INTRODUCTION

Trillions of galaxies exist in the cosmos. Even the most intelligent human minds cannot imagine its size, depth, or expansion.

One galaxy can contain billions of stars, asteroids, and phenomena known as black holes. If we found a potential inter-dimensional wormhole, our space travel from earth to faraway places in the universe would shorten and save time.

Stars burn out and die over time to become death stars.

Any planet orbiting a dying star will darken and freeze. Life will end. Such occurrences are taking place on the planet called Solar-gon.

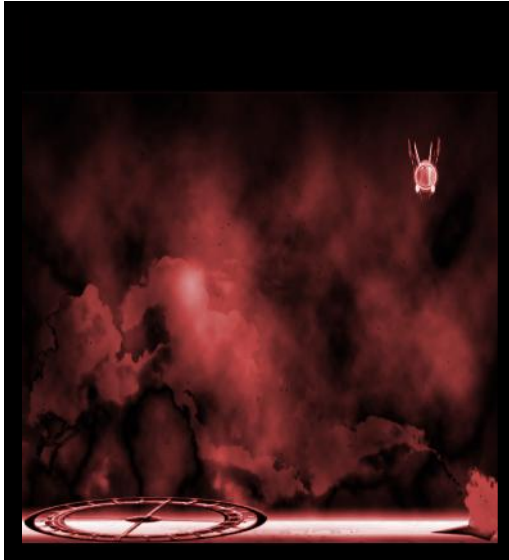

The year is 2175. In the Elliptical Swirl galaxy, the planet Solargon is being ripped apart. Subfreezing temperatures on the ground mixed with boiling lava are pouring out of its outer and inner cores.

The thin, crusty surface is breaking up. Large cracks and holes appear from pressure buildup.

Pockets of fireballs flare out from the ground as seismic ruptures and violent planetary quakes become more intense and frequent as Melt-Crest, its star, burns out and dies.

Everyone must Leave or else!

MOVE DOWN QUICKLY!

Guards pointed their powerful particle blaster guns at the prisoners and shoved them into the caverns. The K9ers didn't have a choice. They risked falling off the weak and damaged bridges that dangled over pools of thick, hot lava, or the guards would blast them into millions of tiny pieces. They feared their lives would end in horrible dungeons.
