sanctuary has been rescuing, rehabilitating and releasing our native species by the thousands. Reintroducing endangered and keystone species back into our fragile ecosystems. Since our founding, over 1.7 million guests have participated in our education programs on the need for environmental conservation and protection.

DOING YOUR PART

Will you help us save the endangered and imperiled? We have purchased property to meet the increasing demand for more wildlife rehabilitation and expanded educational opportunities for so many generations to come. It will be a home of our own, a safe haven for native wildlife that have lost theirs.

WE NEED YOUR HELP...

to ensure the future of these efforts. YOU can help create a state-of-the-art animal rehabilitation center and build a new educational facility which will set a new standard of excellence for facilities around the world. Your generous support will make a big difference in the lives of wildlife.
