Series Synopsis

The series revolves around two Kiel-based detectives, Klaus Borowski and Mila Sahin, who work together to solve crimes and often find themselves mired in personal conflicts.

Young, ambitious Sahin often acts as a mediator between Borowski and the people he has to deal with.

Borowski's track record as an investigator is unparalleled, but he's a hard man to get along with, and has a penchant for unconventional methods. He's a man of few words, and a born loner. But his colleagues and superiors know that he's an asset to the squad. They can always depend on him to turn up where he's most needed – and least expected.

Klaus Borowski

Police investigator.

*"I don't believe in the goodness of people.
I believe in evidence and facts."*

Borowski is a chief inspector with the KRIPO in Kiel. He is known for being a man of few words and a lone wolf, both professionally and in his private life.

While Borowski's methods are unconventional, he has a deep respect for the law. He knows his limits and is careful not to exceed them.

He is also quick-witted and has a keen sense of humour. In short, Borowski is a "typical Northern German": a bit gruff and taciturn at times, but basically kind-hearted and sincere.

Mila Sahin

Detective.

“I believe in justice, and I believe that everyone has the right to be heard.”

Mila Sahin is Borowski’s third assistant. The 28-year-old is a passionate boxer and brings her fighting spirit with her to work.

Sahin is not intimidated by authority or men. She is known for her empathy and razor-sharp mind.

Roland Schladitz

Borowski's and Sahin's Boss.

"We need to get onto that, guys. And pronto!"

Roland Schladitz takes his work as a policeman and commanding officer seriously, often serving as a buffer between police leadership and his team of investigators. He and Borowski have been friends for years, and Schladitz cares deeply about his colleagues, especially Borowski.

When Schladitz started out in the profession, he was initially rather shy and reserved. Over the years, he has grown into a force to be reckoned with: a real policeman who balances a quirky sense of humour with a dedicated and caring approach to his work.
