Kiwetin combines the work of two Métis artists - the painting of Kristi Bridgeman and the beadwork of Lisa Shepherd.

A note about Lii Shenn: "I have chosen to incorporate my Michif language for painting titles when I am able. My Grandmother spoke a little of the Cree-Michif and Chinook trade language of her family, and so I am making an effort to help language revitalization at home and in community."

Queen Anne's
Lace & American
Goldfinch

©Robert Bateman

6 25012 45087 4

The artist's statement about the painting:

"It flits and twitters just like a canary, and in fact, that is what the goldfinch is - America's wild canary. In my opinion, with his dapper yellow and black with white trim, he is more handsome by far than any tame canary that I have ever seen.

The goldfinch is found all over North America in open country, particularly where there are weedy meadows and small trees. The nest is a perfect little cup set in a small tree or shrub from just above the ground to eye level. When it is available, the "cup" is lined with horsehair which is carefully woven to form a smooth cradle for the babies.

In a sense, the main subject of the painting is the meadow. It is an undistinguished little piece of the world which we all too readily take for granted. In fact, meadows with their multitude of plants are often considered "wasteland" and are cut, or even worse, sprayed with poisons. I feel that when you stop to look at it, a chunk of meadow can give as much pleasure to the eye as acres of tulips.

In this particular scene, Queen Anne's lace is the dominant flower. It is jaunty, yet delicate and reminiscent of the finery worn in royal circles a few centuries ago. The goldenrod has a ring of nobility in its name and brings a yellow accent to accompany the bird. My aim is to give a feeling of life, movement and air to this bit of nature. In a sense, I am glorifying a neglected corner of our planet."

Almost every puzzle company has a zodiac image, but at Cobble Hill we like to do things a little differently. Why make a single zodiac image - when you can make twelve! Because really, when we encounter a horoscope column - do we read the whole thing? Most of us don't. Most of us read our own sign - and maybe our friend's and family's...
