+ About Us

Our manufacturing experience and capability dates back over 40 years, with the last 20 from our factory in Sunderland, not far from the iconic Spire Bridge which spans the river Wear. We pride ourselves on constant development and innovation which has seen major investment in additional facilities in the last year including new buildings, factory layout, extraction, biomass heating and systems.

We also pride ourselves on our workforce development programme and apprenticeship scheme. Our staff are at the very heart of the operation and key to our ability to look after the needs and requirements of a vitally important asset – you the client. Education and learning whether Brown and Hood in-house staff or our recommended design installers is crucial to our ongoing success.

Creating a new kitchen or bedroom is a complex task and requires the knowledge and experience of a wide range of people. The Brown and Hood team are highly experienced and well placed to help you with your project. On-going investment in areas such as our showroom facility, training, and supporting documentation combine together to demonstrate how to go about creating your dream kitchen or bedroom.

At Brown and Hood we are proud to be the Professional's Choice who do everything to serve our customers.

The factory is a proud corporate member of the Kitchen and Bathroom Specialists Association. As a respected trust mark, this sets the highest standards in quality of service; and we are the only producer in the North East to have received this recognition.

+ True Handleless

True handleless design is a modern and sleek approach to kitchen design that eliminates the need for visible handles or knobs on your kitchen cabinets and drawers. Instead, the doors and drawers have hidden channels that allow you to easily open and close them.

One of the main benefits of true handleless design is that it creates a clean and minimalist look, which can be especially appealing if you're going for a contemporary or modern style in your kitchen. It also means that there are no handles or knobs to get in the way when you're cooking or cleaning, which can make your kitchen more functional and user-friendly.

True handleless design is a great option if you're looking for a modern and minimalist look in your kitchen. It can make your space feel streamlined, functional, and is a popular choice among homeowners who value both style and functionality.

+ Our History

Brown and Hood's association with the North-East goes back to the 1800's. Its illustrious history relates in no small part to the skill and ability of the local engineers who built the ground-breaking and revolutionary ship the 'Turbinia' at the Brown and Hood shipyard in 1894.

The vessel is now on permanent display at Newcastle-upon-Tyne's Discovery Museum.

Brown and Hood ceased ship building on the Tyne in the early 1970's, but the name lives on, and was resurrected by Gordon, whose father and grandfather led the company for many years.

Gordon, a founding Director of the Brown and Hood factory, started manufacturing kitchens here in the North-East 40 years ago, and knew that Brown and Hood epitomised high quality and the skill of the trades involved in the process, which are all required to ensure each project is completed to the highest of standards.

Brown and Hood is more than just a brand of kitchen and bedroom furniture. It stands for the skill of those who craft the product and choose to design with and install it.
