YOUTH FASHION IS ON THE ★DECLINE★

NEOVISION, NAARM CORE, TECHNO AND KETAMINE ARE RUINING YOUTH FASHION.

Anyone can start up a brand, throw an uninspired logo onto an overpriced hoodie, call it a day and get money. Is this really what clothing has come to? Are blue jorts and a NeoVision button up an acceptable combo?

We will never appeal to the Naarm-core masses with 'trendy' plaid shirts or dropshipped sunnies off TEMU.

We will never be a soulless streetwear brand with $70 simple graphic tees or t-shirts with our logo on it. We will have soul and character with our shit and will never sell out to brands for a collab for quick cash.

Techno and Ketamine have been gentrified where there are brands jumping on the druggy aesthetic trend or appealing to those people just for some quick money for their 'spring and summer' collection on their overpriced startup brand.

Propagate will never be that.

If we ever go against anything I said in this post, feel free to yell abuse at us on Twitter about it or through Instagram DM's.

MOVIE REVIEW

WARNING!

CONTAINS SPOILERS

This movie is starting to grow on me after I watched it a couple days ago. I really like the story and how it shows off how a bunch of teenagers wouldn't take account of their actions. I like the directing in it, there's a lot of unusual camera shots which aren't there just for being unusual, they actually add to the story. I don't like the lingering shots of the naked actors though, many people have commented that Larry Clark (the director of the movie) is a pervert and I can't blame them for thinking that after I've seen his other movie KIDS (1995) where there's alot of unneeded nudity. I like how eerie the ending is where they show the sentencing of the people involved on screen with Fatboy Slim playing in the back. Good movie, may buy it on Blu-ray. 4 stars.
